A Boy and a Ship

The sinking of the Edmund Fitzgerald last Nov. 10, after only 17 years afloat, reminded me it was about time for my youngest child to graduate from high school.

If that sounds confusing, be patient. This is somewhat of a ghost story, and such stories must be told slowly to retain the spookiness.

The Edmund Fitzgerald was launched May 31, 1958. At the time it was the largest ore carrier on the Great Lakes. A big boat.

On that same day, a big boy was born to my wife. We named him Edmund Fitzgerald.

It was a coincidence. When we named our Edmund, my wife and I didn't know a thing about the boat. We didn't realize there had been a twin birth until we saw the news on TV that birthday evening. The newscaster said the Edmund Fitzgerald had been launched sideways.

"So was ours," my wife groaned.

Naturally, our family followed the wake of Ed the boat closely through the years. One day we drove to Toledo where the vessel was docked. Our Edmund was five years old by then and a big ham, eager to pose for all sorts of goofy pictures with his namesake. He even came through with one of his few bright sayings.

"If this boat ever sinks," he said, "I hope I'm not taking a bath at the same time."

Another memory remains vivid. The huge Fitz clan gathered one evening for a dinner at a restaurant on the bank of the St. Clair River, north of Detroit. It was our Edmund's 10th birthday. There was a grand view of the water, and an ore carrier could be seen approaching from the south.

"Wouldn't it be great if that were the Edmund Fitzgerald?" someone remarked.

It was, or I wouldn't be telling you about it. There was much exclaiming and merriment as "our boat" passed by almost close enough to touch. From the noise we created, the other people in the restaurant thought the giant carrier was coming through the window.

Everyone thought the boat's appearance at the particular time was an amazing coincidence – until I explained that I had chartered the vessel to sail by on Eddie's birthday.

My family was properly impressed, as was the entire restaurant when I made the announcement while standing on the bar. Easily it was the most glorious lie I ever told.

Those fun times were remembered with a bitter poignancy when our family heard that the Edmund Fitzgerald had sunk in Lake superior, in a November storm, with the entire crew lost.

We noted that our Edmund had not been taking a bath at the time, and there were some lame chuckles. And then some real tears.

I know I cried that day for more than a ship lost at sea. I also cried at the reminder that life is uncertain and full of ugly shocks – for big boats and for little boys.

The boy is no longer so little. Last week he got his high school diploma. And next month he will signal his entrance into the adult world by putting a pack on his back and beginning an open-end hike scheduled to take him down some wilderness trail in Oregon and back home again, someday, God help us all.

Too many fathers quit kissing their sons once they are out of diapers. It is acceptable for mothers to weep late at night and wonder aloud about the terrible things that might happen to their little boys "out there." But fathers are supposed to make jokes.

Eddie has been practicing for the big hike by carrying his pack around the block 30 times every evening. I told him this was the same as practicing going to the dentist.

But fathers also have their late-night moments, when they fret about the future and ponder what can happen to the bravest ships at sea. I love him, too, and I should tell him so more often.

Edmund Fitzgerald the boy, born on launching day, didn't go down the bathtub drain on Nov. 10 when Edmund Fitzgerald the boat sank, much too young.

But spookiness lingers and twitches. Nov. 10 is my father's birthday. His name was also Edmund Fitzgerald.

Meet Charlevoix

Susi Reis

Susi Reis of Reis Gallery is chairman of this year's annual Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair, which will be held Saturday, August 14. Here she tells the Courier about the history of the Fair, its purpose and how it operates.

COURIER: What is the purpose of the Art Fair?

REIS: It was originally started to bring art into the area. We had no galleries here then. Another purpose was to provide an outlet for artists to show and sell their works.

COURIER: When was the first Art Fair?

REIS: In 1958, this is our 18th annual showing.

COURIER: What kinds of work are accepted for the Fair?

REIS: Work in all media. For instance, this year we will have showings of 16 jewelers, one from the Virgin Islands. We will also have some showings of computer art, a new technique. And of course there will be the traditional works in water color, oil, pen and ink, ceramics, etc.

COURIER: How do artists find out about the Fair?

REIS: We send invitations to a good many, and everyone who inquires about the show through the Chamber of Commerce or a committee member is sent information. Everyone is welcome but they must go through the jury.

COURIER: How are the artists and their works selected for inclusion in the Fair?

REIS: It is a juried show and a committee of about ten persons judge the entries. This year we had about 400 entries. We selected 160 exhibitors who will use 175 to 180 spaces.

COURIER: Are the judges all artists?

REIS: No, they are mostly persons who are knowledgeable about art and who have interest in it.

REIS: Definitely yes. Each year it is better and most of it is of gallery quality.

REIS: Two years ago, sales for the day were about $70,000. Last year, probably because of the economy, sales were down to approximately $55,000.

COURIER: Do artists come from great distances to show their works?

REIS: Yes, this year we will have artists from all over the United States. Many of them spend at least a week in Charlevoix and at least one couple, Bill and Bonnie Staffel, decided to move up here after coming for our first Art Fair. The Fair also brought Russell and Sue Bolt and Todd Warner as permanent residents.

COURIER: Besides yourself, who is on the committee to run this year's Fair?

REIS: Virginia Olsen, Edith Gilbert, Sally McNamara, Carolyn Rader, Peg Driggett, Marge Martin, Fran Martin, Connie Pointner, Marie Osterberg, Jacquie Merta and Diane Pace. In this connection, it should be noted that Virginia Olsen, Edith Gilbert and Carolyn Rader have worked on the committee since the very first Fair.

COURIER: Are you going to have a special exhibit this year?

REIS: Yes. We have requested a major piece of work from the Detroit Museum of Art, something by a well-known American artist to commemorate the Bicentennial. The curators will select it.

REIS: Last year we awarded two scholarships, to Dan Tollas and Laurie Bolt. We usually turn some money over to the Chamber of Commerce, and this year, if we have any left over, we want to give some to the schools to help with their art programs.

COURIER: What do you do if it rains on the day of the Fair?

REIS: We will hold it in the Elementary School. However, we have not been rained out in our 18 years.

COURIER: Tell us about the show you are having at your gallery July 3.

REIS: We will display works of the Staffels, the Bolts and Todd Warner that day. Everyone is invited to attend.

COURIER: When did you open your gallery?

REIS: Last fall. We represent 50 artists from Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin and Corfu, Greece and Kenya, among other places.

COURIER: What is your background in art?

REIS: I am a graduate of the University of Cincinnati with a Bachelor of Science degree in Fine Arts and a Bachelor of Science degree in Education. I taught in the Princeton school system in Cincinnati for four years. My favorite art medium is graphics.

State Historical Society Holds Contest

A contest to find the oldest business in Michigan is being sponsored by the Historical Society of Michigan.

According to Frank C. Wilhelme, director of the state historical society, the contest is being conducted to encourage Michigan communities to become more aware of their business and industrial history.

"We hope that this contest will also increase the interest in preserving important commercial and industrial buildings throughout the state," Wilhelme said. "These structures serve as significant visual links with our past."

Winners will be named in three contest categories:

1. Oldest continuously operating business in original building.
2. Oldest continuously operating business on original site but not in original building.
3. Oldest continuously operating business relocated from original building and site.

Winners in each category will receive framed certificates from the Historical Society of Michigan and honorary corporate memberships in the society.

In addition, the business with the oldest overall founding date will be presented with a framed pen and ink drawing of its first business office.

All businesses entering the contest that were founded at least 100 years ago will receive certificates recognizing them as centennial businesses.

The State Library, the State Archives, and the State Historical Preservation Officer will receive a list of all businesses that entered the contest and their founding dates. This information will be used by researchers studying Michigan's early commercial and industrial history.

Entries should include: (1) Name of business, address and zip code, (2) Date business was founded, (3) Zerox copy or description of documentation to verify founding date, (4) Contest category, and (5) Name and address of person submitting entry.

All entries should be mailed to the Historical Society of Michigan, 2117 Washtenaw Avenue, Ann Arbor, Michigan, 48104 and must be postmarked no later than August 15.

To Show Confidence

Wellman Back In The Air!

Gordon Wellman, who was slightly injured a week ago Saturday when the McPhillips Flying Service plane in which he was returning from Beaver Island crashed approaching the Charlevoix Airport, made another trip to the island with McPhillips last Thursday to show his confidence in the flying service and its pilots.

"I just want everybody to know that despite the accident I am willing to fly with them any time," Wellman said about his return trip.

"I have complete confidence in Joe and Forbes.

"Too many people have been making comments about what they would and wouldn't do following the crash."

Wellman, president of the Charlevoix State Bank, and Orville Hicks, vice-president of the bank, were passengers in a plane piloted by Forbes Tompkins when the engine quit near the Medusa Cement plant. Tompkins guided the plane to a nearby service road, where he landed, but the inpact spun the plane to the left and flipped it upside down.

No one was seriously injured.

Olivet Grad To Conduct City Band

Bruce Bender of Escanaba, a recent graduate of Olivet College, will be the director of the Charlevoix City Band this summer in the absence of Gary L. Stutzman who will be attending the summer session at Northern Michigan University.

The Charlevoix City Band is presently composed of 40 adults and outstanding high school musicians in preparation for its concert season scheduled to begin in East Park at 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 30. Concerts will be presented weekly in East Park throughout the summer through Aug. 16. The band has been in rehearsal for the past three weeks.

In announcing the summer plans for the City Band, Bender said there were still openings for other interested adults and high school musicians in the area. The band rehearses at the high school band room at 7:30 p.m. every Monday for anyone interested in joining the group.

Gail Potter, Eric Cherry Wed

The Community Reformed Church was the scene recently of the wedding of Gail L. Potter ond Eric L. Cherry.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Cherry of Charlotte.

Edword Wurner officiated at the double ring service that was written by the bridal couple on June 11. Arrangements of carnations, straw flowers and greens and lighted tapers formed a setting for the service attended by 275 guests. Marvin Hollenbeck, organist and pianist, accompanied Bonnie Cherry who sang "Charity" and Matthew Kreh who sang "Treasures". The Common Brothers band sang "The Lord's Prayer. The bridegroom then sang a song he had composed for the bride. The congregation, with everyone holding a lighted candle, then sang "They will know we are Christians by our Love."

As the bride was given in marriage by her parents, the couple presented each mother with a white rose.

The bride chose a princess style full akirted gown fashioned with a bodice of re-embroidered Cluny lace, portrait neckline, bishop sleeves, hemline flounce and chapel train. A Juliet cap secured her fingertip veil. She carried red roses. She wore a small gold cross, a gift of the bridegroom.

A reception followed at the Charlevoix Elementary School dining hall. Assisting were Linda Cherry and Betty Potter who served the cake and Janet Hansen and Sharon Elzinga who served the punch.

After a wedding trip to an undisclosed destination, which included some back-packing, the couple will be at home on Resort Pike, Petoskey.

Fashioned with a high, slit neckline and full bishop sleeves, the gown featured a circular skirt that terminated in a chopel length train. Re-embroidered lace accented the bodice, sleeves and hemline of the gown. A full length veil fell from a picture hat trimmed with lace and ribbons. June is dairy month and one dairy product that enjoys notice every month of the year is cottage cheese.

Cottage cheese is a favorite food, especially for homemakers who are conscious of their diet and food budget. Made from the drained and washed curd of skim milk, cottage cheese is high in food value, convenient to use and taste appealing.

Cottage cheese is relatively low in calories and cost when you consider the protein, calcium, riboflavin and phosphorus it delivers. Don't mislead yourself into thinking it's almost calorie free, however, as some dieters do.

One-half cup of plain cottage cheese has about 110 calories, approximately the same number as a cup of cream of mushroom soup or a baked potato. Creamed cottage cheese has a higher calorie tally – about 120 calories per half cup.

When you shop the dairy counter, you'll find cottage cheese in at least two styles (the afore-mentioned creamed and uncreamed), two curd sizes and a variety of container sizes.

Creamed cottage cheese has sweet, fresh cream added for additional moisture and flavor. Besides having slightly more calories, creamed cottage cheese usually costs more per given weight than the uncreamed.

Plain, uncreamed or dry cottage cheese has, as the name implies, no cream added. This type is often referred to as country-style or old-fashioned cottage cheese.

When buying cottage cheese, the same advice holds true as for other foods–read the label. It will tell you the size of the curd, the style, the weight and whether other ingredients have been added.

Buy only the amount of cottage cheese that you can use in two or three days. It will keep longer in the refrigerator and be okay to eat, but it loses some of its delicate flavor and will even become dry and crumbly when kept too long. At that point, however, most of us would not like it.

Like all other dairy products, cottage cheese requires storage that is cold, clean and covered if optimum quality is to be maintained. Refrigerate it immediately and keep it tightly covered as it easily absorbs odors and flavors from other foods.

A little mistreatment here, a little more there, all add up. It's best to dish up the amount that will be used and return the carton to the refrigerator immediately.

Camp McSauba Has Openings

Openings are still available for Camp McSauba, a day camp for boys and girls under the sponsorship of the Charlevoix City Recreation program, Dwight Boss, recreation director, has announced.

The day camp is for boys and girls six through 12 years. It is planned to give the youngsters a wide range of camping experience including swimming, hiking, nature study, arts and crafts, camping skills, games, singing and other fun events Boss said.

Grab Bag of Activities Highlights July 4

By FRAN MARTIN

Parades, picnics and polka-fests, the coronation of a queen, a horseshoe pitching contest and an auction, religious services, band concerts, and games, the dedication of a State Historic Site, kids parades and fireworks...all typically American events will mark the Bicentennial observance in Charlevoix County this weekend.

Horton Bay

The community of Hortons Bay, located on the north shore of Lake Charlevoix in the very heart of Hemingway country, will kick off the observance Saturday with the community's bicentennial parade followed by the dedication of the Hortons Bay area as a State Historic Site. A community picnic under the trees will conclude the observance.

CHARLEVOIX

In Charlevoix, a community picnic at Depot Beach sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will be a highlight of the July Fourth observance. Beginning at noon, hamburgers and hotdogs will be offered for sale as well as a variety of beverages. Those planning to attend are asked to bring a dish to pass, anything else they might want for their picnic lunch and their own table service. The event will begin at noon and continue throughout the afternoon.

There will be games for the kids, music by a local band and other fun events for the enjoyment of those who attend.

At 5:00 p.m., at the ringing of the church bells, there will be a worship service at the First Congregational Church under the sponsorship of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

The service will be patterned after similar services of the Revolutionary era with Dan Seeley of Boyne City "lining out" the hymns for the congregation, a sermon by the Rev. Albert Mansen of the Community Reformed Church, the liturgy by the host minister, the Rev. Raymond Giffin, and the Scripture reading by the Rev. Austin Regier of the United Methodist church. The Rev. Hewitt V. Johnston of Christ Episcopal Church, did the research for the service.

For those interested in softball, there will be a 12-team double elimination tournament sponsored by the Charlevoix 'Slo-Pitch League from Friday night through Monday afternoon. The tournament, to be held at the City Softball field on Carpenter ave., will feature 12 outstanding state teams.

Bay Shore

The Community of Bay Shore is planning its fifth annual Fourth of July parade and celebration that will feature the selection and coronation of a "Sweetheart of Bay Shore".

The parade featuring floats, kids on bicycles and people, led by Darrell Somerville with his bagpipes, will come down Townline Road to the Nathaniel Smith residence where the judging will be held and prizes awarded.

Sandwiched among the events will be the coronation of the Sweetheart of Bay Shore to be chosen from among the following candidates: Camille Deschermeier, Liz Keller Heath, Lori Kerner, Leslie Bice, Darlene Smalley, Mary Wiklanski, Donna Marshall, Jan Simons, Peach Deschermeier, Carol White, Paula Moats, Janet Cole, Terri Buinsa, Laura Deschermeier, Debbie Marshall and Chris White. Penny ballots may be cast at McArt's General Store by the residents of the community.

After the races for the kids, a horseshoe pitching contest, an egg toss and a baseball game for the adults, the event will be climaxed by a picnic with everyone bringing a dish to pass with a roast pig as the piece de'resistance.

Planning the community celebration are Mrs. Dan Simons, Mrs. Ed Balasa, Mrs. Jake Deschermeier, Sr., Mrs. Darrell Somerville, Mrs. Thomas Passehl, Christine Simons, Mrs. Jack VanHenst and Mrs. Timothy McArt.

EAST JORDAN

A children's scooter race on Friday will usher in observance at East Jordan being planned by the Chamber of Commerce.

On Friday evening the Jordan Valley Lions Club will open its Polka-fest that will continue Saturday and Sunday evenings in a tent on the tennis courts and featuring a host of polka bands throughout the weekend.

There'll be a parade through the business district at 1 p.m. Saturday featuring floats and bands; the Rotary Club chicken dinner beginning at 11 a.m., a muzzle-loading demonstration and shoot, water skiing exhibitions and an auction at the Snowmobile Club.

On Sunday there will be a children's parade at 10 a.m., games, canoe races, an East Jordan Museum at Elm Point from 1:00 until 4:00 p.m., a hymn sing at 7 p.m. followed by a fireworks display at the waterfront at approximately 10:30 p.m. July 4.

BOYNE CITY

Memorial Park in Boyne City will be the site of the majority of the activities planned by the Chamber of Commerce.

The parade led by the band and featuring floats and people will go through the business district at 1 p.m. Sunday and end up in the park where judging of bicentennial costumes and beards will be held.

Throughout the day there will be such things as the Rotary Club barbecue from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.; an art show with artisans at work; a concert bay the Boyne City high school band; a Little League bake sale; a program by the Barbershoppers at 6:30 p.m.; an ice cream social at 6 p.m; other music throughout the afternoon and evening; an Ecumenical worship service at the waterfront at 9 p.m., all climaxed with a fireworks display over the water as darkness falls. The Boyne City Volunteer Fire Department will conduct the fireworks display.

Ecumenical Church Service Part of Charlevoix Celebration

As church bells rang out proclaiming Independence Day on July 4, 1778, so they will ring on July 4, 1976, calling the resident of the Charlevoix area to a religious celebration of our freedom and independence, the Rev. Raymond Giffin, pastor of the First Congregational Church, has announced.

The service is sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

Insofar as possible, the service will be held at the Congregational Church, scheduled for 5:00 p.m. on Sunday, July 4, will simulate the manner most Protestants worshiped 200 years ago. However, it is doubtful if the sermon will be as long as an hour, much less two as they sometimes were in those days.

Since no organs were used in those times, the hymns will be "lined out", as they were then, by a leader singing each line, followed by the congregation.

There also were no choirs in most of the churches of the Revolutionary era so singers from the Community Choir, recruited by Mrs. Robert Tollas, will be dispersed in the congregation to help with the hymns.

The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Albert F. Mansen of the Community Reformed Church, who will retire in July; the liturgist will be the Rev. Mr. Giffin, host pastor, and the Scripture will be read by the Rev. Austin Regier of the United Methodist church.

Research and preparation of the service was done by the Rev. Hewitt V. Johnston of Christ Episcopal Church.

"Lining out" the hymns will be by Dan Seeley of Boyne City.

"Come to the church at the ringing of the bells," is the invitation extended to residents of the Charlevoix area.

City Council Accepts Wexstaff Resignation

Charlevoix City Council voted 5-1 to accept the resignation of Acting City Administrator Robert C. Wexstaff Monday night.

Wexstaff submitted his resignation some 15 months ago saying that he would serve until the city "could obtain an orderly transfer of office", said Mayor Edward P. Hansen.

Council accepted the administrator's resignation on that basis, and Wexstaff will continue to fill his city duties "at the Council's pleasure."

The resignation was submitted originally because of a political situation existing around March of 1975, during the time Mayor Hansen was conducting a write-in campaign for re-election.

Wexstaff's appointive position was having "political impact" at that time, and his resignation was submitted because of that, Mayor Hansen said.

His resignation was accepted Monday because a number of council members are "unhappy with the situation, and feel we might do better," Hansen said.

Wexstaff said that he felt it would not be productive for him to comment about the resignation when asked to do so in a telephone interview Tuesday morning.

"Bob knew this was coming," the Mayor said, "that's the way the cards lay."

Wexstaff has been with the city since October of 1972. He was appointing Acting City Administrator a year later, and has held that position since.

Council's action comes during a time of the year when appointments are normally reviewed, said Mayor Hansen.

Members of the committee which considered the action in meeting last week had prepared a formal statement but council was unable to reach a consensus on its content.

Albion Man Captures Area Golf Classic

Mike Hurley of Albion came out of a field of 360 entries to capture the 65th Michigan Amateur Golf Championship at the Belvedere Golf Club here Saturday afternoon.

Hurley, a 22-year-old Western Michigan senior, defeated Rick Vershore of Pontiac, 1-up with a two under par 70 to Vershore's 71 to succeed Dan Pohl of Mt. Pleasant, 1975 Michigan Amateur title holder.

Pohl had been ousted from the tournament by Jack VanEss of Grand Rapids on the first day of match play 2 and 1.

On winning the title the first year he had entered the Michigan Amateur Hurley took the 13th and 14th holes to break a string of seven straight holes the pair had halved.

Hurley carded a 70, two under par for the Belvedere Course. The round included five birdies and three bogeys. Vershore had five birdies but four bogeys with the latter making the one-point difference for the match and the title.

Hurley qualified for the finals with a 1-up comeback win over Bob Proben of Detroit. Vershore scored a 3-2 decision over Bert Hogg of Flint in the semi-finals.

It was a close one all the way during the three days of match play in what is said to be one of the best played Michigan Amateurs in recent years.

Hurley won over Keith Mohan of Grand Blanc and Charlevoix 1-up and went out to defeat Proben. Proben had defeated Barry DeLapp of Farmington 3-2 in quarterfinal play.

On his way to the finals Vershore had defeated Flint's Bert Hogg, a native Scot., after the latter had eliminated Bob Mase of East Lansing 3 and 2. Vershore downed Bob Przybylek, 2 and 2.

Tom Proben, also of Detroit, was medalist for the tournament after posting a 139 but was eliminated in his first match. Tom Mase of East Lansing had finished behind Proben with a 140 after two days of play.

For Administration

School Board Approves Salaries

The Charlevoix Board of Education, at its regular meeting held Monday, approved administrators salaries and early graduations for three members of the class of 1977, made several coaching assignments and made a decision regarding a proposed bond issue among other items on the agenda.

Two year contracts were approved by a 4-3 vote for the following administrators: Supt. James A. McKimmy who was awarded an annual salary of $25,545; Vane H. Smith, high school principal, $22,007; Roy Fortin, assistant high school principal, $18,375; Vincent Chew, Middle School Principal, and Ralph Raymer, Elementary School Principal, $19,400 each.

In bringing the proposed increase to a vote, Novak, president of the board, said he would vote against the proposed increase because he does not approve of two year contracts. Brown, after the meeting, said people have voiced to him that teachers and administrators were making too much. He added that he would like to see a year when there were no increases. Cook said he felt the increases should have been held to six percent. The increases that were approved ranged from 5.9 to 8.1 percent.

It was explained that in establishing the amount of the increases, the amount of time worked, responsibility, degree status and work experience as well as comparison with comparable positions in the area were considered.

A salary increase for Vincent Olach, business manager, to $14,402 was approved by a vote of 6-1 with Novak voting nay.

Approval was also given salaries for secretaries, bookkeepers, library personnel and teachers aides. The salaries represented a 5.5 percent increase.

Approval was given to Terri Stapleton to attend the Petoskey Beauty Academy while attending the Charlevoix High School and to Patricia Egler and Mary Wolf to combine their studies at the high school with those at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey.

The board voted to submit to the voters later this year or early in 1977 proposals for additions and renovations of the schools. Three suggestions were made with No. 1 including Projects I, II and III. Project I was explained as the building porgram at the high school; Project II, the Middle School and Project III, a proposed auditorium.

Proposal I includes all three projects; Proposal II, Projects I and II with an auditorium as an alternate choice and Proposal III, a choice of I, II or III.

When the issue came to a vote, Novak who said he preferred Proposal II, Cook who said he would like all three but would go for II, Brown and Boss who favored II and Elzinga who favored all three voted for Proposal II. Weiland voted nay on Proposal II because she favored all three stating she felt the community needed an auditorium. Martin who favored Proposal III voted nay because he felt that one of the three issues would gain approval if they were placed on the ballot in this manner.

The chief concerns of all are increased crowding at the high school and the obsolescense of the Middle School.

The proposal removal of a gate pillar on school property came in for a lengthy discussion before James Mielke's request to

Satisfactory Condition Reported for Youth

The condition of Raymond D. Jones, 25, who is a patient at University Hospital in Ann Arbor where he was taken Sunday for treatment of a severe head injury is said to be satisfactory by his mother, Mrs. Max Selfridge.

Jones was injured Saturday afternoon when he fell from a 1969 Pontiac convertible while passenger in a car driven by his cousin, Edward Connaghan, 24, of St. James. The accident occurred on East Side Drive on Beaver Island approximately 10 miles south of St. James. According to Deputy William Welke who investigated, Jones was among those riding on the top that had been lowered over the rear seat. Welke said the car was traveling 25 or 30 miles an hour at the time.

Jones was taken to the Medical Center at St. James and given medical treatment by Dr. Joseph Christie before being flown to Charlevoix via Emergency Evacuation plane for admittance to the Charlevoix Area Hospital. On Sunday he was taken by ambulance plane from Traverse City to Ann Arbor for treatment. He was accompanied by his wife, the former Georgia Light.

Mrs. Selfridge and her entire family including the Raymond Joneses had gone to Beaver Island to attend a Connaghan family reunion when the accident happened.

Bridge Traffic

When we came to town today we had to wait 15 minutes for bridge traffic to move after the bridge was open. This was because there's only one way traffic across the bridge. How come this work has to be done during the summer?

Downtown Noise

Why is it that every summer downtown Charlevoix has to be subjected to endless noise?

Last year it was the pounding of the jack-hammer in the channel. This year it is noise and dust from bridge and street repairs.

There certainly was some time before the summer season began to do this work. The State Highway Department apparently thinks they can get away with anything in Charlevoix.

Bob Miles Picture Collection Has A Lot of History Behind It

With distribution of "Bob Miles' Charlevoix" beginning this week, he tells here how he started his collection and thanks many of the people who contributed to it.

By BOB MILES

The collection started in 1926 when Mr. Frank Hines, knowing that my family came to Charlevoix on the HUM, gave me a picture of the PILGRIM entering Lake Charlevoix on her way to East Jordan. Renamed the HUM, the ship ran between East Jordan and Charlevoix until about 1915.

Upon looking back, it was possibly the possession of this one picture, plus my association with Mr. Hines, that aroused in me an interest in the early days of Charlevoix. For over forty years Mr. Hines owned a drug store in the old Carpenter Building, which was located on the site of the present Chamber of Commerce building. When he sold out to Mr. F. J. Fessenden in 1920 it was with the stipulation that he could work in the store as a pharmacist during the summer months for as long as he wished.

It was my good fortune to be employed with Mr. Hines during the Roaring Twenties. Because of the night life of that time, due mostly to prohibition and the gambling establishments, the store stayed open until about one o'clock in the morning. During the late evening the summer people, young and old, would drop in at the fountain for a soda or a JEFF (concocted by Jeff Silberman) before retiring for the night.

Since there was usually nothing much to do on the drug side during these late hours. Mr. Hines and I talked a lot, especially Mr. Hines. He was loaded with the lore of the early days and could make past events come alive with his keen memory and sharp wit.

It was not until late in the Thirties that my collection was enlarged to two pictures, the addition being a lithograph of an airview drawing of Charlevoix which I bought from Mr. Ed Smith, owner of a furniture store located a few doors sooth of the bridge.

Shortly before World War II I obtained a copy of the Charlevoix Journal, Published by Charles Strang, son of King Strang, and dated June 23, 1887, which gave a complete account of the burning of the CHAMPLAIN off Fisherman's Island on June 18, 1887, plus 2 pictures of the still burning CHAMPLAIN tied up at the south pier.

This windfall started what was to become one of the prized accounts of the collection and which was not completed until about 25 years later when the mystery of the 15 markers south of the cemetery was cleared up by Mr. Frank Sears, apparently the only living soul who knew their history, and that only because his father was involved in putting them there in the first place. How close the markers came to being a puzzle for future generations to ponder over, or to forget.

Comparatively few pictures were added to the collection until 1957, said to be Charlevoix's Centennial year, but never officially proclaimed or observed as such. During the Forties I was becoming more and more aware of the fact that many of the old pictures of the early days were disappearing at an alarming rate, either through fire, people moving away with them or throwing them out with the garbage. I was possessed by a strong feeling that our heritage was being

New Runway Scheduled For Construction at BI

Work is scheduled to begin July 19 at the Beaver Island airport where a 3,000 ft. runway will be constructed and other improvements made, according to John Gillispie, St. James township supervisor.

The Huron Sod Farms of Romulus was the successful bidder on the project. The company's bid was for $141,000 and was the lowest of three received, Gillispie said. A Grand Rapids firm bid $160,000 and Hodgkiss & Douma of Petoskey $154,000.

The project, to be financed on a matching fund basis by the two townships, Peaine and St. James, which own the airport, and the Michigan Aeronautics Commission, calls for a paved 3,000 ft. East-west runway. The new runway will be 50 feet in width and will replace two turf runways that crisscross the airport and have been in use since the mid-1930's.

The airport is located in Peaine township.

Negotiations Hold Up Development Of Evacuation Plans at Big Rock

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Plans for handling a nuclear accident at Charlevoix's Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant, or any of Michigan's nuclear utility plants, cannot be developed until negotiations are completed between the State Department of Public Health and the federal government's Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), according to Donald Van Farowe, of the Health Department's Radiological Health Division.

Van Farowe and his colleague, Joseph M. Hennigan, discussed this void and other aspects of radiation and public health last Thursday at a meeting sponsored by Alice Tunnison, Charlevoix County Civil Defense Coordinator.

Van Farowe and Hennigan focused on the role of the State Department of Public Health in the event of a nuclear accident. They fielded questions, from an audience of some 15 citizens, including two Emmet County Commissioners, dealing with the probability of such an accident and the amount of radiation exposure likely in the case of such an accident.

Health physicist from Consumers Power Company, Roger Sinderman, and Big Rock's Health Physicist, Charles Axtell, spoke for the utility, answering specific questions about the Big Rock plant.

A jurisdictional debate is hanging up progress in establishing the emergency plans, according to Van Farowe. The Atomic Energy Act of 1954 gave the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) control over the peace-time uses of nuclear material, as in nuclear power plants. (The NRC has taken over these activities since the demise of the AEC).

Since the law denies states the right to regulate nuclear power plants, the NRC says that the Michigan State Department of Health cannot ask utility companies to provide specific information, even though it would enable the Health Department to promulgate the rules and plans for the unlikely event of a nuclear accident, according to Van Farowe.

This legal-jurisdictional question is now being negotiated between state and federal governments, the health official explained. While he knew of no time table for negotiation, nor the development of the emergency plan, he did indicate that the state would take the issue to court if necessary.

Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant has been operating since 1958, and Van Farowe said he was sure that in the event of an emergency the utility had plans for dealing with public health problems from exposure to radiation, and that the State Police and local officials would assist.

"The Michigan State Police and the Health Department have a joint responsibility for coordination of local service for emergencies," Van Farowe explained.

Under a Health Department plan the function of such agencies as the State Police would be detailed.

All this is needed because the federal government, which under the law regulates the facilities, does not have the local resources to handle an emergency, and a "private corporation (Consumers Power) cannot tell local government agencies, such as police, what to do."

The Public Health representatives were quick to explain that they were not considering the likelihood of a nuclear explosion, which they say cannot happen.

The worst type of nuclear accident, which could release radioactive materials from the Big Rock plant, would be a major "melt-down", if and when all the cooling and backup systems failed.

Sinderman said, "There are actually three backup systems. If they all failed the worst possible radiation leak would be one half percent per day."

He went on to say that under current Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) guidelines, no evacuation of people would be necessary in the case of the worst possible accident at Big Rock.

It was later pointed out that other scientists disagreed with the conclusion that no evacuation would be necessary and Sinderman acknowledged that those scientists used a lower acceptable radiation exposure to arrive at their conclusions.

The EPA's determination of what amount of radiation leakage requires an evacuation of surrounding population took into consideration the risks involved if all these people had to drive away in automobiles. They feel the driving risk is greater.

Pressed to explain what it meant if in the case of a major accident Big Rock leaked one half percent per day, Sinderman and the Health Department officials concurred that it was less than the radioactivity an individual would experience from an X-ray.

The maximum exposure to radioactivity in the case of the most drastic accident would be to a person immediately at the property line of the Big Rock facility. That individual would have a statistical probability of contracting cancer of one in one million, according to the Consumer's spokesman.

The Health Department representatives were asked why, if Big Rock has been operating since 1958, it hasn't settled the question of its right to ask the facility to provide information necessary for making evacuation decisions and emergency plans.

The Health Department officials responded that the possibility of public exposure to radiation from a nuclear power plant accident is so low that it doesn't have the highest priorities in the department.

They restated that they are far more concerned with regulating X-ray exposures for instance, which are more significant and potentially dangerous than a melt down at Big Rock.

Despite what the health department spokesman called "voids" in the planning situations, if there were an accident there is some planning and the State Police have specialists at all posts ready to deal with radiation hazards.

Hennigan explained that the health department has trained State Police individuals to deal with radiation, not only at the plants in case of accidents, but also in cases of accidents during transportation of fuel or radioactive wastes.

A voluntary system of notification of the State Police of routes and other details is followed whenever radioactive wastes are transported from Big Rock.

Other questions and answers dealt with daily radiation eminating from Big Rock, which the health department representatives and utility representatives pointed out was minimal, "within the requirements of the NRC," and the constant monitoring of city water wells, to ensure no excess radiation makes its way into Charlevoix's drinking water supply.

DONALD VAN FAROWE (sitting) of the State Department of Health and Roger Sinderman, health physicist from Consumer's Power Company, were part of a panel discussing nuclear plant safety.

18 Board Members Elected to Run Center

With the election of 18 members of the First Congregational Church to the membership of the corporation, the Organization to be known as the Charles Allen Ransom Counseling Center, Inc., was officially launched recently.

Until now, the proposed center to be dedicated to helping others has been in the "talking stage" as interested persons consulted with the family of the late "Chip" Ransom in an effort to determine the best route to travel in establishing a memorial to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Ransom.

Nine members from the community at large are now being sought out to complete the 27-member corporation board.

July 6 has been set as the target date for a meeting of the entire group to be held at the First Congregational Church at 8 p.m.

Tentative plans call for a review of the purpose and goals of the Counseling Center, a discussion of the by-laws that have been drawn up and possibly the election of a Board of Directors which will serve as the governing body of the corporation.

Named as members of the corporation recently were Ronald Moore, Mrs. Raymond Giffin, David Fowler, Mrs. John Dixon, E.D. Hawley and a member of the Ransom family who will serve three year terms; Mrs. Robert Tollas, Mrs. Harold E. Kohn, Thomas Hanna, Dr. Robert G. Martin, Glenn Kenney and Mrs. Donald Smith, two years terms and Mrs. Eugene Bergmann, Gerald Staublin, Robert Burns, Richard Krueger, Mrs. Charles Berg and Delbert R. Terrill, one year terms.

The Counseling Center is being established to provide counseling services to troubled persons with the emphasis to be on the family unit; to provide educational programs with the aim of strengthening marital and family relationships and to seek to reflect the love of God through a Christian approach to counseling.

The project will be underwritten by Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Ransom.

Helicopter Helps Sheriff Apprehend Three Escapees

A dash for freedom made by three escapees from the Charlevoix county jail Friday afternoon took them less than half a mile before they were spotted from a helicopter and returned to their cells...all in a period of less than 45 minutes according to Sheriff Philo E. Sumner.

The trio, all awaiting appearances to Circuit Court, went over the 12-foot security fence that surrounds the exercise area at the jail and disappeared in the tall grass and weeds during a four minute period at 2:55 p.m. Friday. Ten minutes after their escape was discovered, an alert teenager who recognized the prison uniforms as they crossed Carpenter ave. notified the Sheriff's Department of their location at that time.

Sheriff's deputies and City Police on foot and Region X detectives from Charlevoix and Emmet counties and Michigan State Police of the Petoskey post cruised the area in search of the three men. Meanwhile, Sheriff Sumner, sighting a helicopter landing at the airport, enlisted the aid of the pilot and owner, Michael Pung of Alma and Charlevoix, after relating his story. After several trips over the acres of tall grass and weeds, some as high as three feet, the three escapees were located. The helicopter landed and Sheriff Sumner escorted the three to their cells, all in less than 45 minutes.

All three were being held at the county jail while awaiting appearances in Ciruit Court here. They are Dennis D. Day, 19, Boyne City, held on a forgery charge, Brian Starback, 18, Boyne City, larceny from a person and Thomas Lang, 17, East Jordan, breaking and entering.

Apparently the three were able to attach a wire high on the security fence which enabled them to crawl over the fence, drop to the ground and crawl away in the grass and weeds, a sheriff's deputy said.

They were to be charged with escaping from jail in warrants being issued Monday.

Early Morning Fire Destroys Co-op

A Charlevoix landmark, the Charlevoix Co-operative grain elevator and feed mill and an adjacent warehouse, were destroyed by fire of an unknown origin early Friday morning.

The grain elevator and feed mill, located next to the former C & O railroad tracks at the corner of Ferry ave. and Stover Road, was probably the oldest of the city's industrial buildings still in use, according to Fred Willis, former manager, who said the structure dates back to before 1912. It was re-enforced wood structure more than three stories in height with sheet metal exterior covering.

The concrete warehouse to the north of the original structure and adjacent to the city's former utility plant was built more recently.

Assistant Fire Chief Ben Gill said the fire apparently started in the warehouse section because the roof of this structure was about to cave in when the Charlevoix Volunteer Fire Department arrived on the scene. The fire had already spread to the elevator and mill when the department arrived, he said.

The fire was reported a few minutes before 3:00 a.m. by a woman who is believed to have sighted it from a boat at the nearby Irish Boat Works.

Clarence King, present manager of the Charlevoix Co-operative which owns the buildings, said he had no idea how the fire might have started. He said the combined structures were approximately 100 feet in length and 40 feet wide. The building was insured. He would, however, make no estimate of the loss which included machinery and supplies as well as the buildings.

Business offices of the company and saleable materials are located in buildings on the south side of Stover Road.

The fire is still under investigation.

All Charlevoix fire fighting equipments was pressed into service and water pumped from nearby Lake Charlevoix in an effort to extinguish the blaze.

A CHARLEVOIX landmark was completely destroyed by fire Friday. The Charlevoix Co-op's grain elevator and feed mill at the foot of Stover Rd. was a total loss after it was razed by a blaze of unknown origin in a predawn fire.

Downtown Appearance Deserves High Ratings-- But Windows Need Help

The appearance of Bridge-st. in downtown Charlevoix is improving every year with renewed emphasis on the landscaping of East Park and the vast sums of money local businessmen have invested in property improvements.

The "French motif" has taken hold and the appearance of the business district has changed from a hodge-podge of architectural styles and materials into something akin to a unified whole.

Much of the credit for the new look in Charlevoix should go to the Chamber of Commerce which has encouraged the construction of mansard-style roof-lines, abundant use of shingles and the installation of window fixtures to simulate the appearance of the small panes of glass used throughout Europe many years ago.

However, window displays in Charlevoix stores are still as lack-luster as they were a decade ago before most of the renovation projects started. Although there are some notable exceptions, the average shop window in Charlevoix will not stop visitors in their tracks and invite them to enter.

Some windows are simply a catalogue of all the merchandise available inside, arranged neatly but monotonously.

Other windows are so jammed with merchandise the shopper wonders if he hasn't strayed into the basement.

Still others display merchandise on lifeless mannequins that would look more at home in a mortuary than they do in a shop window. Those that move usually are suspended from the ceiling, twisting slowly in the wind like the unfortunate victims of a cow-town necktie party.

Probably worse, many displays never seem to change from season to season much less from month to month.

Of course, window decorating has become a fine art in the metropolitan areas. Large stores hire staffs of highly-skilled window dressers. Others contract the chore out to professional window decorating firms. Lavish use is made of animated figures, attractive backdrops and hand-painted signs.

Although few businesses in Charlevoix can afford the services of professional window dressers, we feel that a little more attention to window displays is called for in order to make Charlevoix a more attractive place to shop.

We suggest that the Chamber of Commerce launch a monthly contest to recognize those merchants who pay particular attention to their window displays. A committee of three townspeople could be appointed to tour the downtown section on, say, the first Saturday of every month to judge window displays. The winner would receive a little bronze plaque--much like the Garden Club award--to be displayed in his window during the month.

We also propose that downtown businessmen belonging to the Chamber establish a pool to purchase animation equipment, lighting fixtures and backdrops which could be traded among merchants as they are needed.

Perhaps the chamber could bring in a professional window dresser for a crash course on what kinds of window displays stop potential shoppers in their tracks--and generate sales.

Why not display a garment inside out for a change, just to show how well it is made?

Or have one of the clerks demonstrate the virtues of microwave ovens or Jim-Dandy blenders in the store window while a crowd gathers out-front?

Or even hire grandpa to come downtown and take a nap in one of your reclining chairs?

The possibilities are endless. (B.C.)

A Landmark Burns

More than three score years of memories went up in smoke last Friday morning with the burning of the Charlevoix Co-op grain elevator and feed mill at the foot of Stover Road.

Even old-timers are uncertain as to the age of the elevator, but Fred Willis, a veteran member of the Michigan Farm Bureau, says the building goes back at least to 1912 and is probably much older.

For many farm families, the mill was an important stop on weekly shopping and business trips to Charlevoix in horse-drawn wagons and later in Model-T pickup trucks.

Although mechanization and modern packaging of grains and other feedstuffs have altered the duties of mill workers, the good, earthy aroma of farm products lingered in the nooks and crannies of the elevator until last Friday morning.

Student Writes Bicentennial Message

The following essay on "Patriotism" appeared recently in the Charlevoix Middle School Press. It was written by eighth-grader Sue Simmerman. The Courier prints it here in commemoration of the nation's Bicentennial Independence Day.

Red, white and blue, stars and stripes, American eagles, Paul Revere, George Washington plus many others all in their last battle, their last fight for the chance of covering our walls, beds, floors and ourselves. Their pictures appear on wallpaper, bedspreads, rugs, clothing and an endless number of other things.

Many people collect the Bicentennial coins and bills. Some others (such as my mother) collect anything that's red, white, and blue, even candy wrappers in hopes that they'll get rich in the future!

Why not buy these things? We let companies get richer as we become poorer. Foreign countries even get richer – have you seen the "Made in Japan" on plate backs?

American public, unite and get smart! Celebrate our independence not by buying a lot of junk, but in all the years to come by being intelligent citizens.

Erma Bombeck

No one ever taught me about flag.

When I was five years old, I was in a dance recital. My costume was a silver leotard. Attached to it at the shoulders and wrists was a flag. During the last few bars, I spread my arms, revealing 48 stars on a field of white. The crowd went crazy cheering. I learned that a flag could make you look like you had talent.

A few years later at a baseball game in Cincinnati, two men were calling one another names that would starch your underwear. One said Ted Kluszewski hit like a girl and the other guy threatened to rearrange his nose. Just then, they hoisted the flag and both of them stood with their hats over their hearts. I learned that a flag could break up a fight.

During the second World War, my Grandma sent her son to war. I never saw her cry when he left, when he wrote, or when we talked about him, but one afternoon when she thought no one was watching, she went to the front window and put a little flag on the sill. There were flags all up and down the street in the windows. I learned that a flag could bring tears to the eyes of people who didn't usually cry.

When I was in New York once, I saw a group of demonstrators protesting the war. They lit a match to the flag. I watched in horror as the silk stripes curled in flames because I knew what was coming. Within minutes, there would be a bolt of lightning and thunder to strike them all dead. Nothing happened. The earth didn't part. The sky didn't fall. And the VFW was open regular hours. I learned that a flag could touch the ground and life could go on.

Later, I was to learn that people would make underwear out of the flag, keyrings and toilet seats. The flag was a successful commercial venture.

I would learn that you wouldn't think about the flag for a long time, then you'd see it being raised slowly over a gold medal winner at the Olympics and you'd get up out of your chair quickly and say, "Anyone want a beer while I'm up?" and go to the kitchen to hide your tears.

I'm still learning about flag. It's an enigma to me. I've known it all my life. It's so familiar, yet it occasionally touches a nerve that excites to the point where I square my shoulders and say to a perfect stranger at the UN, "See that one with the red and white stripes and the blue stars? That's my country."

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

Of the myriads of Bicentennial projects shaping up across the country, I have three favorites:

The "Tall Ships" sailing race from Europe to the United States, the Viking I voyage to Planet Mars and Karl Thomas' balloon flight from the United States to Europe.

The sailing race, in a sense, is a look backward since it was by sail that many of our forebears reached these lonesome shores. It is fitting that we pay homage to the first Americans in this Bicentennial year.

The Viking I flight is a look forward, a step in our on-going exploration of outer space. Although we don't admit it publicly, man is actually searching for a new home in space — one we can flee to after we have overpopulated and befouled Mother Earth.

The balloon flight is exciting because it represents the challenge of man against the elements in its most basic form. Somehow it exemplifies the spirit of individualism that not only settled America in the first place but spread our population across the wilderness, the Plains and the mountains to the Pacific.

When I first heard of the Tall Ships race several months ago, I was surprised that there is sufficient interest in sailing vessels of the Tall Ships class to pull off an international race.

But the ships and sailors all turned up on schedule, with such unlikely nations as Russia and Mexico sending entries. The boats are just now arriving in the East and with any luck some will venture far enough up the Great Lakes so we'll be able to get a look at them without traveling too far.

The Tall Ships race probably will do more in the interest of better international relations than any other Bicentennial event.

The scientific world is literally holding its breath for the first reports of what — if anything — Viking I finds on the Martian surface after touchdown. To date the voyage has been letter perfect. The craft has operated beautifully, responding to radio signals sent through millions of miles of empty space. The ship already has radioed back striking pictures of the Red Planet, showing surface features in amazing detail.

After landing, Viking will reach out and pick up rock samples from the Martian surface and return them to the craft for analysis. Scientists are hoping for some indication as to whether life has ever existed on Mars, if it does now or if it might in the future.

Did any of the founding fathers look forward to the Bicentennial? At least one of them did, according to an article in the July Reader's Digest. Nathaniel Ames, publisher of an almanac in Dedham, Mass., peered into the future with these observations:

"Arts and Sciences will change the Face of Nature in their Tour from Hence over the Appalachian Mountains to the Western Ocean. The Rocks will disclose their hidden Gems – and the inestimable Treasures of Gold & Silver be broken up. Huge Mountains of Iron Ore are already discovered; and vast Stores are reserved for future Generations: This Metal more useful than Gold or Silver will employ Millions of Hands, not only to form the maritial Sword and peaceful Share (plow) alternately; but an Infinity of Utensils improved in the Exercise of Art and Handicraft amongst Men. Those vast Quarries that teem with mechanic Stone – those for Structure (will) be piled into great Cities — and those for Sculpture into Statues to perpetuate the Honor of renowned Heroes; even those who shall NOW save their Country. O! Ye unborn Inhabitants of America! Should this Page escape its destined Conflagration at the Year's End, and these Alphabetical Letters remain legible,–when your Eyes behold the Sun after he has rolled the Seasons round for two Centuries more, you will know that we dream'd of your Times."

I wonder what Mr. Ames would have to say if he were around today?

Resignation

June 15, 1976

To the Board of Directors
Charlevoix County Humane Society
Rte. No. 1, Box 286-B
Charlevoix, MI, 49720.

This is to notify the Board of our resignation from the Board, and from any connection that the Humane Society as it now exists. Our main reason for doing this is to protect the actions of one person whom we believe is working to the detriment of the purpose of the Society.

It is our belief that any person whose private business relates in any way to the purposes of any publicly funded organization should not be permitted to hold office in such organization. One Board Member does own animal related businesses, and has repeatedly used the Humane Society office and activities to further her own personal gain. When we have tried to bring the matter to the attention of the Board, our efforts have been rebuffed, and we have been subjected to harrassment.

We have given generously of our time, materials and money from the formation of the organization, early in 1974, until now. But our efforts have been hampered by the actions of this person until we feel we can no longer do effective work for the animals or the community.

We will not be connected with any activity of the Humane Society as long as this one person remains on the Board. We feel that misconduct has been permitted, and that wittingly or not, the board has attempted to prevent the matter from being aired publicly.

Sincerely,
Bob & Lucile McKown

If it Fitz

by Jim Fitzgerald

"A lot of people think only cops should carry guns. I would agree – unless I lived in Flint."

I didn't say that. A Detroit cop said it. He said it with a grin. But he wasn't grinning when he said he would shoot me if I put his correct name in the newspaper.

Policemen are like doctors and lawyers. They'll criticize each other in private, while making wet rings on tables. But they balk at testifying publicly against a fellow officer, without benefit of a subpoena. They don't want to be branded as finks. They don't want to dirty their own shirts with spattered tar. And besides, there's always the danger of the flip side, where the squealer becomes the squealee.

So I'll call my friend the cop "Joe" and swear to keep his badge number secret unto death. Joe and I sat hunched over a bar and talked about guns and Madeline Fletcher and related things....

Madeline Fletcher is the Flint cop currently on trial for shooting another Flint cop. They argued over whose turn it was to drive their patrol car one night last December. There was a gun battle in the police station parking lot, with five officers firing 14 shots. One bullet hit Fletcher and one hit her partner, Walter Kalberer.

"That is 12 misses out of 14 tries, and they were only a few yards away from each other," Joe said with disgust. "The people of Flint have a right to worry. If a crowd of cops shooting in a phone booth can't hit each other, how are they going to hit a thief fleeing from the gas station across the street?"

More evidence of Flint policemen's skill at firearms came during the Fletcher trial. Kalberer was not allowed to carry his personal pistol into the courtroom, so he left it in the hallway with another Flint cop, Craig Hall.

The gun was cocked and it went off in Hall's hand. Bullet fragments richocheted down the marble corridor where about 30 people were standing. But no one was hit.

"That qualifies Hall to participate in the next police shoot-out in the station parking lot," Joe said.

I urged him to quit being a wise guy or I would remind him of those Detroit cops who made asses of themselves outside the Federal Building last year. Policemen fought each other during that incident, too, thus indicating Flint does not have an exclusive franchise on lawmen who break the law.

The Madeline Fletcher trial concerns a lot more than lousy shooting. She is one of Flint's few black police officers. Her opponents in the Police Corral Shoot-out were all white. (Sometimes I think this would be a nicer world today if either Roy Rogers or Gabby Hayes had been black, and Trigger had been a bus).

Kalberer and some other Flint cops are on record against sharing patrol duty with a female cop. They figure women aren't physically qualified to fight crime in the streets, but they are physically qualified to cause domestic trouble for a male officer who is married.

(Several of the male cops obviously found it possible to resist the female attractions of Officer Fletcher. According to trial testimony, if her wounds had been fatal, the department might have declared an official day of mourning, with the picnic starting at noon, right after the softball game.)

In her defense, Officer Fletcher's lawyer is accusing Kalberer and the Flint Police Dept. of racism and sexism. If Madeline had been a white cop named Harry, the defense says, those 14 shots would never have been fired.

My friend Joe has been a cop for 11 years, married for 13 years and white for almost 40 years. How would he feel about sharing a patrol car with a black female officer? What would his wife think?

"I wouldn't like it," Joe said. "I don't care what the Women Libbers say, a woman doesn't have enough muscle to be patroling the streets. She can't protect herself, let alone me or the public. She might faint instead. If she wants to be a cop, she should stay back in the station, filing reports.

"And my wife would kill me before she would let me go patroling with some good looking broad. If the broad was black, she would kill me twice," Joe said.

I told Joe he sounded like a racist sexist pig to me. And his wife sounded strong enough to patrol the streets.

He told me to go to Flint and hold Officer Kalberer's gun for him.

Meet Charlevoix

E.J. "Ed" Edwards

E. J. "Ed" Edwards has seen many summers come and go in Charlevoix. This week the Courier talks with him about the difference in life styles between the early resorters and today's summer visitors.

COURIER: You're a native of Charlevoix, aren't you?

EDWARDS: Yes, I was born on a farm just outside the town in 1883. My father was a dairy farmer, and as a kid I didn't see much of the town itself. I went directly home right after school to help with the chores. But I do remember the summers. The Fourth of July was always a big day, with a parade and races right on Bridge Street and fireworks, firecrackers and Roman candles at night.

COURIER: Did the town change much when the resorters started to arrive?

EDWARDS: Oh, yes. We used to go down to the railroad station and watch them come in with their trunks, maids, nursemaids and other help. Some came by boat, the Illinois, Missouri, or Manitou, too, from Chicago. They were picked up by horsedrawn drays in the early days, later by auto, and taken to the various cottages and hotels.

COURIER: Did the summer people provide jobs for local people as they do now?

EDWARDS: Yes, but mostly of a different type, not just waitresses and sales clerks. Those who didn't bring nursemaids or maids hired local girls and women. Some hired men for garden work and other outside jobs. There weren't many restaurants. The hotels all had their own dining rooms and the cottagers had their own good cooks.

COURIER: What about the merchants, those who ran grocery stores?

EDWARDS: They would deliver orders right to the hotels and cottages. I remember one grocer who used to make the rounds of the Belvedere Club each day, take the grocery orders, go back and fill them, then make deliveries.

COURIER: You worked at the Belvedere Club, we understand?

EDWARDS: Yes, I worked there for 28 years before I retired in 1960. I was assistant secretary-treasurer, warden and managed the hotel for seven years.

COURIER: What did the Belvedere Club members do for entertainment and recreation in the early days?

EDWARDS: Many of the same things that summer people do now. They played golf and tennis and swam. Picnics were a big thing, either in their boats or somewhere along the shore. There was a dummy train that ran between Charlevoix and Petoskey about every two hours. The fare was 25 cents and it took an hour. People often packed lunches and ate them in the park in Petoskey. There weren't any movies then. In the evening people would sit in rocking chairs on their porches and visit while the children played hide and seek. The hotel was really the focal point of their social life, with dances and bridge parties. That was before the days of cocktail parties. There was also the Opera House and roller skating in town.

COURIER: When was the Belvedere Club started?

EDWARDS: In 1878 by a group of Baptist ministers and professors from Kalamazoo. They weren't millionaires, just people who came to have a good, wholesome atmosphere in which to enjoy their summers.

COURIER: The Belvedere Club hotel building is gone now, but the cottages there are mostly the original ones, aren't they?

EDWARDS: Yes, but most of them have been changed considerably. Originally they had wood water heaters and fireplaces for heat. They didn't have central heating systems.

COURIER: How long did the resorters stay?

EDWARDS: The season ran from about the Fourth of July until Labor Day. Unlike so many summer visitors now, they didn't come for a week or two. Automobiles have made the difference. Sometimes we would have a three-day blow in August and people started to talk about going home. We hated to hear that because we knew we would have beautiful weather right afterward.

COURIER: Did you live on the Belvedere grounds when you worked there?

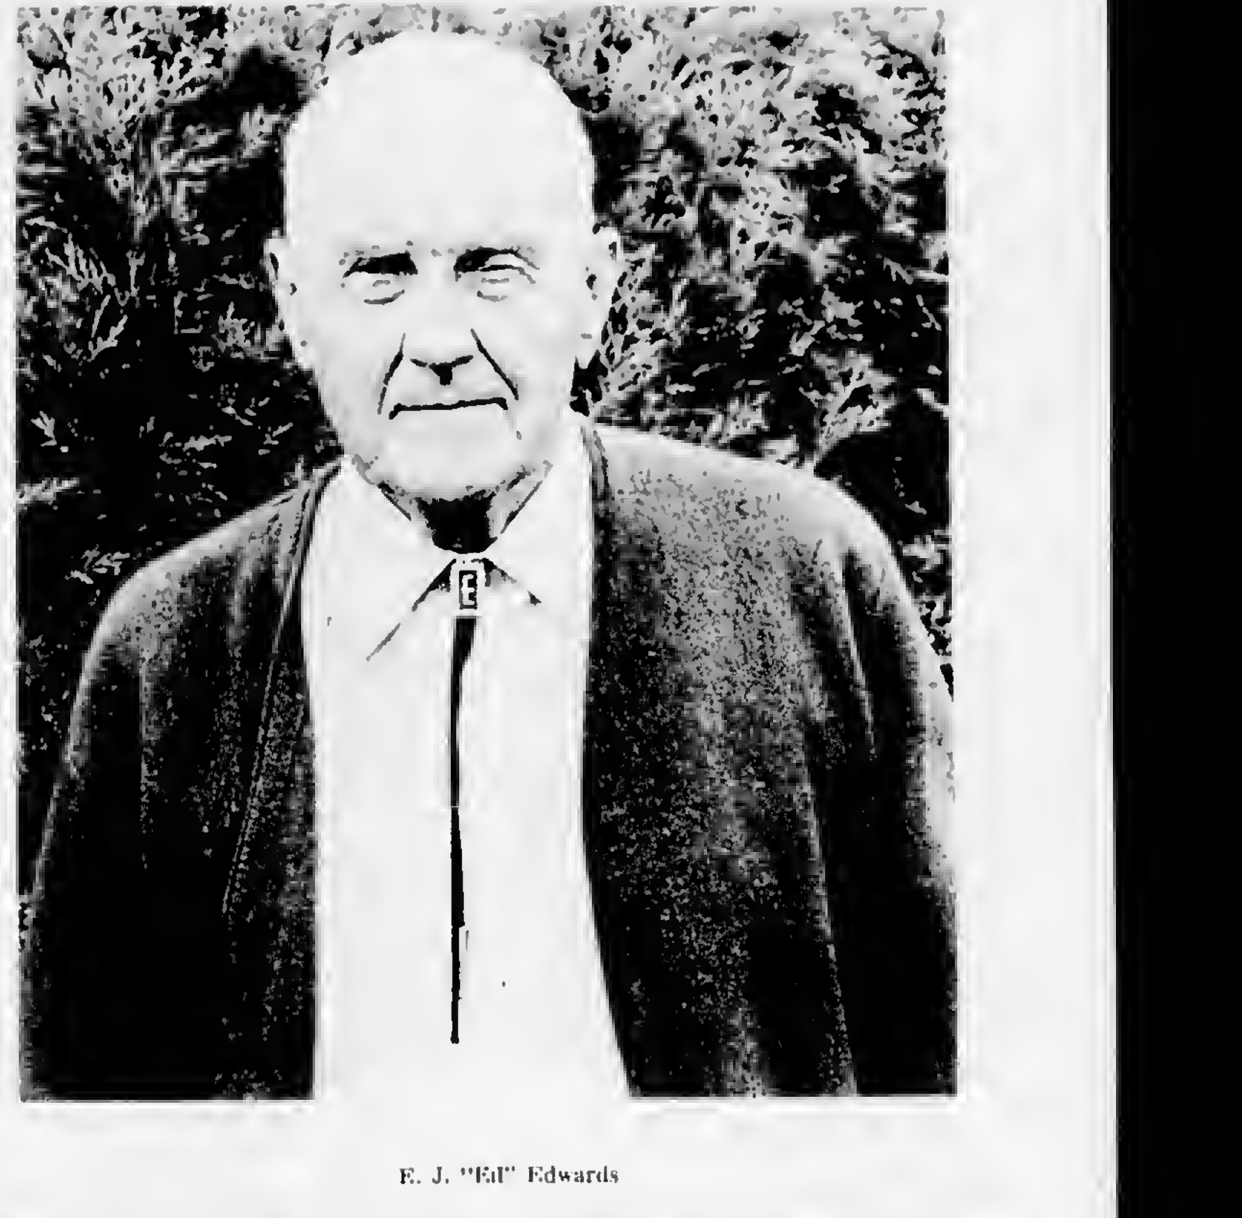
EDWARDS: Yes, Mrs. Edwards and I lived in the Annex. We got to know the people well.

COURIER: Has the changing lifestyle of summer people changed Charlevoix in the summer?

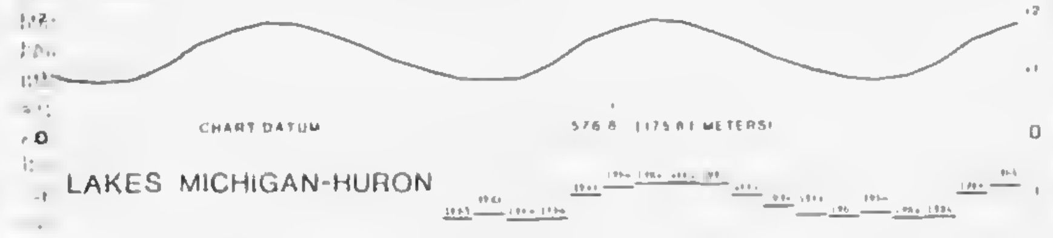
EDWARDS: Of course, everybody is in such a hurry these days. People rush into town, walk the streets to see what there is to do, stay a while and leave. However, we do still have a lot of people who make Charlevoix their summer home.

COURIER: You have seen a lot of changes in your lifetime, do you think things are as good as they used to be.

EDWARDS: No, values are different. They used to be more sensible than they are now.



E. J. "Ed" Edwards



THE ABOVE chart indicates the recorded lake levels for 1975 and through April of 1976 as well as projected levels for the coming months (upper line that begins solid and becomes broken for the predicted levels). The solid line across the bottom of the chart represents the 1900-1975 average. The underlined years at the top and bottom represent the extreme maximum and minimum levels.

High Water Problems Still Plague Shore Owners

Owners of property on the shores of Lakes Michigan and Charlevoix may still have some months, perhaps years, of high water problems, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACOE) indicates in a recent issue of their "Monthly Bulletin of Lake Levels for the Great Lakes".

The Corps disputes the commonly held notion that there are 10-17-or 20-year cycles to lake levels.

Instead, year-to-year lake levels fluctuations are totally unpredictable, random phenomenon. However, there is a relatively uniform pattern from season to season, low levels in January or February and high levels in July or August, due to seasonal changes in rainfall.

The ups and downs of lake levels are caused by both long and short term phenomena. Long-term changes are attributed to variations in precipitation, surface evaporation, ground-water input and runoff from nearby drainage areas.

Precipitation, both rain and snowfall, and evaporation, not land runoff, are the major factors affecting the level of Lake Michigan (of which Lake Charlevoix is a part). If precipitation remains above or below normal for several years, the level is significantly changed. Short-term changes in lake levels are caused by storms and wave action.

This is why predictions of lake levels for future years is difficult. Although USACOE uses National Weather Services forecasts and mathematical models based on levels data and precipitation records to predict future lake levels, the corps knows that extended forecasting beyond six months in the future is almost impossible, relying on too many unknown weather variables.

In fact, Lake Michigan shows anywhere from an 18-month to a four-year delay or lag time in responding to changes in precipitation in the Great Lakes Basin.

Records from as far back as January, 1860, show that there have been five periods of significant high lake levels (when the lake rose above 580 feet International Great Lake Datum (IGLD) since that time: 1860-70, 1877-1887, 1939, 1953-54 and the present ongoing period which began in 1969.

The record low lake level, 574.35 feet IGLD, was measured in 1964 and the record high, 581.22 feet, occurred in 1886, a difference of 6.87 feet.

At Greensky Hill Church Camp

Indian Children Learn About Heritage

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

"Pride in being an Indian. To know more about themselves and their culture," Mrs. Gladys Church explained, is the reason for a unique church encampment at Greensky Hill last week.

An idea which developed at the Indian Mission Workers Conference of the state branch of the United Methodist Church, the Greensky Hill camp was devised to combine the teaching of Indian heritage with religious teachings.

Twenty-six young campers from the Ten Indian Missions throughout Michigan spent last week studying the Ottawa language, bead working, basket weaving and nature lure, as well as attending Bible study classes, and swimming, playing volleyball and other recreational activities, at Charlevoix's Methodist Indian Mission Church.

Most of the children were from 10 to 14 years old. The funds for the camp were raised by the Methodist Church, throughout Michigan. The attending students were given scholarships to pay for their tents and food.

Rev. Lewis White Eagle Church, Pastor of the Salem and Bradley Indian Missions near Grand Rapids, was Camp Director. His wife, Gladys, assisted Jay Oliver of Charlevoix, in Ottawa instruction.

Mrs. Church explained that Greensky's hymnals, which are written in Ottawa, were the basic text for language classes. In addition the counselors tried to encourage the children to learn Ottawa at meals and during recreation.

Ben Green, an Ottawa of Boyne City, taught beadwork, helping the young students learn to make traditional beaded bracelets and necklaces.

Ralph Raymer, Charlevoix Elementary School principal, conducted nature walks for the students.

Rev. Austin Regier of Charlevoix and Rev. Church said that this year's camp will be critically evaluated to develop succeeding programs.

A realization of the importance of Indian heritage and the need for developing Indian leadership within the Methodist Church stimulated the idea of conducting the camp, Mrs. Church said.

The leadership of the Methodist Church, according to Rev. Church, has come to recognize that "the Indian Missions were not moving within the organization. So they established a special desk in New York for Native Americans, recognizing the unique ways of all people.

Reflecting on the growing awareness of Indian heritage and efforts being made to reinforce Indian pride, Rev. Church commented, "we'd like to preserve the best of the old, to retain in our new environment.

"We cannot go back and live in tents with no electricity, even though some would have us. But we can see both sides of the fence.

"We can try to have the best of both cultures. But we still don't have all the answers," he laughed.

The 29 campers lived in tents donated by the Church. Such mundane necessities as "KP" were shared by counselors, volunteers from Greensky, and campers.

New Gift, Craft Shop Offers Variety of Items

"Reflections of Birmingham" has become "Reflections of Charlevoix" for the summer.

The three young women who run the well-known gift shop downstate have opened their local shop at 107 Bridge Street and will remain open through the Color Season.

The shop owners say they have "the best crafts, the nicest jewelry, softest pillows, funniest toys, and most elegant pottery, quilts and home accessories."

Most of their articles are made by Michigan artists and craftsmen who produce in limited quantities, some one of a kind.

Their crafts range from thrown porcelain and stoneware, to hanging pots, casseroles and wooden kitchen utensils such as rolling pins and chopping blocks.

Jewelry is of silver in modern design and they also have a several necklaces and chokers of colorful bird feathers (made from game birds which were shot for food).

Pillows are assorted as to size, color and fabric, many of them quilted.

The hand-crafted quilts range in size from king to single in antique and modern patterns. They may be bought "on the spot" or specially ordered with delivery promised within ten days.

There are many other items to select from to fill a void in the home accessory department or for gift-giving.

Sheila Kasselman, Nancy Morgan and Sandy Ruby invite you to visit their shop, as do the other members of the staff, JoAnn and Pat Shelby.

Store hours are 10 to 5:30 Monday through Thursday, 10 to 9 Fridays, 10 to 5:30 Saturdays and 12 to 4 Sundays.

"REFLECTIONS" reflect variety of items.

Built in 1867, the restored house has all new roofing, plumbing, electric, etc. The "new" country kitchen retains the old "homey" atmosphere for family cooking and dining. Two new ceramic tile baths and a sunny utility room are concessions to the present.

Debra Marme, Thomas Tuck Wed

St. Mary's church was the scene Saturday afternoon of the wedding of Debra Marie Marme of Charlevoix and Thomas Lee Tuck of Boyne Falls.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William G. Marme of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tuck of Fremont, Ohio.

The Rev. R. Dale Magoon officiated at the double ring service before an altar traced with lighted tapers and arrangements of pink and white gladioli and daisies. Baskets of the same flowers decorated the sanctuary and pink and white bows marked the pews. Mrs. Brendan LaBlance, at the organ, played a program of traditional music including "Sunshine on My Shoulders" and "Annie's Song" during the service and the "Ave Maria" as the couple placed a bouquet at the altar of the Blessed Mother.

Mr. Marme escorted his daughter to the altar. For her wedding she chose a gown of white organza over taffeta featuring a pinafore effect, full bishop sleeves and a high neckline. Venise lace accented the bodice, sleeves, skirt and hemline of the gown. Her full length veil also trimmed with Venise lace was secured with a tiara with matching lace trim. Her bridal bouquet was a pink sweetheart roses, white and pink carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Robert Borths served as matron of honor and Mrs. William G. Marme, Jr., sister-in-law of the bride, and Patricia Tuck, of Fremont, Ohio, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They wore identical sleeveless gowns of cherry pink polyester knit with matching pink floral print capes. They carried bouquets of pink sweetheart roses, candy-striped carnations and baby's breath.

Darcy Baird of Petoskey as flower girl wore a gown identical to the attendants and carried a miniature bouquet of the same flowers. Sheldon Robinson of Alanson, cousin of the bride, was ringbearer.

Christopher Baker of Columbus, Ohio, assisted the bridegroom as best man. Groomsmen were William Marme, Jr., brother of the bride, and Donald Stein of Fremont, Ohio, cousin of the bridegroom. George Krchak, Jr., and Gordon Solomon seated the guests.

Mrs. Marme selected a full length jacket dress of light blue Quiana knit accented with aurora borealis buttons and silver accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Tuck, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of aqua mist styled with a lace bodice attached to a permanently pleated jersey skirt and white accessories.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at Stafford's Bay View Inn. Mrs. Floyd Barnhart of Millington, aunt of the bride, cut the wedding cake. Shelly Barnhart, also of Millington, cousin of the bride, attended the guest book.

Following a two weeks wedding trip to International Falls, Minn., the couple will return to make their home on M-66 Highway beginning in August.

The bride is a graduate of the Charlevoix and North Central Michigan College School of Nursing. As a registered nurse she is employed at the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Mr. Tuck a graduate of the University of Ohio, is employed at Little Traverse Hospital in Petoskey.

Wedding guests were present from Ohio, Wisconsin and several Michigan cities.

A rehearsal dinner, hosted by the bridesgroom's parents, were held at Juilleret's of Petoskey on Friday evening.

Service Held For Brunsons

The sunrise over Lake Charlevoix formed the setting Saturday, June 19, for the early morning wedding of Marcia Lynn Brown of Charlevoix and Richard W. Brunson II of Grand Rapids.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald W. Brown of Charlevoix and Dr. and Mrs. Richard Wanless Brunson of Denton, Texas. The bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Brown of Petoskey.

The Rev. Robert Rasmussen of Kalamazoo, uncle of the bridegroom, officiated at the double ring service on the west shore of Lake Charlevoix in the presence of more than 50 members of their families and close friends.

The couple's attendants were their respective parents.

Terri Kay Brown and Andrea Mae Brown, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. They wore polished cotton gowns similar to the bride's in beige and blue, respectively. Each carried a single red rose.

Mrs. Brown selected a full length beige lace gown and salmon accessories for her daughter's wedding. Her corsage was of salmon roses. Mrs. Brunson, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy and white gown complimented with a corsage of pink and white roses.

A wedding breakfast and reception followed at the Grey Gables Inn where Susan Pettis, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. Music was by Al Breeze.

Following a wedding trip to Shanty Creek Lodge at Bellaire, the couple will be at home at 659 Lake Drive S.E. in Grand Rapids.

Both are graduates of Grand Valley State College and are employed in Grand Rapids.

Wedding guests were present from Texas, Ohio, Colorado and California and several Michigan cities.

Methodist Church Wedding Site

Arrangements of carnations and daisies graced the altar of the United Methodist church for the recent wedding of Susan A. Boyd and David M. Brown, stationed at Bay Shore with the U.S. Air Force.

The Rev. Austin Regier officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 75 guests on Saturday, June 19. Mrs. Arden McGeorge, at the organ, played a program of traditional music and the wedding march.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Boyd of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Billy K. Brown of Robstown, Texas.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. For her wedding she chose an empire gown of sheer white organza fashioned with bishop sleeves trimmed with Chantilly lace, and Sabrina neckline and bodice accented with pearls and seed beads. Chantilly lace edged the hem of the gown that swept to a chapel train. A band of the same lace and pearls secured her full length veil that was trimmed with Chantilly lace.

Mrs. Victor Malkowicz of Boyne Falls was matron of honor and Mrs. Robert Therriault of Charlevoix and Karen Daklian of Southfield were bridesmaids. Their full length gowns in pastel shades of blue, green and yellow, respectively, were fashioned with empire waists and butterfly sleeves. Each carried a single carnation and daisy in a color to match her gown.

Mrs. Boyd selected a full length aqua gown for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Brown, mother of the bridegroom, wore a rose full length gown.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Probert and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hodge.

The Rev. Austin Regler officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 250 guests. Mrs. Duane Thomson of East Jordan, at the organ, played a program of traditional music and the wedding march.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of white crepe accented with brocade lace for her wedding. Her bridal veil was trimmed with the same lace for her wedding. She carried a bouquet of white daisies, yellow roses and baby's breath.

Peggy Schueh assisted the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Barbara Fisher of Trenton and Mrs. Timothy Horton of Ortonville, aunt of the bride. They wore identical floor length gowns of yellow crepe. Their bouquets were of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath.

Jim Marsh served as best man. Groomsmen were Rex Hodge, brother of the bridegroom, and Gary Probert, brother of the bride. Bruce Hodge, brother of the bridegroom, and David Martinchek seated the guests.

Mrs. Probert selected a floor length gown of blue chiffon for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Hodge, mother of the bridegroom, wore a beige floral print chiffon gown.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed at Bourke's Steak and Stein. Mrs. Charles Coulter and Mrs. John Harrell of Otonville, aunts of the bride, cut the wedding cake. Sandra and Sue Hodge, sisters of the bride, were in charge of the guest book.

County Residents Save Over $5 Million

Residents of Charlevoix County have been putting more money than usual into savings and debt reduction during the past year and, as a consequence, are in relatively good shape financially.

Despite the recession, the average local family reached the end of the year with a record amount of cash and other liquid assets tucked away.

The net result is that there is an impressive reserve of spending power waiting in the wings. Although some of it has been allowed to trickle out in the last few months—to buy new cars, refrigerators and other durable goods—it is still only a trickle, compared with what it could be.

The bulk of it is being held back by consumers who are awaiting assurance that the present economic upturn will continue. Once they become convinced that the country is heading back to normal, they will be ready to unleash their pent-up savings and embark on a spending spree.

How much are Charlevoix County families saving? The amount of money put aside during the past year by the local population is estimated at $5,351,000.

This represents liquid assets in the form of bank accounts, shares in savings and loan associations, purchases of U.S. savings bond and the like.

The figures are based upon data compiled by the Federal Reserve Board, the American Life Assurance Association and others through nationel studies. Throughout the country, they indicate about $91 billion was put aside by consumers last year.

The amount of money a family can save depends upon several factors, but especially upon its earnings. Those with meager incomes are able to save little or nothing.

At the $8,000 net income level, about 4.1 percent is saved, at $10,000, approximately 6.1 percent and, at $15,000, around 8.6 percent, it is estimated.

The amount saved in Charlevoix County in the past year was approximately $910 per household, based on the averall findings and on the average earnings reported for the local area.

More History Recalled By Ironton Resident

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Ross Alexander has been a correspondent for the Charlevoix Courier since 1932.

During this time, she has observed many changes in the Ironton area, where she has been handling our local news.

The following is a continuation of the history of the area which Mrs. Alexander has been offering Courier readers.

By Mrs. Ross Alexander

Continuing with the history of Ironton and visiting with several of our older residents, we found that they, too, had members of their families who had a great deal to do in making or contributing to the history of our community.

The Joseph W. Flanders family, lived next to our school now known as the N.C. Christensen home. He was the bookkeeper for the Iron Furnace until it was discontinued. Then he did carpenter work and was elected Township Treasurer holding that office many years. Then he was County Treasurer and moved to Charlevoix to be closer to his work.

During that time the English Sparrows had become such a nuisance, and so many, that a two-cent a head bounty was paid by the county and kept the young boys busy earning a little money. There were four Flanders children, Ida and Lillis live in Charlevoix. Lillis worked for her father, later being elected to that office and had it several years.

Other families that lived here in the early furnace days, or came soon after and made it a farming community, were the Hammonds, Birds, Munsons, McMulkins, Lynklips, Nielsens, Mitchells, Christensens, Kemps, Browns, Knudsons, and Saunders.

The A.M. Burdicks had a General Store on Washington Street that burned in 1902. It was then sold to J.W. Mosher, who built a cement building for a garage and later sold it to Pete Mitchell. It now is the summer home of the Russell Snyders.

The grandparents of Doris Saunders and Stanley Hammond of Charlevoix were also early settlers. Their grandfather worked at the furnace and grandmother Hammond was the first school teacher.

They lived on Ferry Road at the top of the school hill across from the Ole Lynklip home which is now the home of Neil and Sharon Woodbury.

The late Ole Lynklips family came from Denmark. He was a stone mason and chimney builder and built most of the chimneys on the houses that are being used today. Their home is still owned by members of their family.

Henry Purvis was the first postmaster and the office was on Washington Street near what we knew as Johnson's log cabins. He married a sister of J.W. Mosher and later moved to Petoskey. Joe Mosher became postmaster and moved it in with his General Store on Washington Street.

George McMulkin also worked at the Iron Furnace. His wife was Annie Williams. He later worked for George Hemingway in the beginning of Nursery days. Almond Bird also worked there.

I remember them going across the ferry every morning with three teams of oxen and a wagon to pick up stones to build the fences and walls that gave the nursery its picturesque look with the many beautiful flowering trees and shrubs planted aside them.

After they retired Godfry McDonald became Mr. Hemingway's right hand man and was the caretaker until his fatal and accidental shooting while hunting.

George McMulkin's home was on Ferry road in our village and was replaced by Charlie Snider with a red brick house.

The Almond Bird's home was also on Ferry Road across from the Oakley Saunders farm and was later bought by James Brock who moved it near the top of the ferry hill on M-66, later replacing it with a new home and selling it to the Knorr family. They moved it to its present location on Ferry Road across from the new schoolhouse.

Karlton Knorr is a Bee Apiarist and has a honey business here summers and also in Florida. He moved the store building that was once a general store owned by the Peterson Family and later by J.W. Mosher that stood next to the McMulkin home to its present location on old M-66. It is their Apiary storage place.

The John and Fanny Knudson, Sr. family came over from Denmark in a sailboat and settled in Milwaukee. Work being scarce there, they came to Ironton and found work at the Iron Furnace and later were farmers. Their family remained in this community and have been active in its work and church activities.

Others who came from Denmark in the early days were the Christensens, Nielsens, Petersans and Nassons. The Mitchells were from Scotland, and their present families can relate many interesting experiences. Living and making new homes with nothing to work with in a new country must of been most difficult in the beginning of our little community.

Modern-Day Horsemen Retrace Priest's Trip

Retracing the journey of Father Marquette, early French missionary, as he traveled from an early mission at St. Ignace to St. Joseph, Michigan, the Clever Clover 4-H group and their adult leaders passed through Charlevoix last Wednesday.

Initial plans had called for the 14-member club and its entourage that included three adult leaders headed by Bob Martin and a junior leader, two trailers and two stock trailers to spend Wednesday night at Eastport. However, because of traveling in temperatures well above 80 degrees, it was decided to spend the night south in Charlevoix.

Upon approaching Charlevoix, the travelers, the Clever Clovers of Coloma, were met by the 4-H Wranglers of Charlevoix and their adult leaders, Mrs. John Michael and Mrs. Glen Sheppard who guided them to the Michael farm off US 31 in Norwood township. Here the local club hosted them at lunch after the riders had taken care of their horses and put them out to pasture. It was also arranged for the club members and the adults to spend the night at Bell's Bay park before continuing their trip.

Mrs. Michael, in telling of her meeting with the club, said she was impressed with the youthfulness of the riders who ranged in age from 10 to 15 years and the way each cared for his or her mount.

The trip, in recognition of the Bicentennial, will take the travelers 300 miles along the west coast of Michigan from the Straits of Mackinac to St. Joseph, the site of the first fort in Michigan, Fort Miami, which later became known as St. Joseph, Michigan.

The riders made a colorful sight with their red, white and blue costumes and their flags, and Stars and Stripes, the state, city and bicentennial banners.

The entire group had traveled from southern Michigan to the Straits via cars and horse trailers prior to beginning the 300 mile trek home. The trip had been in the planning stage since early spring when leaders traveled through the area making contacts and mapping the route, Mrs. Michael said.

THIS YOUNG RIDER gives her horse a little encouragement at the day's end. Three hundred miles is a long way for both horse and rider.

Rock Formations Fascinate Geologists

By Peg Oble

The rock formations along Lake Michigan from south of Norwood to Bayview have long been of interest to geologists.

Douglass Houghton, Michigan's first geologist, in a report to the State Legislature in 1839, described his voyage by sailboat the previous year, during which he made a reconnaissance examination of rock outcroppings in this area.

The first formal publication about the rock formations was made in 1876 by Dr. Carl Rominer. It contained the first description of the hexagonal coral now popularly known as the "Petoskey Stone".

Recently, fifty members of the Michigan Basin Geological Society participated in a field study of the area. Professor R.U. Kesling of the University of Michigan and R.T. Segall of the State Geological Survey lead the group.

According to retired Charlevoix geologist Edward L. Beutner, who accompanied the group, they gave special attention to the fossil record in rocks and found in natural exposures and quarries.

The upper Lake Michigan and Lake Huron shorelines are among the few places in the Lower Peninsula where bedrock is exposed at the surface, Beutner said.

In interior areas, information on the character and thickness of rock formations must be obtained by drilling through varying thicknesses of overlying glacial drift. While such information is valuable, it does not in itself provide the dimensional data that may be gleaned from study of rock outcroppings at the surface.

In this area, the rocks are designated as the "Traverse Group" and include a number of limestone and shale formations which have been projected across the Michigan basin and have contributed to an understanding of the rocks which form the synclinal foundations of the basin.

A guide book which brought together all the information gathered by early geologists and other scientists was issued for the recent field-study. However, many of the outcroppings described by earlier researchers are no longer availabe for study due to fluctuating lake levels and shoreline developments, as well as land developments which have obliterated old abandoned rock quarries and other rock exposures.

On the other hand, new exposures may be studied in present quarry developments of the Medusa and Penn-Dixie Cement Company.

Beutner says that the fossil record and its interpretation are of special interest to oil geologists since certain coral reef structures are known to be sides of petroleum accumulation in the Michigan basin and now account for a major part of the oil production in the state.

Former Charlevoix Resident Directs Bicentennial Band

A Northern Michigan band, the Rogers City High School Marching Band, has been designated as Michigan's Bicentennial Band in the American Bicentennial Grand Parade in Washington, D.C., on July 3 and the Philadelphia Bicentennial Parade on the Fourty of July.

Director of this outstanding marching unit is a former resident of Charlevoix who was later graduated from the Petoskey High School, Steve Bergmann, son of Mrs. George Bergmann of Charlevoix and the late Mr. Bergmann.

The Rogers City band was accorded the honor of representing the state as its official bicentennial band when it was learned that the 108 member group was the only Michigan band scheduled to appear in the July 4 Bicentennial Parade in Philadelphia. The designation was read into the Congressional Record by Michigan Congressman James O'Hare last week and a copy presented to the band's director, Mr. Bergmann, at the concert presented by the band in Lakeside Park at Rogers City Friday night. At Friday's concert, the band played numbers it had memorized for the two parades.

A reception, honoring the band and its director, was hosted by the business community at Lakeside Pavilion following the concert.

The band, which has been working to raise funds for the trip since September, will depart via chartered bus on Thursday for the nation's capital and Philadelphia.

Bergmann, the band's director, is a native of Charlevoix and lived here until his parents moved to the Petoskey School District. He was graduated from the Petoskey High School and Northern Michigan University. He taught at Indian River and Las Vegas, Nev., before joining the faculty at Rogers City in September, 1975.

The two parades in which the band will participate will be televised nationally next weekend.

The Leaning Tree

By Marlene Cavalli

My nine year old son lives in a world of new jackknives, little league and secret messages. He is usually so involved with these that eating and taking a bath are just two things to be tolerated.

However, every now and then he surprises me with a faint request for something "good to eat." One such request came the other day in the form of banana cream pie. Since I'm always happy when he shows an interest in nutritious food I didn't waste any time in fulfilling his wish.

Puddings and custards are loaded with nutritious favors for children. It is one way of getting your children to eat eggs and milk. Then if you add a fruit such as bananas you have a food from three of the basic four food groups.

A question concerning meringue on filled pies arises. Should a meringue be placed on warm or hot fillings?

Research done at MSU showed that meringues placed on cold fillings are not adequately heated to kill common food-poisoning bacteria. In order to have a safe as well as tender and good looking pie the following preparation is suggested:

1. Prepare meringues just prior to use.
2. If frozen egg whites are used, thaw them in a refrigerator not warmer than 45 degrees.
3. Place the meringue on warm (122 degrees) or hot (158 degrees) filling, never on a cold filling.
4. Bake at a low temperature for a relatively long time, rather than at a high temperature for a short time. A safe and good meringue can be baked at 325 degrees or 350 degree temperature for 16 minutes.

Baking meringues at high temperatures causes a tough product. The short period of baking time also does not allow for destruction of harmful bacteria. Remember that cream pies and warm temperatures are perfect partners for food poisoning. During these warm months store them at 40 degrees or lower temperatures.

Brevort--At A Second Glance

By KEN WINTER

BREVORT–You can drive along the Upper Peninsula's majestic U.S. 2 that winds its way along Lake Michigan's shoreline and not even notice this tiny burg.

But then you would have missed the gas station mechanic who plays a horn in church on Sundays and the college-aged bar maid, who rides her bike five miles every week to hear him.

And then you wouldn't have met Ted and Reuben Guftafson, who as brothers in their seventies still operate a commercial fishing business.

Although Brevort is only minutes from the Straits of Mackinac, the clutches of modern-day urbanization have apparently left this community untainted.

Count on Your Hands

You can nearly count on your hands the number of people who live year 'round here. And except for the few who work for the state or county government or commercial forestry industry, almost all of Brevort's residents rely on the summer tourist trade.

Most of those who spend any time here at all either own a cottage or are camping in one of several state and national forest ground located on Lake Michigan and at Little and Big Brevort Lakes.

Lutheran minister Jon Magnuson, who visits the community every Thursday and Sunday from his St. Ignace parish, says one has to look beyond the few tourist motels and shops to understand the community.

The 30-year-old bearded minister, known locally as Pastor Jon, comes out every Sunday to preach in Brevort's only church, Trinity Lutheran.

For most of the dozen or so parishioners, the small New England-styled, white, steepled church is one of the places they get together and socialize, since many come in from outlying areas to worship.

Unlike what you might expect, Pastor Jon doesn't preach from the lofty wooden pulpit that towers above his congregation. In fact, the slender-framed, soft spoken minister sits with his congregation when he's not performing his portion of the service.

While there is the usual hymn singing and communion offering found in other Lutheran services, parishioners take active roles in the service.

Several Sundays ago, Jim Dyers, a mechanic at the Epoufette Standard Station, played a song on his horn that he had composed for the congregation. And don't be surprised if you're asked to introduce yourself as a visitor.

Waltons

Sometimes called the "Waltons of Brevort," Dave and Lois Movalson have been known to have a number of people around their Sunday dinner table after a Sunday service.

Both work for the St. Ignace school system during the winter (Dave as a bus driver and Lois as a teacher's aide) and operate the local Marathon station in the summer.

Then there's Gladys and Evar Holmberg, who are old enough to retire but insist on maintaining a family farm that has a dairy cow and chickens. The same Sunday Jim Dyers was playing to the congregation, Evar was serving as the lay reader and greeter, as well carefully counting the church collection after the Sunday morning service.

Although the church potlucks and after-service coffees play a major role in the community social life, the Trading Post is another popular gathering spot.

For less than $5, you can get a four-course steak dinner and all the evening's entertainment you want sitting around the log cabin bar-restaurant.

At one time, the building was a part of a lumbering camp operation. Now it serves as both a restaurant and bar, mostly for local residents.

The walls are covered with animal trophies and glass cases filled with antiques or junk–depending upon whether you're a local or tourist having some money to spend.

Marge and Bill Borland own and operate the tiny business that is not only popular in the summer, but in the winter, when snowmobilers come in to warm themselves around the wood burning pot-bellied stove located in the middle of the building.

The Borland's daughter, Julie, waits tables to earn money for college. And because she can't drive a car for medical reasons, she's often seen riding a bike to Sunday morning services some 5 miles away from the Trading Post.

Brevort isn't what you would call an imposing town, you can camp in numerous sites in and around the town, not even being bothered by the townspeople.

Brevort is just another one of those little burgs you can drive right through, batting an eyelash and missing it completely.

TRINITY CHURCH, a Lutheran church, is the only religious building serving the community of Brevort. John Magnuson travels from St. Ignace to minister to the residents.

THIS FISHING boathouse belongs to Ted and Reuben Guffatson, residents of Brevort. Their boat house is located along the Lake Michigan shoreline that gives the town its beauty

Other projects ranged from book reports on the lives of the nation's early forefathers to the actual knitting of a 13-star flag.

Lake Superior Honors Area Students

Dennis J. Crain, a junior in the School of Science and Technology, and Nancy M. Power, a sophomore in the School of Arts and Social Sciences, both of Charlevoix, were included on the Lake Superior State College Dean's List for the term which recently ended.

School Board

remove the pillar was approved. It was pointed out that the property most people consider a public alley is school property and that property owners whose land abuts the school property should be made aware of this in a letter. Board members said the so-called alley which is school property is utilized as a parking area for trucks and trailers for hire, boats, and a depository for trash. It was the concensus of opinion that since they used the school property to gain entry to their own property, they should use it with respect and clean it up. It was decided that markers should be placed at the boundaries of the land.

By a vote of 6-1 with Novak voting nay, the board gave its approval to Supt. McKimmey to attend a NASE Conference on Personnel Evaluations.

Non-nutritional food vending machines were discussed but no action taken at this time. Vane Smith said he would have more information on the subject at a later meeting.

Board members also plan to attend several construction sites to observe construction management in operation. The visits will be made in mid-July at a date to be determined.

In other action, the board approved a resident and non-resident tuition and enrollment policy which states the conditions resident students must abide by until he or she reaches the age of majority, is validly married, or by written parental custody emancipation release instrument filed with the Charlevoix County Clerk. A copy of the emancipation instrument must also be filed in the principal's office.

Heard a report from Roy Fortin, assistant principal, relating to absenteeism and dropouts. He said absenteeism was six percent as composed to 14 percent before the present attendance policy was adopted. He added that a large percentage of this happened on days before or immediately after holiday vacations. The dropout rate was set at 3.9 percent or 22 students. Of this total half are students who are repeaters.

Heard Supt. McKimmy advise that CETA funds would amount to approximately $29,200 under Title II and that two teachers aides would be replaced with an administrative assistant in the elementary school.

Heard a report on applicants for three positions at the high school including a half-time Special Education and Social Studies positions and full-time English teacher. There are more than 600 applications for the positions.

Heard that premiums for the Student Accident police supported by the school had increased 100 percent and that another policy is being sought.

Heard that building costs on any proposed construction is increasing at approximately $210,000 annually.

The next meetings of the board will be the re-organizational meeting set for July 12 and July 26 when Construction Management firms will attend the meeting.

The other 60 percent, $1,533, went to some 16 favorite charities of the walkers. Mark Hand (second from left) collected the most money, $335. City Can't Establish McSauba Hours

Three facets of the City of Charlevoix's recreation program including the establishment of hours governing the use of the Mt. McSauba Recreational area, the salary of the recreation director and the condition of the Ferry Avenue Beach dock were considered by City Council Monday night.

Conditional approval also was granted for a lot split on the northeast corner of State and Carpenter-sts. by Council during the meeting.

The city is legally unable to establish hours at Mt. McSauba, Council learned.

Because the park is outside the boundaries of the city, the city is limited to the rights guaranteed any property owner by the state, City Attorney Don Burlage explained.

Charlevoix could, for example, post signs banning the use of motorbikes in the park, and prosecute violators for trespassing he said.

However, "you couldn't pass an ordinance regulating land outside the city limits," such as hours, he said.

Council voted unanimously to raise the salary of Recreation Director Ike Buss from $4,000 per year to $6,000 per year retroactive to May 1.

The pay hike was approved on the basis of a recommendation from the recreation committee and a report from Boss on the number of hours he devotes to the program.

The additional expense had been provided for in the city budget.

Action on proposed renovating of the Ferry Avenue dock was tabled pending a committee report on the cost and recommended phasing of the project.

Alvin Ranger, of Ranger and Assoc., was present at the meeting to report on the condition of the dock and make recommendations.

Its basic structure is sound, but the cement cap is broken and crumbling, and the old deck "completely gone in some areas." "within inches of being totally submerged" at the end, he said.

The consultant said that Lake Charlevoix is presently within .9 of a foot of its highest record level of 581.3 feet.

He recommended that stone be added and a new cap poured to raise the level of the dock one or two feet, and that sheet piling be put in to reinforce the dock particularly around the old crib area at the end.

Ranger also recommended that the end of the dock be barricaded off from the public.

Recreation director Boss agreed that a barrier should be erected, and said that it has been city policy that the end of the dock is closed to the public.

The dock "should be fixed up or taken out," he said.

Three lots became two as Council granted the split of Lot 47 of Mason's Addition, with the eastern 10 feet being added to Lot 48, and the western 50 feet to Lot 46.

The split was approved on the condition that owner Phyllis E. Miller sign a restricted deed convenant guarding against any future possibility that either the 10 foot or 50 foot piece of the split lot be sold separately without the approval of the Council.

Approval was granted in a 5-1 vote, with Councilman Ivan Whitley dissenting.

Whitley requested that an additional stipulation be attached to the approval concerning a trailer that representing a non-conforming use in an R-2 district.

The trailer is located on Lot 46, and Whitley suggested that Council investigate the possibility of obtaining an agreement whereby the trailer would be removed from the lot when no longer occupied by its current residents.

In other action, Council:

-Awarded a bid for bituminous aggregate pavement to Tri-City Asphalt for the unit price of $16.20 a ton, and a total price of $46,580.25 for all three phases of proposed street work. The only other bidder was Hodkiss and Douma with a unit price of $16.30 per ton.

-Authorized Clerk Lyle S. King to sign standard state street maintenance contracts.

-Received a letter from Consumers Power notifying the city of a public hearing to be held in Lansing on July 9 concerning a proposed rate increase of .0024 cents per kilowatt hour. The Company is seeking the approval of the Michigan Public Service Commission to pass along increased expenses to its customers associated with purchased and net interchange power.

Horton Bay Traffic Detoured

Because Horton Bay will celebrate its centennial and the nation's bicentennial Saturday, July 3, traffic through the village will be prohibited that day from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Traffic will be detoured on the Horton Bay Road at the west end of town to Church Road, then to Camp Daggett and Sumner Roads.

Festivities will start with a parade at 11 a.m., followed by the dedication of Horton Bay as a State Historical Site and a picnic in the grove adjoining the Red Fox Inn.

So in late May of 1957 I put my small collection on display, and let it be known that I would be glad to copy old prints for the same purpose during the Centennial year. To my surprise, and sometimes consternation, I was swamped with photographic nostalgia. Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Gordon Freedman, hardboard mounts for displaying the pictures were provided and by the time summer rolled around almost every store in town had a window display of old pictures of Charlevoix.

From 1957 on, the collection grew at an accelerated rate, and although my interest kept pace, I found myself storing the pictures away in boxes. This would hardly do for it meant they were merely being put back into the oblivion from which they had been so recently resurrected. The answer to that dilemma seemed to be an album for the choice prints with perhaps explanatory captions to go with each.

After several attempts at arriving at a satisfactory procedure I finally decided to combine the old prints with fitting captions and mount them on a pleasing background. This simplified things for me for I could center my efforts until that particular page was completed. The format for all pages of the albums soon emerged and remained much the same, with some variations, until the collection was completed in 1976.

Thanking the many, many interested and generous people who contributed to the collection would be an impossibility. Many prints were given by persons unknown. Some came through the mail, with no name or return address. Once, returning home from a movie, we found a fine photograph inside the screen door, but we never knew who left it.

But special thanks must go to a few: Rob Burns, for giving the priceless glass negatives made by Ernest Peaslee; Pete Burns, for his many contributions; Eleanor Ratigan, for making it possible to have pictures of Mr. & Mrs. Dixon; Edward & Phila Shanahan; Dorothy Kohler; Edward Helse; Bernice Wexstaff; William Paddock; D.S. Way, photographer; George Priest, photographer; J. Oliver; Hilda Gibson; Don Campbell; Mike Bice; Earl Young; Earl Rabst; Mrs. James Gaskin; Robert Bridge; Gruver Genell; M. Foster.

Perhaps the fitting way to end these comments is with a heartfelt thank you to those too numerous to mention who directly or indirectly made the collection possible.

Historical Society Reviews Minute Book

Recently elected officers will assume their offices at the next meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society at 8:00 p.m. Tuesday, July 6, in the Community Room of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

They are: Edward Beutner, President; Robert Miles, First Vice-President; Albert Smith, Second Vice-president; Mrs. C.D. Geiken, Secretary; and Ralph Hamilton, Treasurer.

Newly elected directors are Robert Cook and Dale Boss to serve with incumbent directors Robert Burns, Mrs. J.A. Zinn, William Ohle and Vincent Olach. Members' annual dues will be accepted at this time.

Following the business meeting the program will feature a review by Mrs. Edward Shanahan of the Charlevoix Historical Society minute book covering the period 1903-1911. This is one of the two newly-found Secretary's minute books which describe the objectives and programs of the early Society from the time of its organization in 1879.

Mrs. Shanahan's mother, Mrs. Robert R. Armstrong, was active in the affairs of the Society. The record books reveal much about people and their cultural aspirations during Charlevoix's early years. Present generations will recall many family names. All who are interested in local history are invited to attend this meeting.

THROUGH THE EYES OF FAITH WE SEE LIFE MORE CLEARLY

Your eyes are your windows of the world you live in, through which you are able to observe your surroundings, recognize your fellow beings, perform your everyday tasks and follow the pathway of your life. They enable you to concentrate on a single object or person, or scan every detail of the panorama within your field of vision. You can develop your powers of observation so as to enjoy the natural beauty of God's creation whenever you step out of doors, and you can also quickly identify a situation that should be remedied or a person in need of your help. At the Church of your choice you will learn to see all the good things of this world through the eyes of faith.

--Matthew 6:22

The eye of each man sees but what it has the power of seeing.

'Attack' Wins First Bicentennial Sail

By TOM DAMMANN

The first Charlevoix Bicentennial Regatta, raced last Thursday (July 1 & 2) and Friday, in upper Lake Michigan, got off to a flying start, with winning times establishing records that may well stand for years.

That, at least, is the prediction of Josh Barnes, Commodore of the Charlevoix Yacht Club (CYC) which sponsored and organized the race.

Billed as the longest race strictly confined within Lake Michigan shores, the Charlevoix Bicentennial, is the newest in the Northern Offshore Racing Circuit (NORC), fast becoming one of the most popular series on the Great Lakes.

Other races in the NORC are The Traverse City to Leland; Traverse City to Mackinac Island; the Little Traverse Two-Day Invitational; and the Red Fox Regatta on Labor Day.

15 Boats

Fifteen boats, representing the home club, The Traverse City based Grand Traverse Yacht Club (GTYC); the Boyne City Yacht Club (BCYC) and the Harbor Springs-based Little Traverse Yacht Club (LTYC) jockied about the starting line off the Medusa buoy Thursday morning.

At the boom of the starting cannon, fired from a committee boat, the fleet started forward on the first leg of the 148 mile course, which took in first to South Fox Island, then to Border Reef (in the middle of the lake, west of High Island), then on a rugged beat north to Inland Port, in the Upper Peninsula, then to White Shoals, Grays Reef and back to the Finish line off the north Charlevoix breakwater.

Second across the starting line, the scratch boat, Coprice II, a C & C 43 awned by John C. Fergus of Harbor Springs (LTYC), took the lead one mile out and crossed the finish line 19 hours, 12 minutes and 26 seconds later. It was 6:12 a.m. Friday, almost six hours ahead of the predicted arriving hour.

Ten minutes short of twa hours later, Attack, a Contessa 35, owned by Joe Arbaugh (LTYC), in a corrected time of 18 hours, 54 minutes, and 51 seconds, came in, which gave Attack first place and Caprice II second.

Third place went to Traveller, owned by David Irish and Rober Shaw (LTYC/GTYC), a corrected time of 19 hours, 17 minutes and 11 seconds. Fourth was taken by Jim Dilworth's Merry Hell II, a Pearson 30, with a corrected time of 19 hours, 42 minutes and 58 seconds, which also made it the winner of Class B boats.

The race began with a northwest wind of 25 mph, and better amid heavy seas, which lasted throughout Thursday before dropping to light and variable. Two boats dropped off, but the 13 which finished all did so in less than 24 hours.

Bad Shape

I would just like to say that for this being "Charlevoix the Beautiful" the pier is in bad shape. From Palmer Street to the end of the pier. I would hate to see someone get hurt there. I fell into one of the holes in the cement today while carrying a baby and was very lucky to take the full force of the fall. The baby wasn't hurt but I would think that the City of Charlevoix would get it taken care of as soon as possible. It's very dangerous down there with all the kids that fish and everything.

Clean-up

The neighbors on the north side are concerned with the condition of the houses at 102 and 104 W. Dixon Ave. We feel that it's a disgrace to the northside and the neighborhood and also a fire hazard and we feel that they should be taken care af in some way. How about keeping up the neighborhood so it can remain living in "Charlevoix the Beautiful".

POLITICS

I wauld like this titled "Animals vs. Politics". Can you believe that in Charlevoix that politics interfere with animals? Isn't it enough that people have ta endure politics, do animals also? People can speak for themselves, animals can't. How many citizens enter the animals shelter to see what's going on? Two of the most important people needed in the Humane Society had to resign and a few others with them. This shelter is going to end up just like the one in Boyne City. I used to work with the Humane Society and had to give it up also. I saw no hope because of politics. I also know, and this probably won't be printed, and will prabably have to be dealt with in another way. It seems that the news right now is holding back. Nothing has been in the Courier about the Humane Society lately. If your dog or animal should be brought in and the deputy is off, it may not be fed, watered, or cleaned for a period of maybe two days. Why? Please, let's get together before it's too late again. Where is the money and donations going? Let's find out now. Please print this immediately. Marlene Spizizen.

Concern

There seems to be much concern about this series of rock concerts to be held at the Castle Farms. It seems strange that we have not been made aware of who granted the permit for this kind of thing. Particularly, it seems strange that Judge Reibel, in view of all the opinions, legally and otherwise, that have been brought to bear on these rock concerts, especially in the face of the one in Pontiac just recently, would burden the community with the extra responsibility and the difficulties that are probably going to attend this. It will be interesting to see. I do feel that the one who granted the permission, that the people should be made aware of just who it was.

Local Airport Suit Still Unresolved

By FRAN MARTIN

Charlevoix's seven-month battle over who can operate commercially out of its airport has no apparent sight in end.

Circuit Judge Martin Breighner advised both the city and Welke Aviation, Inc., an air taxi-freight service operating out of Beaver Island, that he feels the case is a business case, one of economics, and not one to be decided by the courts.

During a hearing held here last Thursday, the judge reprimanded the attorneys for being unable to negotiate an agreement and outlined four stipulations.

First, the judge said he would reserve his decision to act on the city's request for an injunction against the Welke operation.

He then ordered the two parties to enter into negotiations and to reach a suitable, reasonable and rational agreement that would permit Welke to utilize the facilities of the Charlevoix airport at a cost that is fair both to the city and to Welke.

He stated further that if the parties failed to do this within 30 days, each must submit in writing an agreement that each feels is reasonable, suitable and fair. The court will then evaluate them and recommend to each party what the court believes to be fair and suitable.

If the recommendations of the court are not adopted, assuming such recommendations become necessary, the court will hold further hearings and at such time will determine what should be entered in this cause as a fair and suitable order.

Thursday's hearing, the most recent of several held during the past year, brought Mayor Edward P. Hansen, Acting Administrator Robert Wexstaff, Paul Welke, president of Welke Aviation, Inc., defendant in the case, Frank L. Sicklesmith, Deputy Chief of the Aviation Services Division, Michigan Department of Commerce, Aeronautics Division, and Robert F. DeRoeck, Chief of the Program Section, Federal Aviation Administration, to the stand to be questioned by Donald Berlage, attorney for the city and Arthur Reibel, attorney for the Welkes and, in several instances, by Judge Breighner.

While Judge Breighner made it clear that he had expected negotiations to be completed at this time, the inability of the parties to reach an agreement returned the case to the court for a decision.

There were charges and counter charges with Mayor Hansen contending that Paul Welke had not supplied the city with sufficient information to reach a satisfactory determination regarding fees for the use of the airport and Welke countering that the fact that the company was licensed by the FAA proved it met the specifications set by the city.

According to the evidence, Welke had advised the city in January, 1975, of a proposal air taxi-freight service his company planned to establish. After meeting with the council and later with city officials on numerous occasions and receiving no information regarding landing fees or information regarding an airport ordinance, the company went into operation in May 1975. It was not until September 1975 that the city adopted an ordinance outlining the use of the airport and established landing fees of $300 per month and $3600 per year.

Because Welke felt the fees were discriminatory and because the city did nothing to halt their use of the airport, Welke Aviation continued to use the airport without cost.

In December, the city asked for an injunction against the firm in an effort to halt their use of the facility but Judge Breighner, at that time, denied the injunction and set a date in mid-March for a hearing after asking the city to establish a fair and equitable fee scale. When no agreement was reached, the date of July 1 was set as the date of still another hearing. After Thursday's day in court, still no agreement was reached.

A great deal of evidence, much of it aired in earlier hearings and meetings in the chambers, was brought out again with the result that Judge Breighner advised the parties of his feelings in the case.

He questioned the city's lack of action against Welke when

Hundreds Expected to Attend Charlevoix's Hobbycraft Show

More than 100 hobbyists and craftsmen from throughout the state and elsewhere will exhibit the fruits of their avocations in the eighth annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Fair in East Park Saturday.

Mrs. Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, said that the show promises to be the finest to date with a wide variety of exhibits entered.

"Each year since its inception it has attracted outstanding hobbyists and craftsmen whose work surpasses that seen in juried shows and even the larger downstate hobby shows. Charlevoix's Lakeside Hobbycraft started out in a modest way and has grown to be one of the community's most outstanding summer events. Many other similar shows have sprung up in the area as a result of the local show" Mrs. Merta said.

The fair will be held in East Park overlooking Round Lake. It will begin at 9:00 a.m. and continue until 8:00 p.m.

In announcing the show Mrs. Merta mentioned a recent entry that she expects to attract attention at the event. He is Ronald Blanchard of Kalamazoo whose specialty is carving Petoskey stones. A tool and die maker, Blanchard has done portraits in various media but became fascinated with the honeycombed appearance af the Petoskey stone while visiting the area. In working with the stones so familiar to northern Michigan residents, he skins off the surface covering to reveal the rock's pattern. Using a variety of tools he carves out the features. He then uses emery papers and Swiss files to etch character lines in facial expressions.

Business Activity Up in County

A detailed study of business activity in Charlevoix County and in other communities across the country shows that the local economy moved into higher gear in the past year.

According to the report just released, the amount spent per family for goods and services was at a relatively high level although inflation was responsible to some degree for the increase.

The details are contained in the annual market study made by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It indicates just how much was spent locally by the average family for food, cars, furniture, clothing, drugs and other items.

Comparable data is given for families in every other section of the country.

The amount spent in local grocery stores, supermarkets, delicatessens, butcher shops, bakeries and other stores selling food for home consumption added up to $10,357,000.

In addition to this outlay, a sizable amount was spent in restaurants, lunch rooms and other places where food and drink are consumed on the premises.

In terms of the total amount spent in local retail stores about 23 cents out of every dollar went for take-home food, the figures show.

On the average, throughout the United States, 21 cents went for food and, in the East North Central States, 20 cents.

If the home food bill were divided equally among the local population it would average out to $1,750 per household.

The report also shows how much was spent in the area for various other commodities.

Sales of cars and other automotive equipment amounted to $8,606,000.

SEVENTY-YEAR-OLD Shorty Huber and his grandson, Dave Maynard, arrived here last week by bicycle from Montana.

Montana Men Bicycle Through Charlevoix

By PEG OHLE

Shorty Huber and Dave Maynard were in town last week.

Who are they?

They are a team of bicyclists from Helena, Montana who are pedaling from their home city to Washington, D.C. as their own Bicentennial project.

Shorty is 70-years-old and grandson Dave is 23. When they reached Charlevoix they looked hale and hearty after traveling 1,600 miles of their 3,600 mile trip in 24 days.

Their wheels had taken them through parts of North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. After staying the night at the Windmill Farms Campgrounds they were headed for Traverse City, Cadillac and Port Huron, from where they will cross over into Ontario to add a "foreign" country to their itinerary.

They said they had an especially good time in the Upper Peninsula, where they visited cousins in Marquette, and in Rockland, where they were feted by the town.

Mackinac Island particularly impressed Shorty and Dave – they stopped for a cocktail at the Grand Hotel, just to say they had been there.

The weather has been mostly good for them, Shorty said, but they have run into a lot of cold weather and four or five days of rain.

"It was so cold in North Dakota that we wondered why we had undertaken the trip," he admitted.

"But there is no better way to see and experience the country and people of this great land."

They hope they can impress upon their fellow Americans the value and practicality of bicycle travel, which, in the face of spiraling fuel costs, will increase in importance as the United States advances into its third century.

Shorty's and Dave's trip is recognized officially by the Montana Bicentennial Administration, but they are financing it themselves.

In Washington, where they expect to arrive August 16, they will meet the Senators from the State of Montana and the head of the Bicentennial Commission, among other dignitaries.

When not bicycling, Shorty works for the State of Montana Insurance and Legal Division as an appraiser for insurance and Dave drives a school bus.

East Jordan Agrees to Grandvue Water Pact

By FRAN MARTIN

The Grandvue Medical Care Facility located north of East Jordan on Peninsula Road will be assured of an ample supply of water under pressure as the result of negotiations between the City of East Jordan and the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners which operates the facility.

The decision to enter into the agreement was made at a special meeting of the board which will allow the contractor to extend the water main 1480 feet past the city limits to the facility. The main will then be extended from the roadway to the rear of the facility, a distance of 700 feet.

Under the agreement, the eight inch main will be financed with monies from the County's Building Improvement Fund, Grandvue Water Main Account. The line along the roadway to the facility will cost an estimated $18,000 and from the roadway to the rear of the structure $7,000.

Upon completion, the installation from the city limits to Grandvue will be conveyed by the county to the City of East Jordan. Upon the utilization of the main by any party other than the county, the Grandvue Utility Account will be credited with 50 per cent of the gross income of sales of water until such cost as the county has incurred in this portion of the main has been amortized.

The prosecutor, Roy Hayes, was asked to draw up an agreement with the City of East Jordan.

The proposal as presented by Lee Moerland and Don Meggison of the board in cooperation with Richard Tillen and Vern Whiteford representing Grandvue was approved by a vote of 13-0.

Gooey Jeffs Are Back

Old-Time Soda Fountain Treat Finds Sticky Spot in Charlevoix

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

The Jeff is back.

A thick, sweet, rich, gooey, satiating combination of bittersweet chocolate, vanilla ice cream (one pint) and marshmallow, whose proportions are a secret kept even from investigative reporters, being served at Williams Dockside Pharmacy, officially marks the beginning of summer for those in the know.

Jeff's heralding of summer dates to the 1920's.

The concoction's origins are hazy. The most popular explanation is that a Charlevoix City Policeman, whose first name was Jeff, or last name was Jefferies (no one's quite certain), was a regular customer at F.J. Fessenden's drug store and soda fountain.

Fessenden's, which was located on the site of the present Ski and Shore office, had an ice cream parlor in front.

The store stayed open late, the story goes, and the city policeman would stop for an ice-cream night cap.

According to Jack Schraeder, the next owner of the drug store and keeper of the sacred recipe, the policeman dictated the combination of bittersweet, chocolate and marshmallow to suit his extremely sweet tooth.

Another source, highly authoritative but who refuses to be quoted, says the policeman story is not true, the recipe was merely pirated from Juilleret's restaurant in Harbor Springs.

Nevertheless, Schraeder vividly describes how the chocolate came in a big block, imported from Holland.

"We had to cut it with a large knife, then melt it, then add the other ingredients."

Jim Williams, present owner of the recipe, says the chocolate now comes shaved, in powder form, but still it is imported Dutch chocolate.

'We add ingredients to make the bittersweet. That's the secret," Williams says, becoming vague and evasive, "How to make the bittersweet."

Once the ingredients are assembled, they must be stirred, by hand, to create the glutinous mass, which can only be eaten with a spoon.

"We used to let the kids stir their own and lick the spoon. Unfortunately, health regulations won't permit that anymore," Williams reports.

He continues, "Since time immemorium, Jeff has been stirred by hand."

Once Schraeder and Williams decided the 5-minute hand stirring was a tradition worth testing.

They tried a variable speed drill with an egg mixer attached.

"Everything was going okay, at a slow speed," Williams recalls, "so I speeded up the drill.

"The stuff took off. One person was sitting behind a menu. A big glob hit the menu.

"Another glob whirled onto the soda fountain and then dropped into the purse of a customer who had ordered the Jeff.

"That was the first and last time we tried that," he laughs.

Because the ingredients are perishable, and can only be stored for a limited time in a limited quantity, Jeff season is shorter than a Charlevoix summer.

"We only serve them in July and August," Williams says.

"And some people get irritated when we won't serve them during Venetian Festival or the Art Fair, but we are just too busy," he cautions.

The same season and prohibitions apply to the Jeff's more expensive embellishment, known as Concrete. Concrete is a Jeff plus malted milk.

To add to the confusion, Williams is now touting an Hot Peanut Butter Sundae.

But, despite the $2.00 tarriff, it is Jeff which has true "addicts and freaks."

They come in all ages, sizes, shapes and from all segments of society, according to Edith Balch, whose job at Williams includes Jeffing.

The prominent Charlevoixans who are known as Jeff addicts, like all addicts, begged this reporter for anonymity.

F.L. DAMMANN tries out one of the old-time Jeffs being made in Charlevoix.

LOCAL RESIDENTS gather around the soda fountain to see how a Jeff is made.

Residents Favor Planning

By PEG OHLE

Charlevoix County property owners are overwhelmingly in favor of land use planning and believe it should be carried on through the cooperative efforts of the County and local units of government.

This is just one finding in the initial compilation of returns from an Attitude Survey made by the County Planning Commission.

In making the survey, the Planning Commission sent out questionnaires to ten percent of the property owners in each township and city, half of them going to permanent residents and half to seasonal residents.

The names came from Equalization Department tax rolls, with every tenth name receiving a questionnaire except in cases where that name was a political unit of government, a corporation or a repeat of a name already selected.

In all, 1,752 questionnaires were sent out and 457, or 25.9 percent, returned.

The questions and answers on the land use planning were:

Do you feel land use planning is important to the future of Charlevoix County?

Answers: yes, 396; no, 30.

How should planning be developed? By a County Planning Commission, Township Planning Commission or Township and County cooperatively?

Answers: County, 78; Township, 68; County and Township, 255.

In order to help prevent Charlevoix County from having the same problems the southern portions of the state are experiencing, which of the tools listed would you like to see used in the County–zoning, subdivision control, limited growth ordinance, building codes, soil erosion control, or none?

Answers: Zoning, 304, subdivision control, 217; limited growth ordinance, 175; building codes, 249; soil erosion control, 202; none, 17.

Should the County and local planning programs encourage--residential, commercial, industrial, limited growth or no growth?

Answers: residential, 220; commercial, 125; industrial, 111; limited, 204; no growth, 23.

If residential development should be encouraged, what type do you feel it should be–single family, duplexes, apartments, condominiums, mobile homes, or none?

Answers: Single, 315; duplexes, 67; apartments, 80; condominiums, 56, mobile homes, 45; none, 4.

Should the County plan to encourage increased second home and seasonal residential development?

Answers: yes, 253, no, 141.

Should the County provide trailer parks and camping areas for seasonal use?

Answers: trailer parks: yes, 207; no, 192. Camping areas: yes, 304, no, 103.

Should the County encourage mobile homes to be located in mobile home parks or throughout the County?

Answers: parks, 319; throughout, 73; nowhere, 17.

Business Districts

Do you feel downtown business districts in the cities are adequate for shopping?

Answers: yes, 254; no, 112.

If you feel the county should encourage industrial development, what are your feelings on the location of the industries–should they be in controlled industrial parks, within the limits of cities and villages, or should there be no restrictions?

Answers: Controlled parks, 287; in city limits, 44; no restrictions, 31.

Do you feel that agriculture will play an important role in Charlevoix County in the next 20 years?

Answers: Yes, 249, no, 149.

If your answer to the above is yes, do you feel planning is needed to prevent conflict between residential and agricultural needs?

Answers: yes, 226; no, 37.

Transportation

Another section of the questionnaire was devoted to transportation. Those questions and answers received were:

Do you feel Charlevoix County has an adequate transportation system?

Answers: yes, 161; no, 212.

If you feel it is not adequate, in which areas do you feel the county should work to improve the system–railways, highways 31 and 131, local roads, County road system, bus system between communities, inter-city buses to recreation facilities?

Answers: Railways, 80; highways 31 and 131, 103; local roads, 83; County road system, 87; buses between communities, 99; inter-city buses to recreation, 55.

Do you feel the proposed expressway, highways 31 and 131, should be developed in Northern Michigan?

Answers: yes, 225; no, 161.

Do you feel it should go through Charlevoix County?

Answers: yes, 179; no, 168.

Would you like to see it end somewhere south of Charlevoix County?

Answers: yes, 141; no, 130.

Other Sections

Next week the Courier will report the results from other sections of the questionnaire. They cover recreational facilities, water and sewer systems, police and fire protection, ambulance services, waste disposal, and libraries.

The Planning Commission states that the survey was made to determine, through a select sampling process, the attitudes, goals, objectives and values of the persons owning property in Charlevoix County.

Two Held for Break-in

Two Oscoda men, charged with breaking and entering Reusch Jewelry in the Oleson Shopping Center here June 11, were apprehended by the Oscoda Township Police June 29 and returned here.

They are Francis William Tebo, 23, and Steven Anthony Jozefiak, 23, whose bonds were set at $20,000 each when they appreared before Magistrate Howard Talboys Wednesday.

They were remanded to the Charlevoix County Jail to await appearance in District Court for arraignment Tuesday.

Both are parolees from Michigan State Prison at Jackson.

The pair is charged with breaking and entering Reusch Jewelry through a roof vent sometime early in the morning of June 11 and taking more than 50 expensive watches and two trays of less expensive birthstone and other rings.

The case was investigated by the Charlevoix City Police and the Michigan State Police of the Petoskey Post.

Supreme Court Protects Freedom of the Press

The U.S. Supreme Court continued to guarantee all of us a basic individual freedom last week when it unanimously ruled that a Nebraska judge's order restricting news coverage of a sensational mass-murder was an unconstitutional restraint on freedom of the press.

Although the court, in an opinion by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, didn't rule out the possibility that such an order could be issued in other circumstances to protect the right of a defendant to a fair trial, it did reaffirm a basic constitutional liberty for everyone.

The court said "the barriers to prior restraint remain high" and that those barriers hadn't been overcome in the Nebraska case.

The decision marked the first time the court gave full-scale review to a direct prior restraint on news coverage of a criminal case.

Specifically, the high court concluded that the trial judge had not demonstrated that "further publicity, unchecked, would so distort the views of potential jurors" that a fair trial would be impossible.

Furthermore, the court said that the judge had made no attempt to use other measures to assure a fair trial, such as moving or postponing the trial, and the use of elaborate questions in weeding out prospective jurors.

At issue in the free press-fair trial confrontation was a Nebraska Supreme Court order restraining the news media from publishing and broadcasting pre-trial accounts of confessions or statements by Erwin Simants, accused in the mass slaying of a Sutherland, Nebraska, family last October 18.

The gag order also prohibited reporting the facts "strongly implicative" of Simants, who was subsequently found guilty of six counts of first degree murder.

Burger said in last week's opinion that the trial judge rightly concluded that "publicity might impair the defendant's right to a fair trial."

But the flaw, in the court's view, was that the judge "did not purport to say more, for he found only a "clear and present danger that pretrial publicity could impinge upon the defendant's right to a fair trial."

Another problem the high court found in the gag order was that "it is far from clear that prior restraint on publications would protect Simants' rights."

"It is reasonable to assume that, without any news accounts being printed or broadcast, rumors would travel swiftly by word of mouth," Burger said.

"One can only speculate on the accuracy of such reports, given the generative propensities of rumors; they could well be more damaging than reasonably accurate news accounts..."

Burger was joined by Justices Byron White, Harry Blackman, Lewis Powell, and William Rehnquist in the majority opinion.

Although some constitutional experts feel last week's decision strikes a clear blow for freedom of the press, they disagree on how much the ruling would affect press coverage in other trials.

"The Supreme Court ruling doesn't bolt the door on gag rules, but it closes it pretty firmly," said Philip Kurland, law professor at the University of Chicago last week in the Chicago Tribune.

But Northwestern University law professor Victor Rosenblum said, "This present court seems to have a preference for leaving doors open.

"Reports of the ruling indicate that the justices would approve a gag rule if lower courts can show it is necessary to preserve impartially among jurors.

"I can't imagine how that could be shown. I would like to see what guidelines the Supreme Court would set to show the need for a gag rule."

Kurland said that while the ruling discusses only the Nebraska case, "I think the conclusion is consistent with what the high court has done throughout history on this question.

"The line it has always used is that the press cannot be inhibited, but officers of the court--lawyers, clerks, and judges--can be."

We think the unanimous decision of the justices that a gag order restraining publication of news was unconstitutional was more than a victory for a free press and for traditional 1st Amendment rights.

It was an affirmation of the principle that the processes of justice must be open--that all citizens have the right to know how their rights are being protected in the courts.

The court in its decision has placed a monumental barrier across the path of every effort to promote secrecy in government. In a time when we are surrounded by disturbing signs that individual liberties are eroding, this decision is a most welcome reminder that the fundamental purpose of the founders of our government 200 years ago was to assure "the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

President Ford Replies

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
June 23, 1976

Dear Mr. Winter:

I was pleased to receive the open letter to me that you wrote for the Charlevoix Courier following your participation in the White House Fellowship competition.

With so many outstanding individuals to choose from, the Commission members face a demanding task. Indeed, more than 40,000 applications were considered, and you can be very proud of your selection to be in the top thirty.

It is a great tribute to our Nation that so many fine young Americans are interested in putting their special talents to work for our Nation. The Fellowship program performs a vital service and you have my appreciation for your interest in being a part of it.

With my best wishes to you always for every future success.

Tennis Needs Help

Dear Ken,

For some time I have felt Charlevoix has needed a tennis practice wall for developing its tennis players. However, I did nothing about this until about a year ago. At this time we began having to pay to play at the city courts. I approve of this arrangement but felt we were depriving and discouraging the children and the beginners by asking them to pay. This is when we began talking about building a wall and began a campaign for funds to do so.

With one hundred dollars donated and more promised, I set out to find someone to donate land and to make some building commitments. The school came up with the land, and I'm happy to report the physical plan is nearly over.

The tennis wall located on the Senior High School property behind Andy's Tire World is now usable. Though the fencing is not up yet and the painting is not finished, you can hit your tennis balls against the wall to practice your strokes. I've been checking for a week now at various times and am glad to report that from one to eight players have been batting away each time I've been by. Drive down the alley sometime and see for yourself....or better yet take your racquet and hit a few.

Now...let me share with you some of the construction costs as things are nearing completion. The concrete alone came to $910.06, and the men to spread it cost another $408.00. Then came the paint, fence, etc.; these bills we have not received.

The eighteen sheets of exterior plywood and the labor to install them were donated by Freedman Artcraft with George Lusk heading the crew. My thanks also go to Kit Carson Lumber Company for donating much of the fencing. Special thanks must also be given Medusa and Jerry Staublin who spent several hours grading and filling the area as well as laying forms for the cement. Thanks also to the people donating the $100 that started all this.

However, friends, now we need some contributions for the wall from you. I hope not to be saddled with the entire $1,500 bill. Please send your tax deductible check for "Tennis Backboard" to me. Thanks!

Sincerely,
Dave Fowler

Rainy Days a Boon To Resort Industry

One of the surprising contradictions of the tourist industry is that we couldn't survive without a few rainy days.

One sunny afternoon recently I stopped for coffee at a local restaurant and overheard one of the waitresses complaining to a customer that it had been a very poor day from the standpoint of tips.

"I wish it would rain," she said wistfully, looking out the window at the sun-dappled street. "Yesterday in the rain we had people lined up for tables."

Shopkeepers in Charlevoix, Petoskey and Harbor Springs will tell you that it is the gray, overcast, drizzly days when sun-bathing and other outdoor activities are out of the question that they do most of their business.

Vacationers seem to flock to town in foul weather to pick up groceries, eat out and "do" the summer shops.

Another strange anomaly of the tourist business is that it is more fun to shop out-of-town than it is at home.

I suppose it is because the merchandise is a little different from what vacationers are accustomed to.

A friend in Charlevoix stopped at Oleson's Variety Store a few days ago and couldn't help overhearing two summer visitors oh-ing and ah-ing over items in the housewares department.

"I can't find anything like this at home," one of them commented.

Our friend, who is a curious type, couldn't imagine where in the world they had come from to be so impressed with merchandise that has become almost old hat to those of us who live in Charlevoix year-'round.

Before long it became apparent that the pair hailed from Ann Arbor—one of the major quality retail merchandise centers in southern Michigan.

There also is a peculiar fascination about merchandise—even necessary, every-day items—that are purchased out-of-town. Such purchases acquire qualities all their own—even though they are identical to items that could be purchased a block from home.

Once while traveling through Gettysburg, Pa., I ran across a bargain on Jockey underwear and picked up a few pairs in a local department store. That's the only underwear I out-grew before it wore out, because I always saved it "for good." Every time I put it on I felt like Gen. George Meade or Abraham Lincoln—just because I bought it in Gettysburg.

Psychologists probably would tell you that items purchased on vacation are more cherished than other merchandise because of the pleasant experiences associated with them.

Probably what's most important of all is the fact that our shops are well stocked with quality merchandise, reflecting the good taste that is the hallmark of the retail business in northwestern Michigan.

So the next time it rains, smile. That's our bread and butter.

Erma Bombeck

Last summer, when our family took to the highways, we noted that every 15 miles or so there was an exit on the freeway marked, "REST AREA." As we whizzed by, we saw happy families at play. Daddy was making yummies over a grill, the kids were tossing a frisbee, Mother was moving a picnic table that was chained to the ground to the shade and the dog was holding his stomach with laughter.

"We could do that," I said enviously. "It wouldn't take much to toss a cooler, a bag of charcoal, and a few folding chairs in the back seat. We could stretch our legs, use the facilities, get a cold drink of water, and Daddy could read one of those big maps they frame in glass to find out where we are."

This year, everyone forgot but me. When we packed the car, I announced, "No more driving for days to find a restaurant where grease is the beverage. This year, it's the rest areas for the Bombecks."

We were on the road only 15 minutes, when we saw our first rest area. "Wanta stop?" asked my husband. "No need," I smiled confidently. "There'll be another one in 30 miles."

I was right. Thirty miles later was another rest area. Another thirty miles, we saw another one. Then lunchtime came and we never saw another one.

At two o'clock, the children became restless and started to kick the back of the seat in protest. "Sit back and put your seat belt on," I commanded.

"I ate it," came the reply.

At 2:30, one child with his nose pressed against the window shouted, "Rest area spotted at 9 o'clock." We swiveled around and said numbly, "Rest are acknowledged...-negative...on wrong side of turnpike."

At three o'clock, our stomachs were singing as a group. We were irritable, listless and one of the kids had raw hamburger breath but I couldn't prove it.

"Check the road map," said my husband. "Isn't that a rest area marked with a little teepee? Don't you see it?"

"No. It's my saliva," I said.

By four o'clock we could stand it no longer. My husband pulled over to a soft shoulder under a sign that read, "NO PARKING ANYTIME." Here, we ripped through plastic with our teeth, ate cold wieners, and watched tomatoes drip off our elbows while we were blown off our feet by passing traffic.

We weren't on our way 15 minutes, when we saw a sign, "REST AREA."

I knew without looking that there would be one every 30 miles from here on in.

Applause Should Be Allowed

A year's quota was force-filled in only 12 hours on a recent Sunday when I heard the same minister speak twice. So it seemed fair enough to ask the person sitting next to me: "Where is Madlyn O'Hair when a guy really needs her?"

I was only kidding. The person sitting next to me, sharing handcuffs, was my wife. She has been singing in the same church choir for 34 years and she doesn't think much of wise guys who make cute jokes about church services.

She doesn't even think it's funny when I tell people she is going to stay in that choir until they give her a solo.

The reason for hearing two sermons in one day was The Graduate, my son.

He and the other grads from our church, and their parents, were honored at a breakfast before the morning service. It was impossible to eat and run, because of the handcuffs, so I heard sermon No. 1.

Baccalaureate was that evening in the high school, which meant sermon No. 2. It was a nice coincidence that our minister had been invited to speak. He is good, and it was really no terrible chore to attend a double feature. In fact, my wife could have unlocked the cuffs and I would have stayed on a trusty status.

But my dumb mind would have wandered at the Sermon on the Mount. So, despite the minister's eloquence, I had two unholy thoughts while he spoke.

I wondered if there were any atheists among the 480 graduates in my son's class. And I wondered why it had to be so quiet on the basketball court.

Madalyn O'Hair is the nation's most famous atheist. Recently I chided her for trying to stop Detroit city employes from praying on public property. I said the alleged violation of the church-state separation was so minimum and elusive as to be laughable and hardly worth the time of such a high-powered anti-Christian as Ms. O'Hair.

But I would not laugh if she aimed her guns at my son's baccalaureate, held in the public school gym.

A baccaleaureate is an organized religious ceremony held for graduates. There is never any attempt to disguise it as anything else. Prayer is dominant. The spaker is a clergyman and God is praised.

So when a baccalaureate is held on public property, the separation between church and state becomes invisible and the U.S. Constitution is clearly violated.

Certainly there are some non-Christian taxpayers supporting a school large enough to graduate 480 kids in one spew. If not atheist, maybe Jewish, or Buddhist.

How come they don't complain about their tax money being spent to promote Christianity? Why hasn't some non-believer sent out a call for Madalyn O'Hair to come save the school district from being prayed into insolvency?

I think I know why. When it comes to getting stuck by the government, atheists bleed the same as Presbyterians. Non-Christians have seen school buildings used for such universally accepted educational events as Rotary meetings, karate classes and Republican rallies.

If the tax-financed walls won't collapse on a rock concert, they should be strong enough to withstand "Onward Christian Soldiers."

The non-Christians can see nothing sinister – and nothing binding – in a minister leading a prayer on the basketball court. It's no big deal, and no reason to hassle their Christian friends. Majority rules and the minority goes along graciously, with class.

Which is nice. Let's hear it for the broad-minded atheists. But no fair applauding in church. Not even in a gymnasium if a baccalaureate is in session.

Which brings us to my second wandering thought. Our minister delivered a fine speech that evening, but it was greeted with dead silence.

This was on a basketball floor, where a two-point sermon didn't get a murmur of admiration.

Why is it against the law, or against God, or whatever, to applaud in church, or at a religious ceremony held anywhere? I've heard great singing in church, and wise words. And I've had to stifle my honest reactions to keep from showing as much appreciation as I give automatically, and halfheartedly, to the fifth curtain call after a play that didn't deserve two claps.

Applause should be allowed at baccalaureates held in school gyms, at least. It would be a great disguise. If Madalyn O'Hair were walking by, she'd never guess what was going on inside.

And I say this knowing full well how awkward it is to clap hands while handcuffed to the person sitting next to you.

Meet Charlevoix

Bertha Parsons

Bertha (Mrs. William) Parsons has lived in the Norwood area all her life. On July 10 Norwood will celebrate the Nation's Bicentennial and give a nod to its own 110 year history. Here we talk with Mrs. Parsons about plans for the celebration and about the Norwood area itself.

COURIER: What is planned for your celebration?

PARSONS: We will have a street parade at 3 o'clock followed by a flag-raising ceremony at the Township Hall. At 5 o'clock there will be a potluck picnic at the Township Park—everyone is asked to bring a dish to pass and folding chairs and tables. Then at 8 o'clock in the evening we will gather at the Township Hall for a party with special music, singing, and dancing.

COURIER: Who is invited to the celebration?

PARSONS: We are inviting all old-timers, friends and visitors. It's really going to be a homecoming.

COURIER: What will you do if it rains?

PARSONS: We'll have the picnic in the Township Hall. By the way, we're having a bee to clean up the hall, make new curtains, etc.

COURIER: Who is in charge of the celebration?

PARSONS: Mrs. Bill Bellinger. Also, K. C. Festerling, former Extension Director for Emmet County, will be one of the judges.

COURIER: Tell us something about Norwood.

PARSONS: It was once a thriving and prosperous lumbering community--founded in 1866. It was larger than Charlevoix but because it was by-passed by the railroad and the highway it is now just a friendly and picturesque village. In the early days, many boats docked during the summer months to load and unload passengers and freight, including lumber and shingles and supplies of staples for the local store and boarding house. Here's a newspaper clipping from 1872 that says the Norwood mill, containing two saws, circular and upright, sawed 19,000 feet of lumber in one day.

COURIER: What is the strange looking building in this picture?

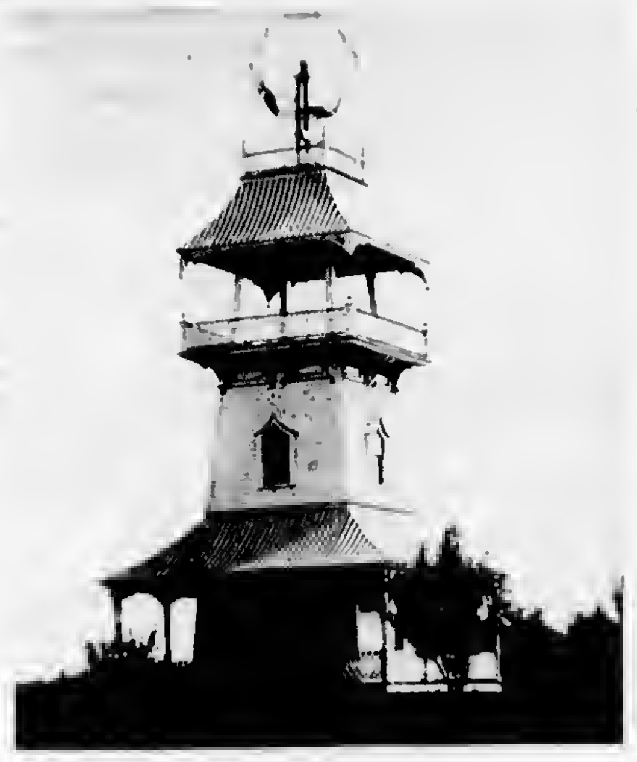
PARSONS: It was a windmill. It pumped water to the village. It was blue and white and the real Norwood landmark. The band used to play concerts in the open part.

COURIER: The lumber dock, store, windmill, and boarding house are gone now, aren't they?

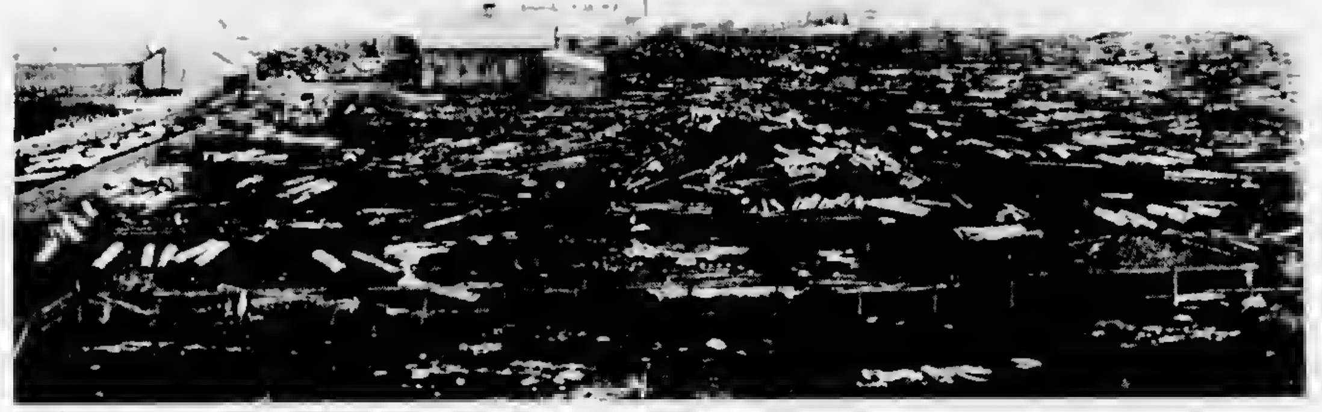
PARSONS: Yes, but many of the old houses are still there and so are the Township Hall and the original United Methodist Church building. The Church still serves the area, many families of whom are descendants of the first families who settled here. It is the oldest church in Charlevoix County, started in 1880 and dedicated in 1885.

COURIER: Do you have many community activities now?

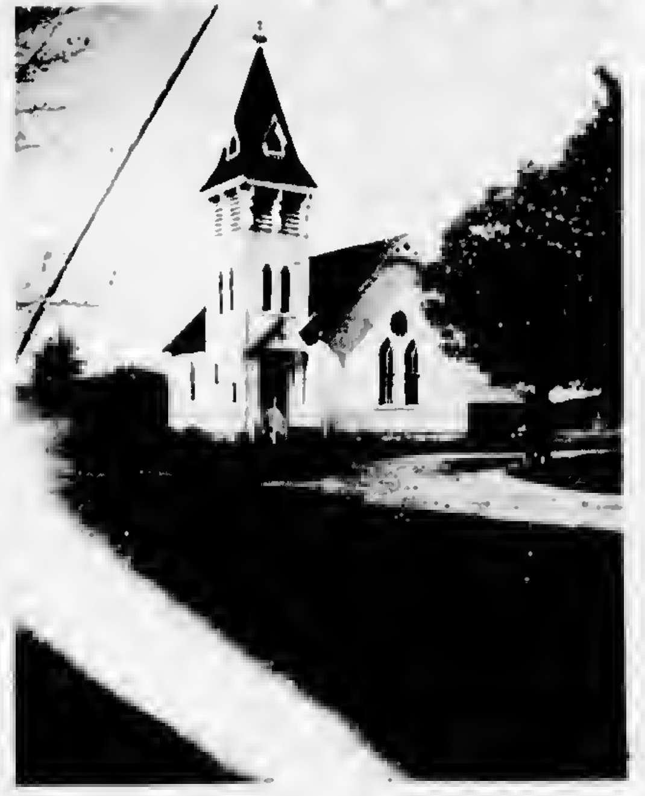
PARSONS: Yes, especially during the summer. Last week we had a strawberry festival. We picked our own strawberries then made and sold strawberry shortcake, ice cream and ice cream cones. It is a fundraising project for the church and everyone enjoys it. On August 7 we are going to have a flea market and bazaar. We are very proud of our little cemetery and every spring we have a community bee to clean it up and get it ready for summer.



THIS STRANGE looking building was a windmill to supply water to residents of Norwood. It also served as a bandstand.



MILLIONS OF feet of lumber were shipped from this mill at Norwood on boats that made regular trips to the village.



THE UNITED METHODIST Church in Norwood is the oldest church in Charlevoix County. It has seen the community change from a bustling lumber town to a quiet residential area.

Petoskey Stone Tower Now in Local Library

Two hundred "stories" high, eight and a half feet tall and weighing about 235 pounds, the tower was built by Bob Miles over a period of three years as his personal Bicentennial project.

It has previously been on display in several places in Northwestern Michigan, including the Grand Traverse Area Rock and Mineral Show in Traverse City last October.

Each story of the tower represents one year in the history of the United States. The outer square of the base represents the country before the coming of the white man. The inner square of the base is made of 13 sections, each representing one of the original colonies. On each corner of this square the elevated letters, "S", "W", "P" and "A" indicate the four basic freedoms of Speech, Worship, Press and Assembly.

The first story of the tower represents the year 1776, marking the Declaration of Independence and the beginning of the period under the Confederation.

The next four stories represent the years 1787 to 1790, during which the 13 colonies became a nation.

The tower builds upward with special markings for the wars in which the nation has been engaged, depression years noted by black Petoskey stones, and the single story at the top (the 200th) commemorating the nation's Bicentennial.

"Since George Washington tried to point the way for the young nation, the miniature Washington Monument stands atop the Bicentennial Tower, pointing the way to the future," Miles explains.

The plaque at the base of the tower is made of shipwreck wood taken from Lake Michigan, and all the Petoskey stones in the tower were picked up by Miles along the lake shore.

Miles not only found all the stones but he cut and hand-polished them himself. He says that it takes about 20 minutes to polish each stone and another two days to tumble them.

Bob Miles' Bicentennial Tower is now at display at the Charlevoix Public Library. The library is open from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Library notes

By ELEANOR RATIGAN

The Library has a variety of current titles for your lazy summer reading. Some of them are entertaining, some inspiring, some informative.

The new Jacqueline Susann book, "Dolores", is mild compared to her previous best sellers. Her books have been published in more than thirty languages world-wide and are estimated to have sold over 50 million copies in all editions. Before her death in 1974, she was one of the most successful writers in the history of American publishing.

"Dolores", her last and final book is the story of the beautiful and fashionable young widow of an assassinated American president. She finds herself too poor to sustain her extravagant tastes and too lonely to be fulfilled as a woman. The tragic story deals with her quest for money and for men.

Fred Friendly has been around a long time. He began his broadcasting career in 1938 and, after serving in the CBI theater during World War II, he returned to New York where he met and former a partnership with Edward R. Murrow. They worked together for 12 years and together they were responsible for many of television's most distinguished moments.

For the last ten years Mr. Friendly has been the Edward R. Murrow Professor of Journalism at the Columbia School of Journalism, as well as serving the Ford Foundation as Advisor on Communications. His absorbing and informative new book "The Good Guys, The Bad Guys and The First Amendment" deals with free speech vs. fairness in broadcasting. The First Amendment of the Constitution reads in part: "Congress shall make no law....abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press...." The Fairness Doctrine directs broadcasters "To devote a reasonable amount of time to the discussion of controversial issues; and to do so fairly, in order to afford reasonable opportunity for opposing viewpoints."

Can this Doctrine and the First Amendment coexist? The complex and profoundly important issues resulting from this question are examined by Fred Friendly, a pioneer of broadcast journalism.

Sylvian Wallace has come out with an explosive new novel which is certain to please the ladies. It is a compelling story about women and what they really feel about their loves and husbands, and most important, what they do about it. If open war is ever declared in the battle of the sexes, Sylvia Wallace will be made a general. This is a fascinating look at the rich, Beautiful People who search for youth, beauty, love and salvation at a voluptuous California beauty spa called "The Fountain". Bound to be a best seller.

For millions of readers, the poetry of Helen Steiner Rice is a living testimony to the reality of God's action in human lives. Her mission has always been to pressure readers of God's presence and love and to provide comfort and inspiration for countless numbers of people suffering from loneliness, grief, ill health, depression and despair. Her two new volumes "Loving Promises" and "Someone Cares" will bring serene joy and peace and the spirit of joy to everyone who reads them.

If you enjoy Peter DeVries—and who doesn't—You won't want to miss his new major novel "I Hear America Swinging". He has a unique talent for combing antic satirical comedy with the stark realities of death and defeat. He is one of the funniest writers, but he can stab you in the heart, too, and make you like it. This is a crazy book with a mixed-up plot but it travels merrily along until the final page.

The Leaning Tree

Poets and song writers have long thought the strawberry a worthy fruit to sing and write about. Strawberry lovers not only appreciate words and music about their favorite fruit but also anxiously wait for its seasonal arrival. That time is here!

All indications are that prices will be a little higher this season but reports are that the supply is good. Of course you can save money if you buy at roadside stands or pick your own.

When selecting the berries look for their green caps. The caps seal in juices and help keep the flavor of the strawberry. If the cap is perky and green it is also a good sign the berries are not ton long off the vine.

Help strawberries "keep their cool" by sorting and refrigerating them as soon as possible. For longer keeping refrigerate them unwashed and gently roll them onto a tray or plate and then cover with waxed paper. Wash the berries just before you are ready to use them and remove the caps last.

You will get about five, one-half cup servings from a quart of berries. All Michigan varieties, but the Robinson are recommended for freezing or for jam making. The Robinson is delicinus for fresh eating but lacks the firmness desired for frozen berries.

One cup of strawberries contains about the same amount of Vitamin C as a six-ounce glass of orange juice. They are great for the dieter, only 55 calories in a cup of berries! Watch the cream, sugar, sour cream and whipped cream, though. If you'd like a sugar free Strawberry Jam recipe try this one.

SUGAR-FREE FRESH STRAWBERRY JAM

2 Tablespoons lemon juice;
2 Tablespoons water
1 envelope unflavored gelatin; 1½ teaspoons arrowroot or cornstarch
2 cups-washed and hulled strawberries
Sugar substitute equal to 1 cup sugar.

1. Combine lemon juice, water, gelatin and arrowroot in a saucepan. Heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin and arrowroot dissolve.
2. Add berries to gelatin mixture. Heat to boiling over medium heat, stirring constantly. Boil 3 minutes.
3. Stir in sugar substitute. Pour into jars and cover. Store in refrigerator or freezer.

A LITERARY BOMB

If you are inclined to think seriously and for yourself, you should read "PETER AND THE KEYS". The explosive novel by a local author who tries to know and tell it like it is, challenges both intellect and spirit. BULLETIN

Human Services asks for help

We are looking for a kind-hearted skipper who would volunteer to conduct a cruise for a group of Adult Foster Care Residents. The total number of people involved would be approximately 15. If you have a boat large enough to accommodate this many people, or know of someone who has a boat, that would—let us know. We guarantee that this will be a vicarious experience—making other people happy always is!

Do you know something about child development? If so, would you be willing to donate your time to help develop an education program designed to instruct small groups in this area? Anyone with any kind of expertise is invited to join in this project.

If you know of someone who is 65-Blind-Paraplegic-Quadriplegic Totally and permanently disabled—we want to know their name. These people may be eligible for homestead property tax credits. We are currently planning an all-out county effort to identify these people and assist them in applying for their tax credit. Please help us with this outreach effort—you'll be saving some money for an aged or disabled person who might have need for an extra $100.00.

Have you heard of children's foster care? Well, some adults also require foster care. Charlevoix County is in desperate need of such homes to care for adults who are unable to be maintained in their own home and/or have been released from a state institution. It is a demanding, full time job that is not easy but it does represent a challenge. There are personal and financial rewards. You can earn up to $298.00 per month by caring for one person. Get the facts – then make a decision.

the latter continued to utilize the airport facility without cost; questioned whether the city's ordinance and fee schedule might not have been meant to protect Joseph McPhillips who, in lieu of cash, manages the airport and receives in return the use of the facility and revenues from the services at the airport; and how the city had arrived at the fee schedule.

During Thursday's hearing it was brought out that no airport north of Grand Rapids has an annual fee as compared with a single landing fee; the amount of fees at other airports in the area and, among things, that Welke feels a fee of $2.50 or $3.00 would be equitable.

Make Sure You Use A Licensed Builder

With home building and remodeling at its height in the Charlevoix area, Michigan Attorney General Frank J. Kelley points out that licenses are required of persons doing this work for others.

State law requires a person who builds homes to be licensed as a "residential builder" and those who do repair work must be licensed "maintenance and alteration contractors" The latter includes everything from putting in a swimming pool or air conditioning to putting up new siding or even moving a house

Kelley suggests that before you have work done, ask to see a contractor's license. If he doesn't have one, find someone who does. He also suggests that you tell your county prosecutor about any contractor working without a license because he is breaking the law.

Also, Kelley says that if you don't like the contractor's work after he does it for you, tell him so. If you can't get satisfaction, you may enlist the help of the state government.

BOB MILES, Charlevoix photographer, autographs his recently published book, "Bob Miles' Charlevoix A Century in Pictures" for local residents that purchased the collector's piece. The book, a Bicentennial project of the Charlevoix Historical Society, is being sold to earn money for a local historical museum As the name indicates, the book consists of over 300 pictures collected and captioned by the Charlevoix photographer during his long career in the area. The book can be purchased for $25 from the Charlevoix Historical Society, P.O Box 525, Charlevoix, Michigan, 49720.

Gasoline Shortage Expected

The Northwest section of Michigan is particularly vulnerable to a shortage of energy because of its dependence on tourism, which would rate a low priority.

This statement was made recently by Michael Dively, director of the Michigan Energy Administration (MEA) to members of the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission.

He told the group that the United States was "crisis oriented" in its energy policies rather than "solution oriented" and that this is leading to a lack of action on the part of the federal government.

Dively further noted that Michigan can produce only five percent of the energy it uses and that in any future energy crisis the state could be given a low priority in the allocation of energy resources such as natural gas.

He said there were no easy solutions and that over a ten year period Michigan residents will have to resign themselves to more expensive energy.

"We have probably just about seen the last of the 60 cents a gallon gasoline," he concluded.

Nuclear Hearing Planned

Private citizens and or organizations concerned with the federal government's proposal to construct a nuclear waste dumping facility in Northeast Michigan may express their concern at two July 6 hearings.

The first hearing will be held at 8:30 a.m. at Cooley Law School in Lansing, while another will be held the same day at 2:30 at the Alpena High School in Alpena.

Tom Washington, executive director of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, will testify at the Lansing hearing along with representatives of the electrical power industry, Michigan State government and Environmental Protection Agency.

Steffes Opens New Driving Golf Range

Ron Steffes announced Saturday that he is opening a new driving range in Charlevoix. It will be located on M-66 across from Kit Carson.

The new 450-yard facility will have 28 driving pads and will be lighted. Ron said the range is expected to open in early July and will be open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.

A nine hole mini-golf course is planned for later in the year along with a snack bar for the clubhouse, which will make the new range something that can be enjoyed by the entire family.

Anyone wishing more information on "Ron's Driving Range" may contact Ron Steffes at 547-4159.

Seven Candidates Compete for 1976 Venetian Crown

By FRAN MARTIN

Charlevoix's famous Venetian Festival gets underway next Thursday when seven local residents vie for the 1976 Venetian Queen crown. The Festival will be held July 22-25.

Those competing in this year's pageant include Dona Bellows, Kim Gould, Diane Haggard, Karen Hollow, Sue Mabee, Kathleen Martin and Mary Wolf, according to Queen's committee chairperson Mrs. Thomas Schaperkotter.

"We are very pleased with the interest shown and I know that Charlevoix will be well represented by one of these fine candidates during the coming year" she said, in making the announcement.

An exciting time is in store for the Queen and her court. All candidates, the judges who are yet to be named and the Queen's committee will meet at the Grey Gables Inn for a luncheon and personal interviews Thursday and will appear in the Pageant Thursday evening.

On Friday evening, the 1976 Venetian Queen and her court will make their first public appearance when they are introduced at the Venetian Pageant of Drums at Kipke Field at 8 p.m. Friday evening.

Afterwards they will ride on the city's Venetian float in the street parade at 1 p.m. Saturday, be introduced to the crowd in East Park Saturday evening and later view the Venetian Boat Parade on Round Lake.

The new Venetian Queen will represent Charlevoix in all events during the coming year, climaxing the year by appearing in the National Cherry Queen Pageant in June 1977. The 1975 Queen is Margie Corey.

Here is a brief rundown of the 1976 Venetian Queen candidates.

Dona Bellows

Dona Bellows, 18, is 5'3", has light brown hair and green eyes. Her hobbies are reading, swimming, watching Humphrey Bogart movies, bicycling and walking. She has displayed a wide range of interests, having lettered in basketball and track, been a member of the marching band, likes football, dancing, and horseback riding. She also was named to attend Wolverine Girls State, was a member of the Student Council, a cheerleader for three years, regional finalist in Bicentennial youth debates and active in drama and forensics.

She also attended North Central Michigan College

Drum and Bugle Corps Plan Venetian Showing

The 1976 Venetian Festival will be one of the finest in many years with a full program of events beginning with the Venetian Queen's Pageant on Thursday, July 22, according to Bill Supernaw, general chairman of Charlevoix's major summer event.

He says that a full evening of entertainment to be known as the Venetian Pageant of Drums on Friday night and a 2½-hour variety show in East Park following the street parade on Saturday afternoon have been added to a jam-packed three days known as the Venetian Festival.

Featured in the Venetian Pageant of Drums will be six drum and bugle corps including General Putnam's Men of Ottawa, Ohio, the Bandettes of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., the Guardsmen of Flint, the Pacesetters of Melvindale, the Entertainers of Sarnia, Ont., and the Midshipmen of Petoskey. The latter, as the host corps, will appear in the pageant but will not compete for honors. Bill Stephens will serve as master of ceremonies. The visiting corps will appear in Saturday's street parade.

The number of entries in the street parade is growing and will include the visiting drum and bugle corps and the Charlevoix and Harbor Springs bands. Supernaw said he would rather wait another week before he announces the number of other entires in the parade which will begin at the high school and march north on Bridge Street to Clinton

John Haggard Placed Back On August Primary Ballot

The name of John E. Haggard as a candidate for county commissioner from District 3 (Charlevoix and Hayes Townships) will be on the Primary ballot as the result of a decision rendered late last week by Circuit Judge Martin B. Breighner.

Previously, Haggard's petition for candidacy had been declared invalid by both the Charlevoix County Elections Commission and the Elections Board of the Michigan Department of State because he signed and dated the petition prior to getting signatures. This is contrary to elections law.

However, Haggard went back to the signers and received from them affidavits stating they had signed on the date opposite their names. It was because of the affidavits that Judge Breighner ruled in favor of Haggard.

Cass Toton, candidate for county commissioner from Boyne City, was also disqualified by both the County Elections Commission and the State Elections Board but he did not appeal to the Court.

Several other candidates were disqualified by the County Elections Commission but did not appeal to the State Elections Board. They were Clayton Smith, candidate for county commissioner; Ronald Bernodyn, candidate for county commissioner; John Martin, candidate for county commissioner; Nick DeYoung, candidate for county surveyor; and Bradley Howard, candidate for county treasurer.

The disqualifications were made for several reasons, most of them because the circulators of the petitions either failed to date them or signed and dated them before the signatures were obtained.

Several of the disqualified candidates are expected to run for office as write-ins.

Schools Consider Third Bond Issue

By FRAN MARTIN

Charlevoix School Board members took the first step towards seeking funds for the rennovation of the middle school and expansion of the high school Monday night.

The board adopted a resolution to apply for preliminary state approval of bonds to be considered by voters in a special election Sept. 27.

This marks the district's third attempt to get a bond issue passed by the voters to do this project. Last March, a similar proposal was nearly defeated.

School officials have yet to determine the amount of the proposed bond issue. Officials are expected to release the figures by mid-August.

In other action, the board approved the purchase of student accident insurance from First Agency of Kalamazoo at a basic cost of $1.25 per pupil plus 15 cents per pupil expanded benefits for the 1976-77 school year. The basic rate covers student risks to $5,000 with a maximum for sports of $28,000 per claim. In approving the proposal, it was again pointed out that this insurance is not meant to be the family's primary insurance, but a supplement to other insurance.

A subsidy of $2,000 for the school athletic programs was approved, but resulted in a lengthy discussion during which it was pointed out that the program is not self-supporting. With 11 Varsity sports for both boys and girls and others being requested, it was decided that a long look should be taken before making any decisions regarding the

Council Hammers Out Airport Solution

By MARSHA ROBINSON

A proposed solution to a dispute over regulations governing the commercial use of the Charlevoix airport was hammered out by City Council Monday night.

Council agreed to open court-ordered negotiations with Welke Aviation, Inc. with a proposal for a $4 landing fee to be charged to every commercial operator using the facility.

Mayor Edward P. Hansen charged that the action is an attempt to "squelch the disagreement" between the city and Welke over the current airport ordinance which Welke charges is discriminatory.

Regulations contained in the ordinance which would require the Beaver Island based air taxi-freight service to pay $300 a month or $3,600 a year for the use of the airport would be waived and amended at a later date under the terms of council's proposal.

Also to be waived under a hardship clause would be requirements that Welke maintain an office at the airport as well as a staff for a given number of hours.

Verbal support was given to a suggestion by City Attorney Donald Berlage that any commercial operator making more than 20 flights per year into Charlevoix be required to enter into a contract with the city covering insurance questions.

Welke has made a total of 407 recorded landings at the airport since its service began in May of 1975, Mayor Hansen reported.

In September of 1975, the city adopted the ordinance outlining the use of the airport and establishing landing fees.

Paul Welke, President of Welke Aviation, felt the requirements of the ordinance were discriminatory and refused to pay. In December, the city requested an injunction barring his company from using the airport.

Circuit Court Judge Martin Breighner temporarily denied the city's request for injunction, and at a hearing July 1, ordered negotiations to begin towards an equitable agreement between the two parties.

THE HUS OF SCANDINAVIAN NEEDLECRAFT

Hobbycraft Show Judged Successful

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce presented its most successful Lakeside Hobbycraft Fair during the eight years it has been in existence, according Chamber Director Jacquie Merta.

The fair attracted more than 100 entries that featured a host of hobbies and crafts that included everything from miniature doll furniture, jewelry, pottery, antiques, scrimshaw and countless other items, the majority of which could be used some place in the home.

Carr Takes First Place

Elaine Carr, a junior at Michigan State and a regular member of the women's track team, captured a first place in the 400 meter high hurdles during the Michigan A.A.U. held at Michigan State Sunday.

Her time for the event was 63.2.

She also placed in the 100 meter hurdles, placing fourth in this event which she had not run since April.

Suggestion

I have a suggestion to the City Council. Either the city taxpayers should receive a certain percentage of their water used during the summer at a discount (in order to water their lawns and gardens) or the city garden plot users should be charged for the water that they now receive free of charge. As it stands now, people who prefer to use the city garden plots (near the airport) can water their gardens without any addition to their own sewage and water bill. On the other hand, many city residents who like to have their garden on their own property (on which taxes are paid) must suffer a sizeable increase on their utility bill, especially during a dry summer such as this year. Would a Council member care to comment?

Impatient

What I cannot understand is why are some people so impatient and not understanding. So someone had to wait for the bridge to open! Someone else objects to construction noise in the summer! Please folks, take into consideration the fact that some work is impossible to do right in cool, damp weather such as painting and cement pouring. The work just cannot dry fast then, especially low down by the water.

When such expensive maintenance work is done it has to be done right. The results of all that noisy annoyance pays, I believe, for all slight inconvenience caused and also, once finished is finished! So, please bear with us, it is not done to annoy, but to improve. To the majority who patiently bear up with it a hearty thanks to you. Frank Kubicek.

87-Foot Craft Visits Round Lake

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

When George Kress's wife said she was "tired of camping out on a sailboat," Kress, a total sailor, had the "ARIA" created.

"ARIA", an 87-foot boomless sailboat, which spent several days last week anchored in Round Lake, was designed to meet a multitude of dreams and needs.

As a result, "ARIA" is unique in several aspects:

–Cutter rigged, "ARIA" is one of two all welded aluminium boats in existence (previously aluminium boats were riveted)

–She is boomless. This fact, generally caused a double take as Charlevoix observers first gulped at the boat's size and then reexamined her, wondering if she'd "lost her boom at sea."

–"ARAI's" sails, electronically controlled, all furl, wrap up around themselves, vertically, including the main sail. In a conventional sail boat the main is furled by hand horizontally around the boom.

–"ARIAs. winches are electric. The sheets (ropes which control the sails) are controlled by the push of a button on the boat's control panel, which turns the winches. The only hand work is cleating the sheets (winding the rope around a cleat) once the sail is at the desired angle.

–All sails can be set or lowered in 35 seconds.

–And, "ARIA" combines the sailing ability of a racer with the comfort, below decks, of a power yacht.

Kress, who described his enterprises as "the corrugated shipping and container business" lives in Green Bay, Wisconsin. He owns "two papermills, eight or nine box plants, and a sawmill in Arkansas," he explained in an interview aboard "ARIA".

Kress began sailing some 35 years ago in a 14 foot daysailboat, and graduated through a 25-foot sailboat, a 38-footer, and a 58-foot Sparkman-Stevens Yawl.

Mrs. Kress sailed with him, despite a growing urge to quit "camping out."

"But she's been by best crew on a spinnaker."

"She's good in emergencies, too," Kress emphasized.

"She wanted the comfort of a power boat.

"But I'd rather play golf than drive a power boat".

Kress also dreamed of sailing into his 80's.

"I dreamed of a boat on which we could handle all the sails quickly and easily, without a lot of manpower," Kress recalled, sitting in the boat's main salon, around a medium sized dining room table.

Kress has a crew of three, a captain and two college boys.

Kress sought out the best designers and boat builders he knew. Eventually, he chose designer Frank MacLean, of New York, and builders Palmer Johnson of Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin.

The boat, which is called a "centerboard cutter" draws 6' 8" with her centerboard up, and 18' 9" with it down.

The small draft is essential to Kress's annual cruising through the North Channel and Georgian Bay, where he loves to sneak into rarely visited anchorages.

Captain Bob Warner, an excellent sailor himself, said he depends on Kress's navigating ability to thread their way into the tricky holes or narrow passages.

The boomless main, which was tried on one other smaller boat, but not in conjunction with the electric vertical furling, was MacLean's solution to Kress's desire for minimal crew.

The main sail is controlled by three sheets (ropes) each running to three back stays (strong cables running from the stern of the boat to the top of the mast, to hold the mast upright).

The elimination of a boom, which in such a large boat would be extremely long and heavy, greatly simplifies sail handling and permits the use of a small crew.

The two head sails' (the foreward sails) sheets, like the main sheets, all come to a "winching platform" toward the stern of the boat. Just in front of the "winching platform" is the wheel (steering wheel) and an instrument panel.

Instruments include: compass, automatic pilot, windspeed and direction indicators, boat speed indicator, engine controls, depth sounder (with shallow water warning buzzers) and engine monitors.

The boat carries the usual radio and radar equipment.

Sails can be changed or modified from these two work areas with the press of a button.

The second sail is a genoa jib whose size can be reduced as the wind speed goes up.

As a dedicated sailor, Kress constantly looks for ways to increase the efficiency of his "sailing machine."

As part of the designing process a six-foot model of "ARIA" was made and tested in a wind tunnel. The sailing ability of the model was put on a computer program.

Kress has these programs and using a hand-held Texas Instrument's computer (SR-52) he races against himself.

Crew member Ben Miller from Grand Rapids, who'd raced sailboats previously, initially worried that cruising on such a luxurious and automated boat would be boring.

State Plans Massive Tax Survey

Four thousand Michigan business firms will be asked this month to tell the state how they view and are affected by the Single Business Tax, Lieutenant Governor James J. Damman said today.

A task force appointed by Governor Milliken in April to study possible changes in the tax met recently in Lansing to hear a progress report from the task force staff and to organize into industry study groups. Damman is Chairman of the task force.

The scientific survey, to be conducted by Market Opinion Research of Detroit, will be sent to a selected sampling of 200 companies in each of 20 business groups, Damman said. The returns will be computerized and the data used to study patterns of responses by type of company, financial structure, and legal form.

Changes in the Single Business Tax may be recommended as a result of the task force analysis of the survey data, Damman said.

"We strongly encourage business firms that receive a questionnaire in the mail to respond as fully as possible. Only by complying a high percentage of returns from the sample will be able to determine accurately how the tax is operating for various segments of the business community," Damman said.

In addition, he noted, trade associations and other groups are being queried for their views, and letters from interested citizens are welcomed.

"We would like to hear from businesses that have been helped by the new tax structure as well as those that feel they have been hurt," the Lieutenant Governor said, "so that any recommendations by the task force will be equitable to businesses of all types."

"Information accumulated by the survey will provide a data base with which to test any amendments to the Single Business Tax the task force may consider, so it is imperative that a complete, accurate Single Business Tax impact profile is developed," Lieutenant Governor Damman pointed out.

Most comments received to date by the task force have come from smaller service-oriented firms and professionals who are paying more under the Single Business Tax than under Michigan's previous tax structure.

The task force decided to create several subcommittees based on business activity, to examine and develop issues for consideration by the entire group. The committees include manufacturers, professionals, trade and construction firms, service companies, and resource-based industries such as agriculture and forestry.

Michigan Milk Needs Different PBB Stand

It's hard for us to imagine that the 60-year-old Michigan Milk Producers Association, with its wealth of experience and knowledge in handling milk, could continue its hard line PBB position.

Its trade publication, the "Michigan Milk Messenger," reported that the state organization is backing current enforcement levels for PBB in various food--including dairy products.

As reported, the PBB enforcement level issue was the topic of a 12-hour hearing in early June where Governor Milliken's scientific advisory panel recommended that the levels be lowered to one part per billion in milk and five parts per billion in meat.

The current level, set by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, (FDA) is .3 parts per million in milk and meat.

The Milk Association says it supports the FDA standard because of "time and expense involved in enforcing a lower level would mean less, instead of more, testing.

"Little would be gained by lowering the tolerance level of PBB in milk since tests on finished fluid milk products at stores have shown no presence of PBB," the Association was reported to have said.

MMPA said in its statement that any lowering of PBB enforcement levels would have to be accompanied by ways to indemnify farmers for their losses; and that quarantines would have to be based on individual cow tests of all animals in a herd instead of on a selected few. And such tests would have to be paid for by the state, MMPA said.

According to the publication, MMPA General Manager Jack Barnes said in his testimony before the hearing officials: "The MMPA board of directors has concluded that in view of the various differences in the scientific community, the best alternative for maintaining a sound and workable enforcement program and for avoiding chaos is to support the current guideline levels (the FDA's .3 ppm)."

"We are confident that if there is conclusive evidence for further reduction, it will be properly evaluated by FDA and prompt and proper action taken," Barnes said. "In the absence of such evidence, however, and until the FDA so acts, we support maintaining present guidelines and that is the position adopted by the MMPA board of directors on June 4."

We won't argue with Mr. Barnes that his organization is concerned for and recognizes the need for a pure and wholesome milk supply for citizens of Michigan. Probably, in Mr. Barnes' own mind, he thinks he is doing what is best for his organization.

But at the same time, it is precisely that attitude that has forced the Michigan milk consumer to go through three years of agonizing uncertainty about PBB.

It is true that the governor's PBB scientific panel said "no specific disease or symptomology in animals or man can presently be associated with exposure to low levels of PBB."

From this task force statement, the MMPA expects us to assume then that there are no problems with PBB and therefore the tolerance level permitted in food should not be changed.

We are tired of this type of logic and the rest of the rhetoric that has come out opposing the changing of the PBB tolerance level.

Until there is conclusive evidence that there are no damaging effects to humans from the consumpton of PBB, we see no other alternative but to lower permissible levels of PBB.

Organizations such as the Michigan Milk Producers Association could be far more beneficial to the public by launching a massive campaign in support of finding out just what PBB does do when consumed.

It was only a year ago that the Milk Messenger publicly criticized the Charlevoix Courier in an editorial for revealing that traces of PBB had been identified in the blood of a Charlevoix farm couple.

Since that public thrashing, we have yet to see the MMPA channel its energies toward getting to the bottom of the PBB problem.

Governor Milliken has publicly disagreed with the state Agriculture Commission's refusal to relent on its acceptance of the federal PBB guidelines of 300 parts per billion.

Although the Governor's proposal to lower permissible levels of PBB does not go all the way in reducing the problem to its lowest possible extent, it is definitely a more positive step than the one exhibited by the Michigan Milk Producers Association.

Presently, the Senate is considering Representative Donald Albosta's HB 6144 that would cut the acceptable amount of PBB in milk and manufactured dairy products and in beef.

Although it is not exactly what the governor is recommending, Albosta's bill comes as close as anything we have seen to restoring a reasonable degree of confidence in the animal products we buy and eat.

Hospital Cancels List

Dear Mr. Winter:

For some time now we have been evaluating the value versus the cost and problems of supplying your newspaper with weekly typewritten lists of patient admissions and discharges.

This evaluation has been discussed with our Medical Staff and Board of Directors and both groups concur in our decision.

We have decided to cease publishing this patient information for several reasons which are listed below:

1. A large percentage of our patients do not want their names listed as having been in the hospital. They feel this is personal and confidential information.

2. Sometimes errors are made and names are put on the list of persons who did not wish their name published and this has caused the hospital problems which could have been serious.

3. The time it takes to process an admission is long enough without having to ask the patient if he or she does or does not want their name published. It also required explaining as to why we are asking them this question.

4. The hospital personnel time it takes to prepare the list is an added cost we can not justify. Lists of all admissions and discharges must be updated each day into categories based on the communities they come from so that it can all be pulled together and typed for delivery to you weekly.

5. In addition to personnel costs, we have costs of paper, postage, envelopes, and photocopier which is also difficult to justify.

These are the main reasons for terminating this practice. The hospital will continue to supply your newspaper the births taking place here, on a weekly basis.

We know you may have questions from many of your readers on this change, but after a few weeks we believe the concern will disappear.

Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to call me.

Sincerely,

Richard L. Krueger Administrator

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

What this country needs is a good, five-cent exorcist to expel the ghosts of last year's Recession.

Although you may have missed it with all of the convention hoopla, the news last week wasn't all good. Whole sale prices edged up another .04 per cent in June — which translates into a 9.6 per cent annual inflation rate, which further translates into more catching up for the poor, benighted wage earners of northern Michigan.

Another ominous note during the week was a report by the federal government that the jobless rate across the country rose from 7.3 to 7.5 in June, the first increase in 12 months.

Now a miniscule fluctuation in one direction or the other really doesn't mean too much in the job market. We expect more jobs to open up in fine weather when the construction business is going full-tilt and tourists are on the move than we do in, say, January.

But this year, unemployment in Michigan and throughout the nation actually increased in June, the very same month that the ranks of unemployed should begin dropping. The jobless rate in Michigan is now back into double digits.

But isn't northern Michigan enjoying the best summer ever?

That is what I thought until Saturday morning when I sauntered downtown for coffee at one of the local restaurants. I sat with an old friend who works in one of the Bridge-st. shops.

"It looks like it's going to be a good summer," I said brightly.

She looked at me skeptically. "What do you mean?"

"Well, there are so many people in town it just looks as if we're off and running," I said.

My friend shook her head. She said last summer, during the depths of the Recession, and the year before during the depths of the Energy Crisis, her shop did better than it is doing this year.

"Folks just aren't spending the way they used to", she said.

To emphasize her point she nodded around the restaurant. It was nineish on a beautiful Saturday morning, with literally dozens of craftsmen setting up shop in East Park for the Hobbycraft Fair. The place should have been jammed. But it wasn't. In fact, it was almost deserted.

"If you think this is bad," my friend said, "you should try the real estate business."

She named one company which looks back fondly at the grim summer of 1975 as a boom year, compared to the summer of '76.

Of course, some segments of the economy are doing very well, thank you. Since everyone must eat, the grocery business is booming and local retailers are doing a fine job of holding prices down to reasonable levels, particularly in their meat departments.

Up until 10 years ago, one national chain with outlets in the area used to advertise the fact that it would remain closed the day after Labor Day in order to mark prices down to pre-summer levels. Holy Moses!

"No Vacancy" signs also appear frequently at local motels, another indication that the tourists are here in force — even though they may not be spending like they did in years past.

All of which means there is still work to do if northern Michigan is to join in the national recovery. Our prices must remain competitive. Our salesmen must remain alert and responsive. Our service must be second to none. And we have to let our summer visitors know what we have to offer.

Fortunately, there is still time left to set records in the summer of '76.

Entertainers know when they've made it.

They leave early on the Carson show.

But how does a wife and mother know it when she becomes a Superstar--a person in her own right?

I'll know.

One day the phone will ring and it will be for me.

I'll see my child in public, speak to him and he'll recognize me.

One of these mornings, out of four cars in the driveway one of them will be running and I'll get it.

Or the kids will set the table and someone else will get the bent fork.

I'll go out to dinner and no one will lean over and whisper just before the bill, "You cashed a check today, didn't you?"

Or I'll go through an entire evening without someone asking me for a nose tissue.

I'll cash a check at the supermarket and not have to leave a blood specimen.

I'll go through the express line with seven items.

I'll know I've broken out of the domestic mold when Klinger, the loony on "M+A+S+H," isn't wearing a dress that I wore to a wedding the week before.

When my calendar has something more on it for the month of April than "Color Eggs."

When my husband stops saying at a party by way of introduction, "You remember my wife, don't you?" and they say, "No."

I'll know I've become something special when someone turns to me before flipping the TV dial, and asks, "Are you watching this?"

When I can have new medicine for my cold instead of using up what's left in the medicine chest.

When I can ask for a "doggy bag" and some smart aleck doesn't say, "You want to eat it here or to go?"

I don't know when, but one of these days it will happen--the respect I so richly deserve will be heaped upon me.

The other night my husband came in looked around and said, "Isn't there anyone home?"

"I'm here," I said.

"C'mon. You know what I mean."

I knew.

Pensively Pornographic

My wife wondered why I spent the afternoon in downtown Highland Park, scratching my forehead and fingering my jaw.

I explained that I was doing pornography research for an organization called Keepers of Community Morals (KCM). This required that I flip pages in a shop that sold nudie-orgy magazines and attend a movie in which the actors had substituted oral sex for shaking hands.

Naturally, I didn't want to be recognized going into a dirty peep show in broad daylight. I must protect my reputation as one of Detroit's most respected night perverts. So I continually squeezed my nose pensively, or stroked my chin wisely. This is a lot cheaper than plastic surgery and a forged passport.

I paid $4 to see "Passions of Carol" at the Krim Theatre. It is a parody on Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," with an acrobat named Carol Scrooge doing all sorts of spooky things with Marley's Ghost.

When a hand touched my shoulder, I was afraid Major Jesse Miller was raiding the place. But it was the man sitting behind me, with a question.

"Why don't they just shake hands?" he asked.

I asked him why he was asking me.

"Because you look so pensive and wise," he said.

I got up and went next door to the Uptown Book Store. I headed straight for the dirty section and the man behind the counter hollered for me to come back. I figured he also wanted to partake of my pensive wisdom, and I began to wonder if maybe I should switch to a less intellectual disguise. I could rub my brow vigorously, or even pick my nose crudely.

But the guy didn't want advice. He wanted 50 cents. It costs that much to browse in the sex department, even if you don't buy anything. I paid him one-handed, ever careful not to drop my disguise completely.

It is difficult to decide upon a purchase from among the hundreds of colorful magazines sold at the Uptown. It is difficult because the same two or three people are on all the covers. These people all like to get a lot of sun from unusual angles. And they don't shake hands much, either.

One wall of magazines is for homosexuals. While browsing there, I rubbed my nose with both shoulders at the same time.

The KCM asked me to investigate Highland Park's porno strip and then make a recommendation to the organization's awards committee. This is the committee which annually awards a Michigan city the Golden Chastity Belt, more commonly known as the Stork, for best suppression of sex and skin. Highland Park has been nominated because of Mayor Miller's current war on smut.

If the mayor succeeds, his city could be a winner. But first the committee must make certain that Highland Park's pornography is worthy of a stork.

You can't earn the award by merely painting over 12-letter words on john walls. It has to be something really heroic, such as jumping curbs to run over prostitutes. It was my job to make certain that Mayor Miller is battling real dirt, not just a waxy coat of film.

This wasn't my first assignment for the KCM. In 1974 I investigated the tiny town of Almont, 60 miles north of Detroit, where schoolteachers had arranged for students to see Franco Zeffirelli's production of "Romeo and Juliet"--written by some guy named Shakespeare.

Fortunately, a Baptist minister alerted the town in time. Although the movie had a PG rating, the PG was stamped in scarlet on Juliet's breast, which was shockingly bared in one scene.

The school board quickly overruled the teachers, and the students were spared the traumatic experience of learning that perhaps Romeo and Juliet got undressed before they went to bed.

My investigation was instrumental in Almont's winning a Stork that year.

Will Highland Park win this year? Don't ask me. I just investigate and report to the best of my ability. The decision must be made by KCM. I'm just a hireling. I don't even belong to the organization.

I tried to join once, but I was blackballed. After tight questioning, the membership committee ruled the only reason I wanted to keep other people's morals was because I didn't have any of my own.

Onward and upward, pensively and wisely.

Meet Charlevoix

...Bill Grimm

Bill Grimm is Conservationist with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, headquartered in Boyne City. With the upcoming annual meeting of the Charlevoix County Soil and Water Conservation District, we asked him some questions about how he works with the District and the types of services available to landowners.

COURIER: What is the Charlevoix County Soil and Water Conservation District?

GRIMM: It is a subdivision of state government, responsible under state law for conservation work within its boundaries, just as townships and counties are responsible for roads and other services and school districts are responsible for education.

COURIER: What is the purpose of the District?

GRIMM: To focus attention on land, water, and related resource problems, to develop programs to solve them, and to enlist and coordinate help from all public and private sources that can contribute to accomplishing the district's goals.

COURIER: How is the District managed?

GRIMM: By a Board of Directors, elected by land owners.

COURIER: Who is now serving on the Board, and when is the annual meeting of the District?

GRIMM: The Directors are William Korthase, Jr., Clayton Healey, Terry Healey, Charles Kitely, and John Wieland. The meeting will be held July 28.

COURIER: Then how does the District get the professional help it needs?

GRIMM: It has arrangements with several agencies to provide technical, financial and educational assistance concerning land use and conservation of natural resources. These include the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service which is a division of the Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service, the Cooperative Extension Service, and Michigan State University.

COURIER: So it is in your capacity with the Soil Conservation Service that you become involved?

GRIMM: Yes.

COURIER: What is the procedure for a land owner who wants to avail himself of the services of the Soil Conservation District?

GRIMM: First, he must request assistance. When the request is approved by the District Board then we assist the land owner, whether it be for a complete conservation plan or for individual practices.

COURIER: What are some of the basic conservation practices that have been applied in the county?

GRIMM: Among others, we have worked on strip cropping systems, waterways, diversions, tile drainage, grade stabilization practices, critical area land use, stream bank and lakeshore protection practices, farm waste systems, and ponds.

COURIER: Then you don't just work with farmers?

GRIMM: No, land owners in towns and urban areas may be concerned with problems such as erosion and sediment pollution from highways, shopping centers, airports, subdivisions, or other new construction. They may also want information on soils to determine their suitability for various urban purposes such as housing, recreation, waste disposal, road construction, park development and school sites. There are no boundary lines that divide one farm from another, or an urban area from a rural one. How one land owner manages his land effects the amount and kind of water and the amount of sediment that all his neighbors downstream must deal with.

COURIER: You must also work with other governmental bodies in solving problems.

GRIMM: Yes, we work with all of them having anything to do with land use – from the Department of Natural Resources to the administrator of the new Soil Erosion and Sedimentation Act.

COURIER: Is there a cost to the land owner for the service rendered by the Soil Conservation District?

GRIMM: No, all funds come from state and federal sources. For instance, the Soil Conservation Service is the only agency that receives federal funds earmarked by Congress for direct technical assistance to Conservation Districts.

COURIER: Why is land and soil conservation important?

GRIMM: In the next 30 years, our population will increase by half. Our land area will remain the same. We will need one-half more food from the soil that feeds us today. We will need twice as much water. We will need to double production of wood from our forest resources. We will build housing for another 100 million. We will build roads for three times the number of cars as today. Land required for outdoor recreation will more than double. We must find ways to dispose of millions of tons of solid waste each year. We must decide whether we can continue to divert more than a million acres of agricultural lands each year to non-agricultural uses when less fertile lands would serve these purposes adequately.

Book Has Third Printing

In 1972, Clarence Simeon Way gathered up poems he had written through the years, and compiled them into a volume published under the title "Rhyme, Rhythm 'n' Reason".

It was a pleasant little volume, packed with accounts of events familiar to everyone...highlights of a lifetime set to poetry.

The book, however, had a far greater appeal than its author ever dreamed. As a result the book went into its second printing.

But the popularity of these homespun gems continued to grow and the third printing is now off the press. In it readers will find additional poems that tell of a great-grandchild, the author's experience of undergoing major heart surgery at the age of 76 years, accounts of other down-to-earth events in his life.

It is a happy book written by a man who has lived a full life, has known peaks and valleys and taken them all in his stride.

Copies of the book are available from the author.

Do Business Where Business Is Being Done

Born Clowns, Jugglers, Acrobats...

Circus: A Show on the Road

By MARSHA ROBINSON

If you have dreams of running off to join the circus and becoming a clown, begin to think of 14 hour work days that begin at 5 a.m., seven days a week, with pay that totals easily under $80 a week for the beginner.

"It's 90 percent work and 10 percent glamour," says one of the Fraser Brokers star performers who made a circus stop in Charlevoix last Wednesday.

Its people are proud of the fact that the show has three full grown elephants, and not like those shows that call themselves circuses and show you one little baby elephant.

As its owner is fond of saying, Fraser Brothers is exactly like the circus of 40-year-ago.

"Yep," said one of his performers, "Same tent, same elephant, same pay..."

He laughed, "Corky got real mad when I said that. Seriously, he's a good man to work for. He told me, 'I'm going back to my compartment and check the papers to see if I still own this circus. If I do, your job is in jeopardy."

A mock-serious expression broke quickly into laughter.

The Fraser Brothers have had "one hell of a time" this season, Corkey said.

He had spent a good part of the morning working on the little black box that contains the show's main public address system, and two of the trucks were having mechanical difficulties.

Their main tent, barely a year-old and on the road for the first time, suffered a "blowdown" in Kentucky, and requires continual patching.

It looks every bit as old as Jennie, the only one of the three elephants trained to perform an elephants traditional circus tasks: hauling, setting up the tent, giving rides to children as well as performing.

Jennie is 77, Pardon, 78, according to Corky who announced Wednesday that it was her birthday before her grand finale with Captain Ken Bensen, who is Mr. Kenneth Bensen when he performs as a juggler.

All 50 circus people perform many duties or "double in brass". This is especially important for a clown, who is the lowest paid performer.

Christopher Rawlsy, for example, is the canvas boss, in charge of the main tent. He is also one half of the Jumping Jacks, an acrobatic trampoline act which opens the show, and during the show, he's a vendor, selling peanuts, snow cones, cotton candy and coloring books.

Like most of the 22 performers, Rawlsy grew up with the circus.

Nineteen of the people with the show are related in some manner to Corky. His daughter is seventh generation circus, he said, and his brother runs a show touring Canada.

Circuses are floating communities, and the key to their success is to keep everything moving and moving smoothly.

"We're pretty close knit. There's no room for arguments. If someone can't get along then he's thrown off the lot," Corky says.

"We get people every day who can perform. There are all kinds of acts. It's the people who can do something everyday that's important to the circus; we call them troupers, and they are few and far between.

A lack of the kind of people who can "jump in and take up the slack" if necessary is part of the reason circuses are dying out, Corky explained.

"You work 12-14 hours a day," he said. There aren't too many people who will do that. "And any more it's just not lucrative."

"Those that are willing and able "are the finest damn people in the world. When it rains for ten days in a row, they have to be."

Robert Keesa and his wife, Visshu 'Missy' live in a small trailer that became even smaller with the addition of a crib and their 3½-month son Matthew, fourth generation circus member born on the road in Abilene, Texas.

The Keesas have been married for 3½ years. Visshu joined the circus for $85 a week working the sideshow for Robert.

"I couldn't afford to pay her, so I had to marry her," he laughed.

She had never even thought about performing before meeting Robert. She now sits in a box every day while Robert slides swords into it, occasionally has knives thrown at her by Bensen, sells tickets and works the concession.

When you move from one town to another every day, you travel light, but Robert said he would have to buy a bigger trailer if any more children came along.

One man had a trailer 72 feet long and seven daughters, which he moved every day for an entire season with another circus, Robert said.

Keesa is also assistant animal supervisor, taking care of the "dog-faced baboons", Canadien lynx, black-maned lions, llama, goats and ponies. He sells tickets as well, is a general repairman, and along with all the other performers, races from one part of the lot to another all during the show.

Admission to the sideshow is $.50, and to the big tent $2 for adults and $.50 for children.

BURRO PACKING -- No animal is more closely associated with the colorful history of the Southwest than the burro. Burro packing methods are explained and demonstrated at Phil, Harlan and Miranda. Your tents, food, and sleeping bags may be packed on burros using the diamond hitch.

THE TOOTH OF TIME--Rising to 9003 feet, the "Tooth" is Philmont's historic landmark. Lying at its base are the remains of the historic Santa Fe Trail. The "Tooth" stands at the border of Camping Headquarters and many trails lead up to its peak.

Philmont: High Adventure and Challenge

EDITOR'S NOTE: It's not normally a practice to write about one's vacation--especially since it's the only time this editor gets away from the typewriter. But, because this experience was so different and has left such a deep impression, I thought it deserved editorial attention.

By KEN WINTER

There are only a few scars from blistered feet and a first-class farmer's tan left from an adventure that will be hard to forget.

The grim reminders come from a two weeks' backpacking trip through New Mexico and 38 Charlotte area high school students and adults.

Two weeks ago, I would have given you five dollars for a cold beer or even a dollar for a glass of cool water. Then again that wouldn't have been quite cricket since that wasn't part of the game plan.

The plan was to leave by train from Battle Creek and arrive the next day at Philmont Scout Ranch and Explorer Base, located in northeastern New Mexico, in the Sangre de Cristo range of the Rocky Mountains.

It's hard to tell someone about 137,493 acres and how you feel after hiking nearly 100 miles for 12 days. Equally as difficult, is to explain what it is like to spend the same amount of time with 11 high school students and a fourth-year medical student.

Perhaps it's enough to say that you learn a lot about kids and yourself. You also find out that your fat and flabby body isn't much help with climbing through rugged Rocky Mountain terrain.

The coed group I was with are called Explorers, the high school age branch of the Boy Scouts of America, and their plan was to hike through the world's largest Scout ranch and Explorer base.

Philmont is mountain terrain with elevations rising from 6,400 to 12,441 feet above sea level with more than 1,000 acres of farm and grazing land.

The 137,493-acre ranch began in 1922, when Oklahoma businessman Waite Phillips began buying land in northeastern New Mexico for farming, ranching, and vacationing. He developed an excellent herd of hereford cattle, improved the land and built a large, Spanish-Mediterranean style vacation home called Villa Philmonte. In 1938, Phillips donated 35,857 acres of his ranch to the Boy Scouts of America.

After observing the enthusiastic response from early Scout campers during the late 1930's, Phillips augmented his original gift by donating his best camping land, his Villa and his farm and ranching operations. And realizing the cost of maintaining the ranch, he also gave a 23-story office building in Tulsa, Oklahoma to support the operations.

Since Philmont began, more than a quarter million Scouts and Explorers with their leaders have hiked the many mountain trails, spending nights in different wilderness campsites.

At the staffed campsites, hiking groups are able to do a variety of things offered by the Philmont staff including everything from rock climbing to horseback riding. Groups even get a tour through gold mine and a chance to see how cattle ranches and logging camps operate.

The ranch itself has the year-round responsibility of 500 head of Hereford cattle; 250 saddle horses; 180 burros; 100 buffalo; hay and alfalfa crops; farming; timber; wildlife and conservation.

Of all the activities, it's hard to say which one is the best. Climbing Philmont's highest peak, 12,441-foot Baldy Mountain, and being able to see across southwestern United States is breathtaking. But, equally as interesting is interacting with 11 high school kids and getting to learn about their concerns and problems.

Cindy: A Middle School Student Finds Life Not Too Exciting and Challenging

EDITOR'S NOTE: The story you are about to read is true, only the name has been changed to protect the girl's identity. The story about this 13-year-old girl is not intended to be a representative profile of all people her age. It is simply the story about a particular and neglected segment of our public school enrollment–the gifted child.

By KEN WINTER

Having to leave middle school and go on to high school is the worse thing 13-year-old Cindy Black thinks can happen to her. It's so bad, Cindy claims she has considered suicide.

On the last day of school, Cindy sat near a mammoth elm tree on the middle school property waving her last good-byes to her classmates leaving for summer vacation.

The blonde-haired, scruffy dressed eighth-grader sat in the green grass, cross-legged and fingering the sand in front of her. She didn't really want to go home.

"I'm not bored around school with my friends, it's just the work," she said while reflecting over her final year at middle school.

"Some of it's hard, some of the work they pile on and some of the teachers are bad."

Cindy is one of the seven percent of students who is really above average and having trouble coping with a classroom designed to deal with a wide spectrum of abilities. The problem is what is available for either end of the spectrum?

"A kid usually wants a teacher to be not very bad and not very strict," was Cindy's assessment of the teachers she has had during the last year.

"Some teachers let the kids go wild, then on the other hand there are those who are just the opposite."

Too often, the girls say teachers expect their kids to simply sit everyday in class and learn by taking notes.

"If you want kids to act right, you have to know how they feel," she continued.

"They've got to put something into it.

"You have to have something that's entertaining."

Cindy says her friends are the only relief she has from the boredom of school.

Wearing a white t-shirt and blue jeans, the middle school student began to stretch her legs across the grass and lean up against a tree while picking up a blade of grass to stick in her mouth. The last few school buses were pulling out of the adjacent parking area, as Cindy began to think about going on to high school in the fall.

"I'm kinda of scared about high school," she said.

"It's sort of like competing for who has the best guy."

As far as she's concerned, Cindy says the guys are too crazy when they go to a party.

"Some guys will smoke pot before and after school just to get attention."

Cindy said she didn't think there was anything wrong with smoking on Friday or Saturday night other than it is expensive.

"You can go broke on it," she exclaimed.

"Most of the teachers don't have any idea of the kids that are using it."

The young girl estimates that at least 60 percent of the eighth grade class have either smoked marijuana or gotten drunk. She started smoking dope in seventh grade.

She said the seventh graders mostly get started because of the eighth graders. And she says it's easy to get both pot and booze.

Cindy says most kids get into the drugs because of their parents and friends.

"It stems from their parents," she said.

"If their parents don't care about them, why should they care?

"If they didn't have drugs in the school, the kids would probably be bored out of their minds."

She says a lot of kids use drugs because their friends think it's cool and that it gives them status.

Cindy thinks the next four years in school are going to be hell.

"Right now, I'm not getting along too well with my parents," she said.

"I hate them.

"It's really hard to say, but my Dad is like a little kid...every time I'm around he wants attention."

Cindy says she just doesn't know if another four years are going to be worth it. She thinks she is interested in music, but just isn't sure if she wants to go through what will be needed to be on top.

"I don't want to get old and I don't want to waste my time," she said.

"A lot of kids don't want to go through what they've been through for another four years."

After four years of high school, Cindy says you then have to go job hunting and if no one discovers you–the time has been wasted.

"Right now, if I can't get any more out of life that I'm getting, I might as well just go," she continued.

"I believe in reincarnation and you can get a whole new life.

"If you are in a life you don't like, why should you stay?"

Cindy says she doesn't know where to go.

"I don't want to be someone small, I want to be someone big."

The middle school student says too many teachers don't really understand her age because they have just come out of college, and boys really don't care.

"The guys give you a real" quick solution and then they say let's go to bed," she continued.

"Some of the guys are really nice and are understanding– but those are the guys you can't get hold of because they already have a girl.

"And if you get rejection from your friends, what do you think you will get from an adult?"

School counselors say dealing with this type of situation is hard, but not impossible.

"Students demand you be genuine and real," said one area counselor.

"If you're not, you've lost them."

As far as a student feeling that life isn't worth living, several say this isn't unusual for many children that age who are trying to discover what is special about them.

"At this point, kids identify with masses and can't see special skills they might develop," the counselor continued.

For this type of student, educators say classes do become a problem. Some educators say it's partially because of television, as well as that some of the material that has to be covered to help in further development isn't as interesting as it might be.

And in a classroom with a variety of learning abilities, they say the fast learners get bored quickly. One solution is having the faster learners work as helpers and assist the slower ones.

"Parents also have to be able to understand that children now have different values than when they were in seventh and eighth grade," said one counselor.

The counselor added that more has to be done with children before they get into seventh and eighth grade.

Children's values have to be challenged, and they must be taught specific skills that might include:

–Learning how to help each other.

–Learning how to make friends.

–Being creative with use of free time.

The counselor says that 78 percent of students at this age turn to their peers for help.

"The rest comes from counselors, teachers and others," he continues.

So how can we help the students become better helpers? Becoming a better helper, could mean life or death for Cindy.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Klooster of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Maddox of Redlands, Calif.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, selected a gown of chiffon over satin for her wedding. Made by Mrs. Carl Hammer III of Duarte, Calif., and the bride, the bodice of the empire style gown and the mandarin collar were appliqued with lace and seedpearls. The skirt which terminated in a train had a ruffle at the bottom with a lace applique border above the ruffle. Her lace-edged fingertip veil fell from a lace and seedpearl headpiece. Her bouquet was of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Michael Delmotte of Rochester was her sister's matron of honor and Lynn Realander of Sierra Madre, Calif., and Laurie Maddox of Redlands, Calif., sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. They wore identical sleeveless gowns of mint green crepe styled with V-necklines and floral chiffon jackets in blue, orchid and white that each had made. They carried clutch bouquets of painted daisies in the same colors.

Mr. Maddox assisted his son as best man. Garry Vandenberg of Almont and Ronald Vandenberg of Fraser, brothers of the bride, seated the guests.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Klooster chose a full length peach gown accented with metallic embroidered trim at the round neckline and cuffs. Mrs. Maddox, mother of the bridegroom, wore a blue gown and a matching accordion pleated jacket. Their corsages were of sweetheart roses.

A reception hosted by the bride's parents followed in the church parlors where Mr. and Mrs. James Mansen served as master and mistress of ceremonies. Assisting Mrs. Ronald Vandenberg and Carrie Vandenberg who served the cake, were Mrs. Garry Vandenberg and Beth Ross and the Ladies Guild who served the food.

Following a wedding trip to San Francisco, the couple will be at home at 1462 E. Third St., Duarte, Calif., after July 11.

Both are computer programmers for the Burrough's Corporation in Posadena, Calif.

Wedding guests were present from California, Louisiana and several Michigan cities.

On Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Maddox, parents of the bridegroom hosted a rehearsal dinner at the home of the bride's parents.

Dandelion greens mean spring in households of yesteryear, especially if the residents were Pennsylvania Dutch. The dandelion is a common, stemless plant of the sunflower family. They are believed to be native to Europe and Asia but are now found in most temperate countries.

Dandelions have been used for food for centuries but have been cultivated only within recent years. If you choose to use the wild ones, pick them while the leaves are still small and very tender--long before they flower.

Wash and wash them again and again to remove all traces of dirt and insects. Then cook them 10 to 20 minutes, depending on tenderness of the greens, in salted water. A sweet-sour vinegar dressing with bacon and onion, similar to that used for wilted lettuce is the way the old-timers liked them.

There are 35 calories in one cup of dandelion greens. High in Vitamin A, dandelion greens have 12,290 IU's per cup. They also serve as a source of potassium and calcium.

Before you curse those dandelions in your lawn - stop and consider-Maybe they could end up on the dinner table!

The quilt is cross-stitched in red and blue on a white background and features a large eagle.

Mrs. Robert Riggle is president of the Women's Fellowship of the church as well as Fair chairman and has been assisted by Mrs. Robert Lieberman and Mrs. David Fowler.

All of the church women have been working since last January on Fair items, meeting every Monday at the church and bringing their own portable sewing machines.

The business will buy, sell or sell on consignment.

"If you're in doubt about the best way to dispose of your items or are searching for something you need, give us a ring and we'll help you" Seymour added.

Council Hammers Out Solution

If settlement is not reached within 30 days, the court will again enter the picture, at first with recommendations and if necessary with another order following further hearings, the judge said.

The airport is managed for the city by Joseph McPhillips, owner of McPhillips Flying Service, which is based in Charlevoix, and also serves Beaver Island.

In return for his services as manager, McPhillips receives the use of the airport and revenue from its facilities in lieu of a cash payment.

Cash payment would amount to $12,000 annually, Mayor Hansen said.

The city has notified McPhillips that the terms of his contract are to be renegotiated. Action on that matter was tabled during the meeting pending further study by the city attorney.

The suggestion to waive the requirements of the city's ordinance in Welke's case was made by Mayor Hansen on the basis "of the apparent hardship of the applicant" and because Welke "is not a fixed-base operator."

In other action, the council:

–Agreed to send a letter to Tri-City Asphalt adding a stipulation to a contract for the purchase of bituminous asphalt paving that requires that the material be inspected for specifications. The action was the result of concerns expressed over the company's ability to provide the product according to state regulations.

–Referred a neighborhood petition protesting the "rundown" condition of houses at 102 and 104 W. Dixon St. to the building inspector for action.

–Heard Councilman Ray Wood ask that the city's certified public accountant be brought to account for not providing the council with monthly budget statements as agreed upon by contract.

–Informed Chamber of Commerce representative Bill Supernaw that $1,000 has been budgeted and is available to the chamber for fireworks during the Venetian Festival.

–Supported the chamber in a request that 12 slips be kept on the waterfront open during the festival's boat parade for public viewing.

–Heard Jeannine Wallace ask the council to consider reinstating a planning commission to advise the city in matters of zoning and development.

Corps

Street at 1:00 p.m. Saturday.

Following the parade, there will be the 2½-hour variety show featuring a host of talent from around the area. This also will be announced later.

After a dinner break, the Charlevoix City Band will present a concert, the Venetian Queen and her court will be introduced and, as darkness falls, the Venetian Boat Parade on Round Lake will begin.

The day's activities will be climaxed with what Supernaw describes as "the greatest Charlevoix has seen...in celebration of the bicentennial", a massive fireworks display.

An open house aboard the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter, Sundew, has been planned from 12 noon to 3 p.m. Sunday afternoon. Other events for Sunday are in the planning stage.

Other activities during the weekend will be a fast pitch tournament opening Friday and closing Sunday night; the Venetian junior open tennis tournament; a carnival to be located on the Kusina parking area at the south Bridge Street hill beginning Thursday night and a host of booths in East Park offering entertainment and food including tacos, pies, caramel apples, hotdogs, hamburgers, pop and scads of other goodies...all served up in a real carnival spirit.

winches can also be hand operated (which Kress encourages for exercise). All the electronic devises have manual backups for emergencies.

Below decks is a "Park Avenue apartment," Mr. Kress acknowledged a friend's description. New York interior decorator Ronnie Brahms worked with Mrs. Kress designing the three staterooms, galley, dinnette, main salon, and captain's stateroom.

Amenities to meet the demand to end "camping out" include a central vacuum cleaner, air conditioning, ice boxes, freezer, cassette players in each stateroom, complete galley with all the cooking facilities of a home, hot and cold water, tub and showers, wall to wall carpeting, and an interior design which combines elegant oriental with nautical. Framed prints are hung around the cabin. Oriental bronze vases filled with dried flowers are arranged in the cabin.

The designer's press release says, "potable water tanks are filled with mineral water of known purity."

And, just in case the wind drops, or to enter ports such as Charlevoix, "ARIA" is equipped with a Volvo Penta Tamd 70 engine, twin generators and a bow thruster, similar to a bow thruster on a freighter. The bow thruster propells water at right angles to the boat's bow, permitting it to turn and maneuver in narrow passages.

For Kress, of overriding importance is that "ARIA" sail to her full potential. Kress and his crew work the boat and study closely such phenomena as the fact that if sailing before a light breeze ARIA actually creates her own counterwind over the bow, her hull is extremely fast. Thus, in all but a heavy wind, ARIA tacks downwind and Kress compares data with his computer program.

program. Further, it was brought out that football and basketball are the only sports that generate revenue in any amount and with so many program that brings in no revenue, there is no way to have the present sports program without subsidizing it. Supt. James A. McKimmy said the sports programs in the school costs approximately 1/3 of a mill and without the gate would cost approximately 2/3 of a mill.

The First State Bank and the Charlevoix County State Bank were designated depositories for various school accounts. Vincent Olach, business manager, said that the accounts were divided evenly between the two institutions.

Signatories for the various accounts were also designated. Each account requires a minimum of two signatures.

Meeting dates for established as the third Monday of the month for regular meetings and the first Monday of the month for special meeting when they are necessary. The new schedule will become effective in August because plans had been completed for a meeting to be held July 26.

The board also voted to join the Michigan Association of School Boards to defend against class action suit on materity leave benefits. The cost would be approximately $106. The issue relates to a suit in the courts at the present time brought by the Michigan Education Association.

FAITH HEALS THE WOUNDS OF HUMAN DISCORD

Many of us have undergone the painful experience of having a beautiful long term friendship suddenly broken off, due to a misunderstanding, or perhaps because of a minor incident that became magnified out of all proportion. Whatever the cause, we erect a barrier of wounded pride and a feeling of betrayal that would seem to rule out any possibility of reconciliation. However, the Bible tells us to love our neighbor and to see the good side of our fellow beings. So, try to remember all the good times together and the kind, thoughtful deeds of the past, and perhaps there's a chance that the severed relations might be mended. At the Church of your choice you will learn that it's at least worth a try.

Quarrels would not last long if the fault was only on one side.
—Francois, Duc de la Rochefoucauld

"If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."

Residents Happy with County Services

This is the second part of a two-part story about the Attitude Survey made by the Charlevoix County Planning Department.

Charlevoix County property owners are generally happy about recreation facilities in the County, believe that the water and sewer systems are adequate, and feel that the present level of service is adequate in police, fire, hospital and ambulance service; libraries; and solid waste.

The initial compilation of returns from an Attitude Survey made by the County Planning Commission revealed the above facts.

The questions and answers on these subjects were as follows:

Do you feel Charlevoix County's recreation system provides adequate recreation opportunities?

Answers: Yes, 56 percent, no, 26 percent; no answer, 18 percent.

If you feel more recreation opportunities are needed, should the county direct its attention to providing more recreation for year-round residents, seasonal residents or transients?

Answers: year-round residents, 34.8 percent; seasonal residents, 16.9 percent; transients, 6.8 percent.

Which of the areas listed below would you like to see developed: community parks, county parks, indoor recreation centers, state parks, organized adult sports programs, beaches?

Answers: community parks, 29.1 percent; county parks, 24.3 percent; indoor, 23.6 percent; state parks, 19.5 percent; adult programs, 9.6 percent; beaches, 22.6 percent.

Do you feel the water and sewer system in your particular area is adequate?

Answers: yes, 62.4 percent; no, 23.6 percent; no answer, 14 percent.

Do you feel the present level of service in the following areas is adequate within Charlevoix County – police, fire, hospital, ambulance service; libraries; and solid waste (dumps)?

Answers: Police, yes, 51 percent, no, 13.6 percent; fire, yes, 50.6 percent, no, 9.0 percent; hospital, yes, 50.8 percent, no, 13.1 percent; ambulance, yes, 44.4 percent; no, 5.5 percent.

(As the percentages show, some persons did not answer these questions.)

LIEBERMAN

Grand Valley Picks Kirk Lieberman

ALLENDALE--Kirk Lieberman, All-Conference tackle at Charlevoix High School will be playing football at Grand Valley State College next fall.

The 6-2, 235-pound Lieberman is considered one of the prize football recruits from the northern part of the state.

Lieberman was an outstanding athlete at Charlevoix competing in football, track and wrestling. He was the 1975 football captain and was an All-State honorable mention selection.

"We expect great things of Kirk," said Coach Jim Harkema of Grand Valley. "At GVSC we plan to use him as a defensive player. He has the size and we feel his future in football is still ahead of him," explained Harkema.

Lieberman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grant Lieberman, 216 Park Ave, Charlevoix, Michigan.

State Says Jail Needs Work on

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix County jail exercise yard does not comply with the State Administrative Code, Robert J. Russell of the Michigan Department of Corrections, has advised the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners in a recent communication.

The letter was a report of an inspection of the facility made January 22, 1976, and was received by Sheriff Phdo F. Somner two days before three prisoners escaped from the exercise yard by climbing over the fence. Earlier, two had escaped by cutting the fencing near the bottom and crawling through the fence.

The exercise yard located to the east of the cell block at the local jail was constructed at the time the jail was opened in 1970 and met specifications at that time.

The matter will be brought to the Board of Commissioners by the Sheriff's Committee headed by Ralph Richardson at a future meeting of the board.

The State Administrative Code calls for a 12-foot high structure to double fencing and a foot to eliminate tunneling or the catching of contraband. The communication advised that the latter can be achieved by the construction of a 12 inch ratwell or a similar barrier.

Other than this one recommendation, Russell's letter complimented the Board of Commissioners and Sheriff Sumner on the operation of the facility. It stated that examination of records show them in order and that Sheriff Sumner has made a very serious attempt to follow the policies and procedures as outlined in the operations section of the Code. The letter also advised the board that Sheriff Sumner had attended a seminar conducted by the Office of Jail Services for the purpose of assisting several sheriffs in Michigan in developing the necessary policies and procedures in order to comply with the Code.

The communication also mentioned the improvement in the operation of the kitchen facility and the fact that it is being operated much more efficiently. The Office of Jail Services assisted in placing its recommended system into the kitchen at the county jail last December.

Venetian Festivities Begin Thursday

Queen's Pageant Starts Four Days of Activities

By FRAN MARTIN

"It will be the greatest ever...It is our salute to the Bicentennial" is how Bill Supernaw, general chairman, describes this weekend's Venetian Festival.

In observance of this country's 200th anniversary and the Venetian Festival's 46th birthday, a host of events have been planned and will be climaxed by a special fire work's display.

The Venetian Queen's Pageant that will be highlighted by the coronation of the 1976 Venetian Queen will launch the festivities at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 6 p.m. Thursday.

A new event, the Pageant of Drums, featuring six visiting Drum and Bugle Corps from Ontario, and Michigan, will be staged at Kipke Field at 8 p.m. Friday evening. Bill Stephens of Petoskey will serve as master of ceremonies. A fireworks display, if weather permits, will climax this event.

Saturday's activities which will begin with the Venetian Festival Street Parade at 1 p.m. will continue through the afternoon and evening with the Venetian Boat Parade and the fireworks display climaxing the day's activities.

On Sunday, the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Sundew will hold an open house at the municipal dock from 12 noon to 3 p.m. and at 7:00 p.m. Sunday, a seven-man water skiing troupe will present an hour-long water skiing show on Lake Charlevoix off the Depot beach.

The first major event of the festival will be the Venetian Queen Pageant to be staged at the high school gymnasium at 8 p.m. Thursday. At that time, eight local girls will appear in a program to select the successor to the reigning queen, Margie Carey. Canddiates are Dona Bellows, Heidi Dove, Kim Gould, Diane Haggard, Karen Hollow, Sue Mabee, Kathleen Martin amd Mary Wolf.

The Pageant of Drums, which will be hosted by the Midshipmen of Petoskey, will feature Drum and Bugle Corps, all of which have won awards for their performances throughout the midwest, presenting exhibitions of their intricate field work. The corps vary in size but all present colorful performances being seen here for the first time.

The corps appearing in the Pageant of Drums in the street parade Saturday will be General Putnam's Men of Ottawa, Ohio, the Bandettes, an all-girl corps from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., the Guardsmen of Flint, a corps being seen in northern Michigan for the first time, the Pacesetters of Melvindale, the Entertainers of Sarnia, Ont., and the popular Midshipmen of Petoskey.

During the pageant, the 1976 Venetian Queen and her court will be introduced and will view the event from a seat of honor.

The two-hour show will be topped off with a mini-fireworks display if wind conditions permit.

There will not be seating for everyone attending the show so people are asked to bring blanket or lawn chairs to witness the show from the wide perimeter of Kipke field.

For those who have other interests, there will be Carnival at the Kusina parking lot on Hurlbut ave. at the top of South Bridge-st. Hill, the Venetian Fastpitch tournament with a full card of games running through the weekend and a midway in East Park where festival-goers will find a variety of foods and entertainment.

Saturday's activities will shift to Bridge Street, where the Venetian Street Parade will be staged. Supernaw, who has been preparing for this event for months, promises one of the finest parades in recent years. In addition to the visiting Drum and Bugle Corps, there will be the Charlevoix High School

Beautiful

We own some lots at the end of West Garfield in Boulder Park, bordering on Medusa's land. We have those lots up for sale and are trying every way we know how to make them look nice to appeal to buyers. However, people repeatedly dump garbage on these lots. Most of the garbage is dumped on Medusa property, but some of it is dumped on our lots. Now, we have cleaned it up ourselves many times, and I have called Medusa about two weeks ago to clean it up, but so far nothing has been done. I have had the Sheriff there once last year and also this year, and had one person clean up the mess he made, but there seems no definite way to make people stop dumping garbage on our lots. We would like to get a police ordinance of some kind to make people stop this so that we could offer these lots for sale and have them attractive. Also, if we would want to use these lots ourselves, we wouldn't want garbage being dumped on them. This has been going on for years and we would like the City of Charlevoix to do something about it.

Sub Station

I would like to know why the Sub Station at Boyne City or Walloon Lake would not cost the taxpayers any money, because isn't there a state law that overtime has to be paid and also double time?

Parking

It is regretful that we are only allowed two limited-time free parking places for postal patrons immediately adjacent to the Post Office! If one needs stamps or other postal business, it costs at least 14 cents, with meter charge, to send a letter! Petoskey provides plenty of post office parking in front of their establishment and no one seems to abuse this privilege. The Charlevoix City Council could leave the few parking spaces free on the north side of Mason Street, without a big lack of revenue, for its citizens!

Census

Charlevoix Township is going to have a new census. Revenue sharing, both State & Federal, is based on population. The township expects to receive about twenty dollars for each person in the township for the next five years so that an increase of two hundred persons over the 1970 census will amount to $20,000 more income for the township.

Mr. James Chapman of the Secretary of State's office will conduct an instruction meeting on July 22nd and the census will officially begin the next day, July 23rd.

This census will not require any information other than name and address. Bernice Goss will be the enumerator in that part of the township lying south of the City of Charlevoix. Julie Geer will work in the area north of the city lying south of Waller Road, and Joan Sonnenberg will enumerate the rest of the north side area, including North Point.

To make certain that every person is listed correctly it is suggested that if you are not expecting to be home when the enumerator calls on you that you either leave a note with a neighbor listing all the persons living in your home, or get in touch with the census taker in your area, or with Margaret Stroud who will be chief enumerator.

Heidi Dove Becomes 8th Candidate

Heidi Dove

The number of participants in the Venetian Queen Pageant has increased to eight with the announcement that Heidi Dove, 18, a recent Charlevoix High School graduate, had become a candidate for the honur presently held by Margie Carey.

Heidi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stokes, is 5'7½" in height, has dark brown hair and blue eyes. Her interests are many including basketball and volleyball in which she lettered for two years, forensics including One Act plays and multiple presentations. She also was president of the Student Council as a senior. Her chief interest is music. She plans to attend Central Michigan University this fall.

The pageant, to be held at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 8 p.m., will find eight young women appearing in a variety of events before three judges according to Mrs. Thomas Schaperkotter, Queen's committee chairperson. After a group vocal selection to introduce the candidates, they will appear in a mini-fashion show wearing outfits supplied by local stores. Each will then present her talent and appear in formal dress before the judges make their choice. While the judges are out, Margie Carey, 1975 Venetian Queen, will be introduced.

Margie Carey will then crown her successor.

Music for pageant will be played by Mrs. Brendan LaBlance.

W.C. Vogel will serve as master of ceremonies.

Judges will be Robert V. Kennedy of Traverse City, Director of Youth Employment Services; Ms. Worthy Truffant, Director of the D.A.C. Counseling Center, and Ms. Ivy Arlock of Harbor Springs, Director of the Community Cabaret Series.

The judges will meet with the candidates for a luncheon at Grey Gables Inn and personal interviews on Thursday afternoon.

Serving with Mrs. Schaperkotter on the Queen's committee are Mrs. Gary Hice, Mrs. Richard Kenney, Mrs. John Yaroch and Jun Elliott.

Drum and Bugle Corps Plan Special Event

A new and exciting event, the Pageant of Drums, has been incorporated into the annual Venetian Festival Bill Supernaw, program chairman, has announced.

The event, to be held at Kipke Field at 8 p.m. Friday, will feature six Drum and Bugle Corps presenting individual exhibitions of their field work.

The corps participating will be the Bandettes, an all-girl group from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., the Entertainers of Sarnia, Ont., General Putnam's Men of Ottawa, Ohio, the Guardsmen of Flint, making their first appearance in northern Michigan, the Pacesetters of Melvindale and the popular Midshipmen of Petoskey.

The two-hour show will feature each group presenting an individual appearance lasting 11 until 12 minutes.

During the program, to be mc'd by Bill Stephens of Petoskey, the 1976 Venetian Queen and her court will be introduced.

A 12-minute fireworks display will climax the performance if wind conditions permit, Supernaw said.

People attending the show are asked to bring blankets so they may view the pageant from the area around the playing field where the corps will be performing.

While here, the corps will be housed at local gymnasiums.

Ostling Discusses Property Tax Reform

By PEG ORLE

Property taxes, welfare, the single business tax and unemployment insurance were the principal subjects of discussion Monday morning when State Representative Ralph Ostling and House Minority Leader Dennis Cawthorne met with a group of Charlevoix County residents.

Property taxes were discussed largely as they related to schools. Ostling pointed out that the Michigan Education Association has suggested a state wide property tax as one way of alleviating the situation and Cawthorne said that "one idea being kicked around in Lansing" is to re-instate the sales tax to help support schools.

Cawthorne also cited the Summary of Interim Report of the Governor's Advisory Task Force on Property Tax Revision which says, in effect, that, compared to other states, Michigan's property tax system works better than most people realize.

He was asked if the state doesn't have some responsibility to provide funds for new schools in view of the shifting population, especially to Northern Michigan, and the rebellion against voting millage.

His answer was that the state has never employed funds for capital outlay and it is unlikely it ever will.

The relationship between crime and property taxes was cited by a listener who pointed out that crime in the cities is lowering property values in the cities and shifting the tax burden to less-populated areas.

Both Ostling and Cawthorne cited their efforts in curtailing the rising costs of welfare, especially in the field of Aid to Dependent Children.

Although the cost of welfare continues to rise, they said that Aid to Dependent Children has not increased as much as it was projected it would.

On the other hand, the cost of Medicaid is sky-rocketing, due not only to abuses by recipients but by suppliers, including physicians.

Local businessmen cited the unfair effects of the single business tax on small businesses. Ostling and Cawthorne agreed that there were serious inequities and said that there would undoubtedly be some revisions in the tax in the near future, but that the tax would probably not be repealed outright.

The administration of unemployment funds was severely criticized by several persons who cited cases where employees received unemployment benefits after being fired for stealing and other employees who quit on their own after a short working period and filed claims.

It was suggested by one person that the state needs an "oversight committee" to study the administration of all laws in all fields in light of the large bureaucracies that are responsible for them

Recreation Commission Considers Non-Resident Fees

By FRAN MARTIN

Charlevoix's newly organized Charlevoix Recreation is proposing that activity fee cards be sold to non-residents participating in the city's recreation program.

Purpose of the commission is to serve in an advisory capacity to Ike Boss and as a liaison between Boss and the Charlevoix City Council.

Under the proposed activity card system, all Charlevoix city residents would receive an activity card which would allow them to participate in all programs sponsored by the Charlevoix Recreation Department at a given fee. People living outside the corporate limits of the city could purchase an activity card and enjoy participation at local rates and those without an activity card would pay a set rate for each program.

The Recreation Program is financed by tax monies paid by local residents. The sale of the activity cards to those outside the city, at a cost to be determined, would then allow them to participate at the same rates as those living in the city. Those who do not purchase an activity card will pay a set price to participate.

City-owned property located adjacent to the Char-Em Intermediate School District property has been suggested as a site for eight new ball fields. The expansion of the city's recreation program has pointed up the need for additional fields.

The city recreation-sponsored Camp McSauba was discussed at length and its problems and successes aired.

The dock at the Ferry Avenue beach was another problem brought before the commission. Further study will be required before a decision can be made whether to repair or re-build the structure.

Republicans Take No Stand

The Republican Committee of Charlevoix County will not endorse any primary candidates running under the party banner despite the fact there are contests within the party for several jobs.

It had previously been understood that active, dues-paying members of the local group would receive the nod over those who had paid little attention to party affairs.

At a free-for-all meeting last Thursday evening, all candidates from United States Senator to township officials were "put on their own".

There are four Republican candidates for United States Senator, two for Representative in Congress, two for State Legislator, two for County Prosecuting Attorney, three for County Sheriff, and two for County Drain Commissioner.

In addition, there are two Republican candidates for County Commissioner in the Second, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fifteenth Districts, as well as for jobs in several townships.

August 3 Primary Candidates

Sheriff Says Experience is Important

Charlevoix County Sheriff Philo Sumner, a 10-year veteran, is finding himself with his first opposition since 1968.

He first joined the Boyne City Police Department in 1950 and left that department to become associated with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department under Sheriff Glenn E. Rose in April, 1956.

After eight years, he returned to the Boyne City Police Department where he put in a year before rejoining the Sheriff's Department in November, 1965.

Following the resignation of Sheriff Rose the following spring, he was appointed to the office, effective June 1, 1966. Two years later, he sought nomination to the office and in November, 1968 was elected to a four-year term. In 1972, he was re-elected without opposition.

Asked what residents could expect to see if he was re-elected, Sheriff Sumner said much would depend on what monies his department would have to operate on.

If the budget doesn't get cut, Sumner said his personnel could be expanded. He added that there are presently four employees under the CETA program that are not financed with county monies.

"I would like to still continue my operation, except only with more personnel and better service to the people," he said.

Sumner says that his work is somewhat different than police work because the Sheriff has to handle both criminal and civil work.

Within the jail itself, he says a lot of manhours are required to maintain records, operate the jail and make hourly cell checks. He said his staff is also required to handle the majority of the county radio calls to local police agencies at night.

"We have to have someone available at all times," he said.

"It takes a lot of personnel to operate the jail."

When asked if he felt the county had an adequate Sheriff's force, Sumner said, "at times I don't have enough then at other times I have an adequate force."

To avoid problems, the Sheriff said he attempts to shift work to periods when the most complaints arise.

One of the problems is having enough personnel to serve the three court juries he is required by law to staff, Sumner added.

As far as cooperation with other police agencies, Sumner says it has to be the best possible.

"We are all working for the same thing," he said.

"This Northern Michigan area could be one of the best if the cooperation was there."

The county sheriff says the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has been generous in funding his department.

"I feel the board of commissioners has treated me well.

Sumner says any department could always use more money, but that they have had enough to operate with.

Sumner emphasized that on-the-job experience is a far better teacher than knowledge gained straight from a textbook.

Neff Cites Need for Organization

Big, broad shouldered Bob Neff says Charlevoix County's Sheriff's Department needs more leadership and sensitivity to people's needs.

And the retired Charlevoix businessman says if he is elected to the post, he'll be able to do just that.

A 10-year veteran of the Michigan State Police, the 58-year-old Charlevoix resident stands on his experience record. While with the state agency, he worked as a trooper, highway patrolman, in criminal investigation, in public relations and as an Assistant Post Commander.

He also spent 25 years as a successful businessman, six years on the Charlevoix City Council, and six years as a board member of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The Republican candidate says one of the most important qualifications for the position is leadership.

"I'm going to answer all complaints no matter how large or small," Neff said during a recent interview with the Courier.

The candidate said that no matter how small the complaint, they should be answered.

"The Sheriff's Department hasn't been taking care of complaints–either they're too busy or something else has to be done."

When asked what services he would continue or expand if elected Sheriff, Neff said he wasn't interested in creating a subpost at the other end of the county, because of the potential union problems the cost to operate such a facility.

Neff said a subpost would require at least four officers, office personnel and a building to maintain 24-hour service. He projected the venture would cost between $75 to $90,000.

"I think everything can be handled out of the Sheriff's Department, especially if it would cost an estimated $75,000 to run an east-end Sheriff's Department," he said.

"I don't think the county can afford to pay the extra money."

The candidate said he would also like to see more intensive property inspections of homes and businesses.

"I also believe we need to have patrols in the vicinity of outer East Jordan and Boyne City and in the far, eastern part of the county so we can give these people service," he added.

Neff said he would also like to start an officer's training program, create closer relationships with juveniles and probate court and create an auxiliary police force in Walloon Lake and Boyne Falls, as well as improve public relations with the community.

As far as budget needs, Neff said the county will be doing well if it can keep what it presently has.

"We could use more money now, but we could go with what the county can spend," he continued.

"I also believe it is important to cooperate with city and state police, the county prosecutor and the courts...

"I believe the Sheriff's Department has missed the boat in getting along with other departments."

Neff says police business demands cooperation between all agencies.

Although the candidate says the present Sheriff's Department is adequate, it will have to be increased in the future as the county grows and the cost of living increases.

Who Should Be Sheriff?

The Charlevoix Courier Asks The County's 3 Primary Candidates Why They Should Be Elected to the County's Law Enforcement Spot.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

Lasater Wants Professional Force

Eveline Township's George Lasater hopes he can put his six year's experience as a county probation officer and part-time deputy sheriff into action as the county's next sheriff.

The 38-year-old resident brings with him an interesting background of experiences he thinks would make him the best sheriff Charlevoix County has ever had.

Previous to working for the county, he had been a social worker for the Charlevoix Intermediate School District and a part-time clinical therapist for the Petoskey Area Mental Health Clinic.

When the candidate moved to the county 12 years ago, he worked as a elementarty teacher-principal for the Boyne City school system.

Lasater holds a bachelor of science degree in elementary education from Arkansas State University and has nearly completed an associate's degree in criminal justice from North Central Michigan College.

If elected, he said he would continue the services the sheriff's department presently offers.

"Most people look at a police agency as having the primary responsibility of apprehending criminals, but statistically it takes only 20 percent of the time," he said.

"So the other 80 percent of the time should be service."

When asked what services the sheriff should be involved in, Lasater listed the following:

- –highway patrol
- –dog complaints
- –focal point of the community, where people can come and seek direction and assistance as to what services are available.

More specifically, the candidate said there should be a substation at the far east end of the county manned by a resident deputy who would live in the community and be permanently assigned a patrol car.

Lasater said this could be done without additional revenue and that existing government buildings (such as township hall) could be used for a base of operations.

Secondly, he said the county needs to hire a female police officer who could work with youth problems by creating a youth division, and female offenders. The candidate said the female certified officer could work with female victims of crime who normally might find difficulties in dealing with male officers.

And thirdly, Lasater said he would like to see more service given to jail inmates.

"We've put them there, but we also have a responsibility to rehabilitate them," he continued.

Lasater, who was responsible for instituting a reading program in the jail last year, would like to continue with education programs in there.

"To me this is a real key thing...service to the community," he said.

Lasater said he thought there was an adequate police force within the department, but added he would like to create a sheriff's auxiliary.

Asked what he thought the relationship of the sheriff's department should be with other agencies, Lasater said the word is co-operation.

Lasater also said that he thought the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners had been more than adequate by giving the department a $297,000 budget.

At the same time, the candidate said he thought he could cut back on several expenses without cutting back on service to county residents.

Several suggestions for saving money included:

- –use of smaller police vehicles.
- –a substation to eliminate wasted travel and time.
- –elimination of a janitor at the jail with work being done by trustees and those on the county work program.

One of the key elements to effective law enforcement, Lasater said, is citizen participation and involvement such as the initiation of a sheriff's auxiliary, CB participation and citizen recognition for good deeds through an awards program.

Shape Up Republicans

Detroit Free Press Editor Joe H. Stroud couldn't have been more on target when he recently identified a problem with the Republican Party. A problem right here in Charlevoix County.

The one-time Arkansas resident was observing how much his home state representation at the Democratic Convention in New York had changed from what it would have been during his childhood days.

As Barbara Jordan gave her keynote address, Stroud said his eyes turned over to his left from the press gallery to the delegation of his native state of Arkansas. Blacks and whites together, he wrote.

"To Georgia, the home state of the apparent nominee, the place where Sherman's troops marched through. Blacks and white together.

"To Alabama, the state in which George Wallace stood in the schoolhouse door to keep black children out. Blacks and whites together."

Stroud said he could remember sitting by the radio in 1948, listening to the fight for civil rights, to the beginning of the Dixiecrats' revolt of that year.

"I remember leafing through the little yellow-covered handbook that was my father's guide to the laws of the state Democratic Party and finding there the vestiges of the white primary, of the discriminatory use of the poll tax," he continued to write.

"At that age–12–I did not understand all of that fully. But now I cannot help but share Congresswoman Jordan's exultation that she could stand before that convention this week, in that capacity, and speak to the heart and conscience of America."

Stroud was reflecting on how the Democratic Party has appeared to become more puralistic or willing to take on a face representing many interest groups that it had during his childhood days.

Now he says a Southern white gets black votes and a black keynoter is saluted by "The Eyes of Texas."

"This is important, and I believe now such factors will be permanent if hereafter less and less remarkable," he wrote.

"It should not pass unremarked by the leaders of the Republican Party, the party of Lincoln."

In Michigan, Stroud writes, Bill Milliken has tried to tell the Republican Party that it must reach out more effectively to the young, the black, the diverse. It is a somber truth.

"The vision of American society held by many Republicans is not inherently anti-black, or anti-city, or anti-working man, but in recent years much of the GOP's preachment and practice has seemed that way. If the Republicans are not going to be forever a minority party, they must find ways to reach out, to broaden themselves, to speak within their party doctrines to the diversity of America."

Although Charlevoix County does not have the black population that Southern Michigan has, it does have several elements that virtually go unnoticed in local party politics. Especially, the younger people between 25 and 40 years old.

When you look at Charlevoix County Republicans, in many instances, you're looking at an old guard unwilling to relinquish its power or responsibility to a new generation.

Constantly, we see the same names appear as the "official" leaders of the party, who in fact really haven't had much to do with party politics for many years.

We are pleased to see that the voters do have some choices to make in the upcoming August Primary. We feel some new blood is vitally important to the county.

We are deeply concerned about the leadership potential available in this county to run our local government in future years.

As we see it, the only way good, positive leadership can develop for our future needs is if some of the old party guards–in both the Republican and Democratic Parties decide they are going to take interest in others joining their ranks.

As it stands now, we seriously doubt that many young people really care that much about party politics. And rightfully, so. If you're not involved, how could you be interested?

We think the Charlevoix County political parties–particularly the Republicans, should seriously evaluate their memberships and see within the next few years where it could be strengthened.

Until these local parties are able to involve more diverse groups within the ranks, we are headed for a collision course of poor local government.

YOUR CHANCE TO HELP

You Need Help

To the Editor:

The two Republican candidates for president try to outbid one another on the defense spending issue in an effort to prove their dedication to defense.

One of the more conspicuous of the proposed weapons is a descendant of the Jimmy Carter branch of military service. Eleven Trident submarines at a conservative estimated cost of $1.7 billion each. Advocates of these weapons consider them worth the cost because one Trident submarine could cause many times their cost in damage to an enemy nation and could devastate almost any nation in the world. Defense money will also be used to produce about 900 Captor Torpedoes. The Captor torpedo is programmed to be activated by the specific sound of enemy submarines and then to pursue and destroy them. If we can produce such torpedoes other nations can produce them also, and Captor torpedoes costing far less than Trident submarines could destroy our Trident submarines.

A stingy nation, that does not play the game, could put tape recordings of the sound of their submarines on some logs equipped with underwater loud speakers and explode our expensive Captor torpedoes with their inexpensive decoys.

This nonsense has been going on since before the last echo of World War II faded from the ears of the Allied politicians who had conned their sucker soldiers into believing that they were fighting for the Four Freedoms. You remember the Four Freedoms do you not, especially the fourth one?

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

Sunday evening when I was laboriously planting our umpteenth row of onion sets since the season began, Katie wandered by and asked me if the garden was worth all the trouble and expense.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Well, do you get more out of the garden than you spend for seed?"

I did some quick mental arithmetic and determined that our seed this year has cost somewhere around $6. We probably spent another $6 or $7 on a bag of peat moss, a small rake for working the soil around plants, a trowel, fertilizer, pesticide and a bundle of tomato stakes.

Now, I am confident that we and our friends and neighbors will gather more than $12 or $13 worth of produce from our 30 by 45 foot garden. But that does not include the prices of water or the many, many hours of labor demanded by even the most elementary vegetable garden.

Nor does it put a price tag on the mental anguish resulting from the continuing battle with an army of garden pests, ranging from cutworms and aphids to fat rabbits which are very fond of tender lettuce and succulent green spinach shoots.

All in all, I suppose the garden is a losing proposition, if you consider the financial aspects and nothing else. My time would certainly be better spent shining shoes or sweeping streets.

But there are rewards from a backyard garden that cannot be measured in terms of dollars and cents.

For one thing, we eat better because of the garden. We would never, for example, dream of paying 89 cents a pint for red raspberries at the grocery store — not when we can buy a peck of apples or a half-peck of oranges for the same money. However, when red raspberries are in season, we harvest them in the backyard and eat them by the quart. Princes and potentates never lived so well.

Of course, a few quarts always go into jam — which is mighty tasty when the snow lies deep in the berry patch.

During the growing season, we also eat lettuce with every meal except breakfast, a luxury we certainly can't afford in winter. Our Grand Rapids brand lettuce is a bright pale green and crisps up beautifully in the refrigerator. One packet of seeds (39 cents) keeps us and our friends in lettuce from mid May until early October. We try to space our plantings so that when one row starts to become bitter, another row is coming along to take its place.

Although July is only half over, we have already harvested our first crop of fat yellow Texas onions. They are tied in bunches and hanging in the shed to dry. With any luck, we'll use some of them to flavor the stuffing on Thanksgiving.

We also have row after row of little green onions waiting in the wings. They're find in salads, on relish trays or as one of the principle ingredients in egg foo yong. Those we don't use fresh from the garden will end up on the drying rack in the shed.

Our peas are delicious right from the pod. But if you prefer them cooked, a quick dunking in boiling water is all they need.

The beans–well the beans have been a disappointment this year. Our plants were attacked by a variety of wildlife as soon as they popped their heads out of the ground: We replanted them three times before the varmits gave up. So our beans are going to be a little late this year.

Our little zucchini squash are just about ready to pick and I know — as much as we like zucchini — that we will be sick of it before the last one is plowed under. The acorn squash, of course, will keep for months in a cool place so there is little urgency to pick them as soon as they ripen.

If the weather stays warm, we should have ripe tomatoes from early August until the first frost in October. And the cucumber vines should be producing about the same time.

Potatoes, of course, are the mystery crop. You don't know what you have until you dig them up. But the foliage is a deep green and the lavender blossoms seem to indicate that everything is going well down under.

Of course, there are other dividends to a vegetable garden: A chance to get outdoors and do something different from your chores in the workaday world; an opportunity to watch the never-ending miracle of dry seeds springing into green plants; the satisfaction of creating a mosaic of colors and textures from the clay of Mother Earth; the small talk at dusk over garden fences with friends and neighbors.

Is a garden really worth all the trouble and expense?

Katie, there's not enough money in Fort Knox to buy one hill of beans from your own backyard.

So many people have been asking me if I am playing better tennis this year.

Mainly, they have been the people who played me last year.

I am happy to report that although my form is much the same, I have picked up a few tricks of the court that I have seen professionals use, which is bound to improve my game.

I have finally mastered what to do with the second tennis ball. Having small hands, I was becoming terribly self-conscious about keeping it in a can in the ear while I served the first one. I noted some women tucked the second ball just inside the elastic leg of their tennis panties. I tried, but found the space already occupied by a leg. Now I simply drop the second ball down my cleavage, giving me a chest that often stuns my opponent throughout an entire set.

Next, I have learned how to stall, thus throwing my entire opponent's game off. It's called the old tie-the-shoe-trick. When your opponent is ready to serve, simply drop to your knees, untie your shoe, rearrange its tongue, and tie it again. Baseball players use the old stall all the time. (Cincinnati Reds pitcher Pat Zachry recently swallowed his chewing tobacco and threw up against a dugout wall. I haven't mastered at what hour I can throw up. Sometimes, it is during a return.)

Another play is the rearrange-the-strings number. Never take the rap for a bad return or no return. Whenever you hit a ball into the net or miss it entirely, bring the game to a grinding halt by checking the strings of your racket, spending sometimes as much as five minutes separating them and testing their strength. This absolves you of any of the responsibility for a bad shot.

Forget all you have been told about concentration. It is overrated. Often, when there is time during one of my lobs, I yell across the net, "Your zipper is open," and have not only been ignored, but soundly punished for my good deed.

Probably my greatest accomplishment this year has been my skill at learning to play the game called, "Run Around the Backhand."

Early in my tennis career, I used to think when a ball landed to the left of me I had to use my backhand to return it. I have since learned that anything is better, including straddling a 15-foot cyclone fence.

No doubt about it – every day in every way, my game grows stronger. I saw one enthusiast the other day playing with his racket out of the press. I'll have to try that.

Not Very Refreshing

The pure clarinet of Benny Goodman brought back bittersweet memories to thousands of aging swingers at the Meadow Brook Music Festival Friday night.

I was reminded of Depression days when Mother lined my pockets with oilcloth so it would be easier for me to steal soup.

Amazingly, Goodman sounds as fine in 1976 as in 1936. His "Sing, Sing, Sing" and "Lady Be Good" almost made me weep for the sheer joy of the music and the nostalgia. But I would have been happier if I'd had oilcloth pockets. My wife forbid me to tell you why. But this is not yet a matriarchal society. I am going to tell you why, from the beginning...

As you know, if you have any culture at all, the Meadow Brook Music Festival is held outdoors every summer at Oakland University in Rochester. Most of the listeners pay $3 to sit on a grassy hillside. The swells pay $6 to sit in the pavilion with the orchestra.

For either price, the acoustics are great. But sometimes the weather isn't. The grass-sitters must gamble, especially when they buy tickets ahead of time.

For instance, the night before Goodman performed, some grass sitters took shelter from wind and rain in pup tents to hear the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, led by Aldo Ceccato, safe in the pavilion. It was as though the Italians had won World War II.

The Hillside is marvelous for top-flight hedonists. There's lots of room to spread a satin blanket under the Chateaubriand and champagne. It is not unusual to see picnickers sipping from crystal and pondering which fork is obligatory during an obbligato.

There are also the grassers with six-packs and old Army blankets, which is more my speed. But either way, slob or couth, that's the way to attend a concert. If the music is lousy, you can still save the evening with a good wallow in the potato salad.

I've enjoyed Meadow Brook's hillside many times. But there were also those occasions when I froze, or floated down the hill. So this year I bought pavilion tickets to the Friday jazz series. It cost around $80 but what is money when Oscar Peterson and the Preservation Hall Jazz Band are coming to town.

Besides, you don't have to spread a blanket to enjoy popcorn and lemonade with jazz. I figured there was no good reason why pavilion sitters couldn't have circumspect picnics in their laps. We'd have to leave the six-foot peppermill home, and there could be no more tap dancing on our knees. But there would be no need for dehydration.

So in preparation for opening night with Benny Goodman, I circumspectly mixed the juice of lemons and grains into a circumspect red gallon thermos. Inside the Meadow Brook gate, I brought a circumspect washtub full of popcorn. The music was beginning as we arrived at the pavilion.

"No refreshments are allowed in the pavilion," the usherette said.

In my most circumspect tone, I pointed out that the surrounding hills were alive with the sound of people chomping and gulping. They had paid $3 per ticket less than I did to get inside. What kind of reserve discrimination is this? She merely pointed to a sign that said "No Refreshments Allowed n Pavilion."

"They don't have that sign on your popcorn stand," I snarled circumspectly.

The usherette explained it was too hard to clean up the mess left behind by pavilion diners. It is simple rake and vacuum the hillside, but the cleaning equipment won't fit between the rows of seats.

I wasn't impressed. It would be easy to hire Oakland students to do a little stoop labor. But I was challenged. I couldn't abandon that booze and popcorn.

I located some friends on the grass, just a few feet behind our seats. They agreed to guard our treasure, from which I made frequent withdrawals. The juice went into a plastic cup and the popcorn went into napkins.

Fortunately the usherette gave me a good-sized program from behind which I drained the cup. This covert operation made my wife so nervous she threatened to relieve the tension by turning me in to Donald O'Dowd, Oakland president. But she didn't because she knew I'd squeal about the popcorn stuffed inside her blouse.

We have five more jazz concerts to go in the antispetic pavilion. Oilcloth linings are now being fashioned by my favorite seamstress.

See you at Meadow Brook. Just watch for a man who sloshes when he walks. He'll be escorting a woman with a size 50 bust.

Criminals are made, not born.

Meet Charlevoix

Barry Wood

Barry Wood is certified by the Michigan Heart Association as an instructor in cardio pulmonary resuscitation (CPR). This week he tells the Courier what CPR is and how it can be learned.

COURIER: What is CPR?

WOOD: It is mouth-to-mouth resuscitation in conjunction with external heart or cardiac compression massage.

COURIER: How did you happen to become a CPR instructor?

WOOD: I became involved when I first took a First Aid course. There were no certified CPR instructors so I enrolled at a course at Little Traverse Hospital.

COURIER: Are you the only certified instructor in town?

WOOD: Yes, unless someone else has been certified recently. I'm a member of the Charlevoix Fire Department and two or three other firemen help me but they aren't certified yet.

COURIER: Whom do you teach and how are classes arranged?

WOOD: We will teach any group of from eight to 15 persons. We will go anywhere within reason in the area, but because we pay our own expenses, there are some limitations. It is only a three-hour course. In the last two or three months we have taught about 60 people, including high school students, members of the recreation department, teachers, members of the Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township Fire Departments, some policemen–all kinds of people. Any group of individuals desiring instruction may call me at home, or the Fire Department.

COURIER: How long has CPR been in use?

WOOD: Mouth-to-mouth came into being after the war and external heart massage came later.

COURIER: Is CPR difficult to learn?

WOOD: No, any teenager who has enough physical strength for heart massage can do it. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation is fairly easy.

COURIER: How does CPR work?

WOOD: By massaging, or pushing on the chest, the heart compresses and spreads blood through the body, making the heart beat. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation furnishes oxygen.

COURIER: When would one use CPR?

WOOD: In any instance where there is stoppage of breath or heart. It is a basic life support system–the only thing that can be done for a heart victim without tools. Only the mouth and hands are used. Most heart victims die within an hour. In about five minutes there is a 50 percent chance of brain damage due to lack of oxygen, and in 10 minutes a person can become a vegetable for the same reason. Besdies heart cases, CPR is used in drownings, electrical shocks, auto accidents and baby accidents, such as those with plastic bags, excess phlegm, etc. Mothers of small children, therefore, especially need to know how to apply CPR. While CPR is being given to anyone, an ambulance should be called to get the person to the hospital.

COURIER: It sounds as if almost everyone should know how to apply CPR.

WOOD: Yes. Many people try it but are ineffective because they don't do it properly. That's why lessons are important.

COURIER: Is there also a need for more certified instructors?

WOOD: Yes, I wish there were more. It's a simple thing to learn and if there were more instructors we might save more lives. It takes only one day at the hospital to be certified as an instructor.

COURIER: What do you do when you're not with the Fire Department or teaching CPR?

WOOD: I'm on the Police Force Auxiliary and the Ambulance Crew. I'm also a carpenter with my brother, the R. B. Wood Construction Company.

City Flags Still Available

The City of Charlevoix's new flag is now available for sale.

It can be purchased at Ken Cellner's Barber Shop, next to the Central Drug Store, for $25. Sales are being handled by the American Legion and all profits are ear-marked for a Winter Sports Program for the children of Charlevoix.

The flag was conceived and designed by Lynne Malpeli and Swannee Alden. Beside the big Charlevoix "C" are shown the Charlevoix Lighthouse and a Mackinaw boat.

The Mackinaw boat was first built by the French and was popular in the 18th and 19th centuries. It was usually 26 feet long and seven and a half feet wide. Its flat bottom and shallow draft made it an ideal work boat for the Great Lakes because it would be easily beached. In fact, the two masts were commonly used as rollers to pull the boat up the sloping shores of the lakes.

Food Stamps Go Up

Social Security recipients who also qualify for food stamps may find they will have to pay more for their food stamps beginning in July when a 6.4 percent hike in Social Security benefits takes effect.

Because the cost of food stamps depends on the amount of net income household income, the boost in Social Security may also increase the amount a family must pay for food stamps.

However, the increase in the Social Security check will not affect the cost of stamps for those households who received less than $391 from Social Security before July.

For any household whose total increase in income amounts to less than $25 a month, a U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations permit delaying the adjustment in the cost of stamps until the next certification or until other changes occur which make the total more than $25.

The $25 limit applies to the total benefits of all household members.

First Position

Beginning Dance

By MARSHA ROBINSON

"Now, put out your right leg like this."

Six small leotarded dancers confidently stuck out a leg and pointed toe. A seventh hesitated a bit, started to slide out her right foot as she cast her eyes around the rest of the students sitting in the circle, but then quickly opted for the left in order to conform to the girl next to her.

"Oooh, I can't...I just can't do it with this leg," groaned another in purple.

Joan Karff made a rapid survey of her class, and said, "Well then, just use the leg that feels most comfortable to you."

Relieved and beaming, the little student in purple switched to her right leg and with "pretty arms" extended over their heads in graceful curves, the students began the exercise.

Mrs. Karff has been teaching children between the ages of 7 and 12 at the Studio of Bodywork in the Market mall, downtown Charlevoix, since the beginning of July.

They are coming along, she said.

"Now, when I say, 'Point your toes,' at least toes point," she smiled.

For most of the year, Mrs. Karff works exclusively with adults, both as an instructor at Rice University, and as the founder and choreographer of a new dance group in Houston, Texas.

Summers, along with an adult class, she teaches children, patiently straightening a back here, bending a knee there, and keeping everyone happy and moving.

For the youngsters, the trick is to keep the class jumping from one exercise to the next so they don't get bored, she said.

Adults have it over children when it comes to technique, but the children shine in the creative periods.

"They're less inhibited than grown-ups," Mrs. Karff said, "They come up with some really neat looking positions."

"You have to find a balance between the discipline, the technique itself and the creative aspect," she said.

In terms of technique, Mrs. Karff concentrates on rhythm for the younger kids and aims to make them more flexible, stronger, and "more aware of their own bodies."

About half of the kids signed up for the class on their own initiative. For the rest initiative came from their parents.

One little blonde said her Dad signed her up, but she liked it "anyways".

"It's hard work, isn't it?" Mrs. Karff asked her.

"You bet," she said.

August 3 Primary Candidate

Hayes Seeks First Elected Term

Charlevoix County Prosecutor Roy C. Hayes is finding himself having to run for his first term office after being appointed to the position last January by Charlevoix County Circuit Judge Martin B. Breighner.

Hayes took the job when former county prosecutor Harvey C. Varnum announced his intentions to return to private practice.

A native Detroiter, Hayes is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame and University of Detroit Law School.

After earning his law degree, Hayes served as editor and publisher of a small legal magazine in Detroit, and joined the Wayne County prosecutor's staff in 1967, spending two years in trial work.

In 1969, he went to Chicago and did work for the American Bar Association, then returned as executive assistant to Wayne County Prosecutor William L. Cahalan and was named to head the Wayne County Organized Crime Task Force.

Asked what services he would plan to continue if elected as prosecutor, Hayes said he would continue his battle against white collar or business crime in the county.

Hayes says it is one of the few areas a prosecutor can take the initiative and make it known it wouldn't be allowed within the county.

"I think it is an affirmative approach," he added.

The prosecutor said he was also interested in continuing his seminar program for local and area law enforcement agencies. His first program dealt with reviewing search and seizure laws.

Hayes said it is important to upgrade the police's knowledge of law since it constantly changes.

Another area the county official said he would like to continue is the use of volunteer law students as law clerks, who spend time researching law questions for the prosecutor's office and free the prosecutor to work closer to the public.

Asked if he planned on making any staff changes, Hayes said he was happy with his present situation, he added that he has made a request for one more secretary.

The larger the staff, Hayes said the more he is able to deal with civil litigation previously not worked on and possibly in the long-run save the county money.

Hayes added that Charlevoix County needs to continue having a full-time prosecutor to avoid possible conflicts of interest prevalent in a small community.

He said that being the chief law enforcement officer for the county, as well as civil attorney for both the Board of Commissioners and all county departments would make it hard for a part-time prosecutor not to have a conflict.

"The press of business in this community is very busy," he said.

Warrants issued for felony cases in Charlevoix County alone have jumped from 34 to over 65 in a year, Hayes said.

"I think it helps morale with law enforcement and the public knowing you have someone a 100 percent of the time," he said.

Hayes says his present budget of around $60,000 is adequate for now, but added that it takes a lot of his time to work in three courts and with five law enforcement agencies.

Hayes classified the prosecutor's position as being the chief executive position of the county, which must be responsive to the people's needs and must be acceptable to the people.

"The prosecutor is responsible to the public and must know where the pulse of the people is," he continued.

"He's the boss of law enforcement."

He said the prosecutor must determine the law enforcement goals, make sure they are acceptable to the community and then enforce them.

The official said that one of the things that drew him to the prosecution side of law was that high paid lawyers could usually get a defendant off.

In an adversary law system, he said it is important that there be equal sides.

Hayes said he felt he was the aggressive and forceful person needed to make sure that equality is existent in Charlevoix County.

The Race for Prosecutor

Former Assistant Wants Chief Spot

Former Charlevoix County assistant prosecutor Donald J. Berlage says he's interested in stepping up to the top prosecutor's stop because he can provide good service for less money than is being spent now.

The 47-year-old Republican served part-time under Prosecutor Harvey Varnum until Varnum retired January 1, 1976.

Berlage came to Charlevoix nearly 10 years ago from Toledo, Ohio, where he practiced law and served as corporate attorney for Kaiser Jeep Corporation. Prior to that, he served as a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in San Francisco and New York City investigating the Communist Party U.S.A. and engaged in the apprehension of the so-called "Top Ten" Communist Party officials who jumped bail after being indicted under the Smith Act.

A graduate of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, in 1950, with a degree in business administration, he also attended the University of Alaska in Fairbanks, and was graduatedfrom the University of Cincinnati College of Law in 1953.

Berlage has been a member of the Charlevoix County Planning Commission since 1970 and is currently serving as Charlevoix City Attorney and township attorney for surrounding townships.

The Charlevoix attorney drafted an Air Quality Control Ordinance for Charlevoix Township when Medusa Cement opened its Charlevoix operation that has since received national attention. Most recently it was used to pattern state air pollution legislation after.

When asked what services he would continue or expand if elected, Berlage said he would not expand any services that would result in an additional expense to the taxpayer.

The Charlevoix resident seriously questioned the almost doubling of the prosecutor's budget from $36,500 to $65,500 in two years.

"In my opinion this increase is a burden on the taxpayer," he said in a recent interview.

He said the level of service provided by Harvey Varnum and himself as assistant compared to what presently exists cannot justify the additional expense.

So far as continuation of services is concerned, Berlage said he would provide the same level at one-half the cost.

He added that if elected, he would reduce clerical and administrative costs by increasing efficiency.

Berlage said he would be prepared to submit a budget to the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, which if mutually agreed upon, would remain at the same level for the next four years, except for cost of living increases.

Berlage said the major role of a prosecutor in a smaller county, such as Charlevoix, is criminal prosecution. He said the prosecutor has very few duties in civil matters, except as legal advisor to the county board of commissioners and election law matters.

"The only county ordinance that exists to be enforced, which is both criminal and civil, is the county sanitary code," he continued.

"This enforcement is only a small part of the caseload of the county prosecutor."

Now you can enjoy the convenience of annual meter reading and budget payments, too!

If you'd like the added convenience of having your Gas meter read only once a year, plus all the benefits of our 12-Month Budget Payment Plan, here's good news.

PEAK WINTER BILLS
12-MONTH BUDGET PAYMENTS

Michigan Consolidated Gas Company is pleased to announce the availability of its Annual Meter Reading Program, as recently approved by the Michigan Public Service Commission, in conjunction with its 12-Month Budget Plan. You may now take advantage of the additional convenience of having your Gas meter read only once a year, while continuing to enjoy the practical benefit of paying a level Gas bill all year long.*

The Annual Meter Reading Program means just what it says. You'll be billed each month for your established budget payment amount, but your Gas meter will be read only once each year. Modern billing procedures assure that only one annual reading is needed to determine your year-end account adjustment as well as compute your budget payment amount for the next year.

Because the cost of Natural Gas is rising, along with other energy forms, the 12-Month Budget Payment Plan is a customer convenience that continues to make more sense each year. It allows you to pay for your full year's Gas cost over 12 balanced payments, eliminating the normal highs and lows that result from seasonal variations in use. In fact, mid-winter payments can be reduced by nearly half from what they might otherwise be if calculated on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

To begin benefiting from the convenience of both programs, simply mark the enrollment card we're sending you and return it by mail. We'll do the rest to enroll you in the Annual Meter Reading and 12-Month Budget Payment Plan programs.

*To qualify for Annual Meter Reading, you must also be a residential customer on the 12-Month Budget Payment Plan. But it is possible to join the Budget Plan without taking advantage of the additional convenience of Annual Meter Reading.

CETA Employees Dwindle to 41

The number of Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) employees in Charlevoix County has dwindled to 41 from the high of over 100 last year, according to Helen Phillips, assistant administrator of the program.

The decrease is due to fewer funds being allocated to the county under the Federal Act.

Since the program was started in the fall of 1974, over $1 million dollars has gone through the county to hire persons to work in jobs in the public sector, including schools, cities, townships, hospitals, road commission, health department, Department of Natural Resources, the county, and others.

CETA was enacted to provide jobs as a temporary solution to the tight job market. Priorities in filling jobs have been given to unemployed heads of households with dependents, unemployed youth, unemployed veterans, unemployed minorities, and other low income groups, in that order.

Present funds for CETA will run out January 31, 1977, and although Congress has voted another appropriation, President Ford has not signed the bill.

Presently, CETA funds are being used to employ the following persons in the county: two in the County Clerk's office, two in the District Court, three for the Commission on Aging, four in the Sheriff's Department, one in the Health Department, four in the Twin Valley school system, three in the Boyne Falls school system, one in the city of East Jordan, four on the County Board Commission, one in Peaine Township, one in St. James Township, one in Charlevoix Township, one in the village of Boyne Falls, two for the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services, two in the Char-Em school district, eight in the Charlevoix school system and one at Whiting Park.

Meetings Changed

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners will meet twice a month instead of once as the result of action taken last week by the Board.

A motion presented by Commissioner Martin Paul of Boyne City citing the lack of time to complete county business in one session and suggesting the second meeting was unanimously passed.

The Board is now scheduled to meet at 9:30 a.m. the second Wednesday and at 7:30 p.m. the fourth Wednesday of each month. Previously only the Tuesday meeting was regularly held.

If it is determined that the evening meeting is not needed in any given month, a public notice to that effect will be published.

Commissioners will receive the same compensation for the two meetings that they have been receiving for one, $140 a month. The only additional expense to the county will be mileage for each commissioner to the second meeting.

City Annexes 3 Parcels

Charlevoix became larger by some 50 acres last week by the annexation of three parcels of land from Charlevoix Township.

The parcels are all contiguous to the City, uninhabited and made up of portions of the airport runway, the municipal golf course and Brookside Cemetery.

Annexation was finalized when the County Board of Commissioners approved the move.

The public hearing on the matter scheduled during the Commissioners' meeting brought out only four city councilmen – Wallace, Erber, Morris and Plumm – and Charlevoix Township Supervisor Oscar Ward.

The only objection voiced by Ward was that some future use of the golf course property north of Division Street and west of Mercer Boulevard might create more traffic and noise problems in the area.

Aging Meetings Changed

The Charlevoix County Commission on Aging has begun holding its monthly meetings at the sites of its Nutritional Meal Program.

As a regular part of its agenda, it will meet with the Seniors to discuss with them any questions they have on the Commission's projects and future plans.

The July meeting was held in Boyne City at the American Legion Hall and the August meeting will be held at the Charlevoix High School. In September it will meet at the Senior Center in East Jordan.

The Commission hopes to be able to serve the community and its Seniors better by following the rotation procedure.

Boater Chooses Charlevoix Over New York for 4th

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

LADY MARGARET was invited to participate in the Bicentennial parade of Tall Ships and vintage vessels during Operation Sail in New York City on the 4th of July.

She came to Charlevoix instead.

LADY MARGARET, 101 feet long, is an all wood traditional power yacht, owned by newspaper publisher John P. McGoff, of Williamston, Michigan.

When she spent more than a week tied up near the old Browe Marina boathouse, rumors circulated that she was THE SEQUOIA in disguise. SEQUOIA is the United States Presidential Yacht. LADY MARGARET is a look-alike of the same vintage–the 1930's.

The McGoff family took over the ship in April, 1975, but Ms. McGoff (Margaret) has only just begun to probe the yellowing ship's logs in which the boat's origins and history are written.

The elegant vessel's hull is mahogany over oak, according to Tom Janecek, 20 of Pontiac, one of the four crew members aboard. Much of the original planking in the hull had to be replaced as the McGoff's restored the boat.

Mrs. McGoff directed the year-long restoration of the interior, which is mostly paneled teak.

Mrs. McGoff laughed as she discussed her efforts to keep interior furnishings consistant with the boat's tradition.

"I told my decorator, from Jacobsen's, to keep me in line," she said. "I tend toward more contemporary decorating."

LADY MARGARET'S cabin on the middle deck is divided between living-dining area, galley and bridge.

It is furnished with antiques whose dark wood is balanced by light seat cushions and a sense of space from the large windows which line the main salon.

Staterooms are below. The four owner-guest staterooms are toward the stern. Captains and crew's quarters are forward.

Sitting around a coffee table in the living room, crewmembers, Mrs. McGoff and three of the McGoff's five children (Steve, 6, Andy, 4, and Tom, 15) offered random insights into the ship's history.

Janecek observed, 'We estimate that if it were possible to build this boat today it would cost $4 million."

Looking through the logs, Mrs. McGoff found the designer's name--John Trumpy. The builder was Mathis of Annapolis, Md.

Previously she was dubbed FRANSU and GOVERNOR'S LADY. But no one is sure what her original name was.

There have been three previous owners, amongst them John Charles Thomas, famous Metropolitan Opera baritone.

The crew offered facts that the 101 foot long ship is 26 feet wide, and thus not particularly seaworthy in heavy weather.

As a result, the McGoff's plan to cruise the North Channel and Georgian Bay and a bit of eastern Lake Superior. LADY MARGARET'S shallow draft, 6½ feet, permits easy cruising in the North Channel but is part of the seaworthiness problem.

She is powered by a pair of twin diesel engines. There are also two diesel generators aboard to run the lights, stoves, trash masher, washer-dryer and other utilities.

She carries enough diesel fuel to motor 1000 miles. With five heads, two showers and a tub, she carries 1800 gallons of water.

For running about and water skiing, two in-board-out-board power boats are swung on and off her cabin top.

A low period in the boat's history came in 1932 when she was sunk in a collison with the STATEN ISLAND FERRY.

At a loss for a substantiated explanation for the collision, the crew and family surmise that she was probably something of a party boat.

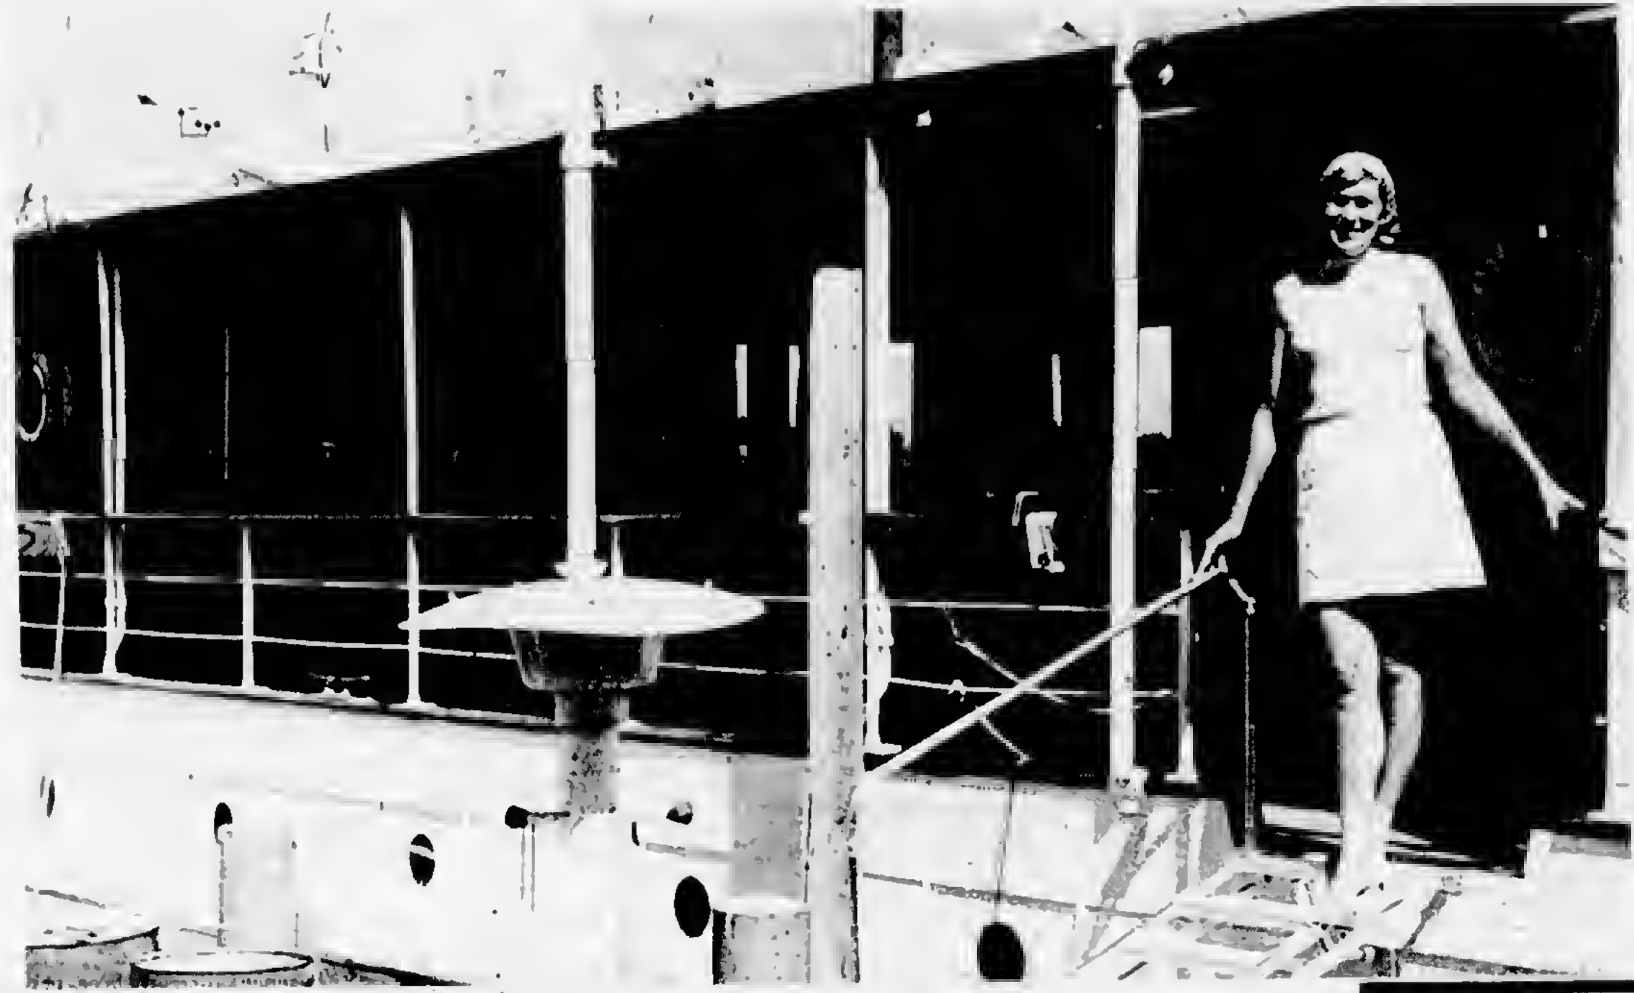
One of her most glorious moments is recorded in a photograph hung in the main cabin.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt came aboard as guest of Opera star Thomas. Surrounded by dignitaries and functionaries they were photographed on the open decks surrounding the main cabin.

In order for the late President, then paralyzed, to descend from the cabin to the staterooms, a special elevator was installed, which according to Mrs. McGoff still functions.

But now LADY MARGARET shuns the public spotlight in favor of quiet cruising from such ports as Charlevoix.



MRS. JOHN McGOFF of Williamston, Michigan and her husband decided it would be more fun to be in Charlevoix over the Fourth of July than in New York City.

Leukemia Week Begins Monday

Next week is "Leukemia Week", and in an effort to raise funds locally to help persons with this dread disease, the Brucie Chapter of the Children's Leukemia Foundation of Michigan is sponsoring a Flea Market in Boyne City this Saturday, July 24.

The Brucie chapter was organized in 1972 in Boyne City to give the people of the northern area closer contact with the Michigan Leukemia Foundation. The chapter was named "Brucie" after six-year-old Bruce Oakes of Boyne City who died of leukemia in 1971.

Chapter headquarters is at 406 McKinley Street, Boyne City, and anyone wishing to make a contribution toward the work of this organization may do so by sending it there.

Woman Saves Game

Men's Fast Pitch Game Not Over

By GREG GRUBUGH

The first woman ever to play in Charlevoix Men's Fast-Pitch helped Fochtman's save a night Saturday.

And the game of the week still isn't over with.

Saturday night, Potter's Appliance went up against Village Milkhouse. Potter's took a lead of one run in the first inning up to the fourth when the Milkhouse scored a run and then the game stayed tied up to the 12th inning when Potter's scored in the top of the 12th. Milkhouse came back and put one run across and threatened with a man on third with one out, but Potter's shut them off and the game then went to the 14th inning before the game was called. Since players from both teams had to play over in Petoskey on the All Stars, the game will be finished at the next meeting of both teams.

Other games of the week.

Wednesday, Dave Siegrest took Fochtman to a win over Boss Engineering 6-to-3. Bud Boss took the loss, hits for Fochtman were by Bill Morse, Glen Morse, Joe Bodzick. Both Glen and Joe also had home runs, Dave Siegrest, Terry Ellis, Burt Matteson, Tom Burley, and Mike Strobel. Boss's had two home runs by Dar Hormonn and Bud Boss. Bud also had a single. Saturday night after that 14th inning game Boss Engineering went against Kadens who won it 8 to 7. Jerry Wagar pitched the win and Bud Boss took the loss. Kadens had hits off of Ken Nelson, Hal Price, Denny Gunderson, Bill Frazier, Clark Ketchum, Larry Gunderson, and Jerry Wagar. Boss's hits were by Dan McKenzie, Matt Doan.

The nightcap saw Wojan Aluminum lose to Fochtman's, 7 to 2, with the help of right fielder Kathy Sladek, the first woman ever to play in Men's fast-pitch in Charlevoix. Dave Siegrest hurled the win. Brian Warner took the loss. Kathy struck out her first time up with no outs and bases loaded, but said afterwards if she would have been able to bat again she thought she could get a hit. Hits for Fochtman's were by Gary Hice, Gordy Kruskle, Dave Strobel and Bill Morris. Wojans had hits by Brian Warner.

Pension Checks Hit $7.3 Million

How much do Charlevoix County residents stand to gain from the boost in Social Security payments, which has just gone into effect?

What will be the average size of retirement checks to local beneficiaries under the new schedule?

Based upon the latest figures from the Social Security Administration, which show the number of recipients in the area and the amount they have been getting, their benefits during the remainder of this year will be approximately $221,000 greater than they were in the last half of 1975.

The total gain locally, over the next 12 months, will amount to $441,000 under the new rates.

The increase represents a 6.4 percent hike for those getting Social Security benefits as well as for most of the people receiving Supplementary Security payments, which aid the aged, the blind and the disabled in those states that participate in the supplementol program.

The added benefits, which affect 37 million people in the two programs, will cost $5.3 billion over the year, according to the Social Security Administration.

The increase was mandated by a change in the law, which became effective last year, under which any future increases in benefits are to be tied to increases in the cost of living.

The determining factor is the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index and the amount it goes up between the first quarter of one year and the first quarter of the next.

Under the new scale, the annual payment for a retired worker rises from an average of $2,448 to $2,616 and, for the average couple, where both are receiving benefits, from $4,176 to $4,464.

The maximum, for men currently retiring at age 65, goes from $4,366 to $4,648. The new minimum will be $1,295 as against $1,218 previously.

What it adds up to, for Charlevoxi County as a whole, is that pension payments to local residents will amount to approximately $7,330,000 in the current fiscal year, as compared with $6,889,000 last year.

As for Social Security taxes, they remain the same. The only adjustment this year has been to levy taxes on the first $15,300 of income instead of on $14,100.

Board Elects New Officers

Officers of the Charlevoix Board of Education who had served during the 1975-76 school year were re-elected for another year at the organizational meeting of the board held Monday prior to the regular board meeting.

Max Nuvak will again serve as president; Charles A. Elzinga as vice president; Kenneth Boss as secretory and Claire C. Martin as treasurer.

Other members of the board are Donald A. Bruwn, Mrs. Ardeth Wieland and Rnbert J. Cook.

Boss and Brown were re-elected in June to four year terms on the board.

During the organizational meeting, Supt. James A. McKimmy served as chairman pro-tem.

Courtesy Guide Available

The Charlevoix County Courtesy Guide, containing a complete map of Charlevoix County, is now on the presses and will soon be in the hands of Chambers of Commerce, the American Automobile Association, the Board of County Commissioners, and others for public distribution.

The map contained within the Guide folds out showing the mainland of Charlevoix County on one side and the Beaver Island group on the reverse side. Spotted throughout the Guide will be listings of interesting things to do and places to see within the county. The ads will assist visitors in locating places to sleep, eat and recreate.

In addition to the above, the Board of Commissioners has also authorized the printing of 20,000 additional county maps. These will be available for distribution by the County Clerk's Office, Sheriff's Department, Road Commission, and at other locations throughout the County.

Blood Drive for Peggy Carey Draws Crowd

It was incredible...the response was unbelievable. Workers on the Red Cross Bloodmobile said they had never before drawn that much blood in one day, Mrs. David Fowler said of the emergency blood drive held Monday for Peggy Carey, a leukemia patient presently being treated at the University Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Mrs. Fowler, who heads the blood program in Charlevoix and who assisted with this one said "It is gratifying to see that people still care for people".

A total of 313 donors including 140 first time donors turned out to donate blood. Their efforts resulted in 273 units of blood that will be credited to Peggy's 'account'. Others could not give for various reasons. Other leukemia patients will also benefit from the effort.

The drive was organized by Cheri and Terri Morris, former classmates of Peggy's at the Charlevoix High School. They were assisted by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morris, their younger sister and brother, Liz and Charlie, and an older sister, Pam, a nurse at Little Traverse Hospital. As the project grew, it became necessary to call in the Red Cross Bloodmobile from Flint and to enlist the assistance of persons who had worked in earlier drives. That was how Mrs. Fowler, who has headed recent drives in the county, got involved as did many others.

Peggy is the daughter of Mrs. Atwood Schaefer and William Carey. She is a student in the School of Nursing at the University of Michigan.

Marching Band and the Harbor Springs High School Band, the ever-popular Epsilon Jazz Band of Petoskey, plus several queen's floats and other entries which were nearing the 100 mark at last weekend.

The Doll and Dress-up parade, held during the afternoon in past years, will be held in East Park beginning at 11:30 a.m. when entries will be registered. After a mini-parade on the stage, the youngsters will be presented with their prizes and treat and go to the top of South Bridge-st. hill where they will join the parade for the march to Clinton-st. They will be accompanied by adults. Prizes of $3, $2 and $1 in silver dollars will be offered to the top winners in each of the two categories. Mrs. Gary Hice and Mrs. Robert Winchester will be the judges.

A full 2½-hours of entertainment in East Park will follow the parade with W.C. Vogel of Station WVOY as master of ceremonies.

There will be entertainment from the stage featuring the Snowbelt Chorus composed of 20 men from Charlevoix and Boyne City directed by Dr. Robert Tollas and Dr. John Lignell; the Show Boat, a group of seven vocalists and instrumentalists from Ball State College in Indiana that is appearing nightly at the Weathervane Inn; a performance by the gymnasts from the National Palestrium of Williamsburg where some of this country's outstanding gymnasts have trained; a vocal program by "Bethlehem", a gospel singing group that is touring the area; a performance by the Midshipmen of Petoskey; a presentation from the stage by the Young Americans performing regularly during the summer months at the Torch Light theatre in Petoskey and by the Charlevoix Summer Music Theatre appearing under the direction of John Raleeh at the Grey Gables Inn and Castle.

After a break for dinner, the evening entertainment will begin with a concert by the Charlevoix City Band from the band stage in East Park at 7:30 p.m. During the performance, to be MC'd by Vogel and Bill Supernaw of Station WJML in Petoskey, the 1976 Venetian Queen and her court will be introduced before going to the waterfront where they will view and judge the Venetian Boat Parade on Round Lake that will follow the concert. A mini-water skiing show will be presented by a seven-man team prior to the boat parade.

The Boat Parade is being organized by Barry Boone and the Charlevoix Yacht Club and will feature decorated pleasure craft entering from Lake Charlevoix.

The massive fireworks display to be fired aloft from the municipal dock, will follow.

Sunday's activities will feature an open house aboard the U.S.C.G. Cutter Sundew from 12 until 3 p.m. with crew members serving as guides and an hour-long water skiing show on Lake Charlevoix off the depot beach beginning at 2 p.m.

FAITH DEFLECTS US FROM THE EVILS OF GOSSIP

Everyone is aware of the irreparable harm that can be caused by the spreading of tales about our neighbor, and yet the temptation to do so is often difficult to resist. It is an unfortunate facet of human nature to relish any kind of scandal or sensational story, even though it may be entirely untrue or, at best, greatly exaggerated. However, faith leads us away from this ugly habit, and encourages us instead to look for the good in our fellow human beings. Go to your Church, where you will learn that telling the good things about others will make you look better, and you will be a lot happier as a result of it.

Public Property Tax Meeting Set for July 21

By PEG OHLE

Everyone concerned with rising property taxes will have an opportunity to listen and be heard at a meeting set for this Wednesday evening, July 21, at 7:30 in the Top O' Michigan building in Boyne City.

The meeting, sponsored jointly by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and the County Planning Department, will center around the just-released summary of the Interim Report of the Governor's Advisory Task force on Property Tax Revision.

All county, city, township and school officials in the county have been especially invited to the meeting, and the general public is also welcome. Clyde Cunningham, Chairman of the County Board, will preside.

While the report says that property tax is basically the best way to support local government, it makes four recommendations to improve the current property tax relief law in areas where problems have become evident.

The Law

The first recommendation has to do with the law and related forms and instructions, which the report says are more complicated than necessary.

"This complexity has deterred some people from receiving the property tax relief to which they were entitled and has caused others to hire tax preparers. The complexity has also increased state administrative costs," according to the report.

Citing the complex section of the law providing three different formulas for senior citizens, veterans, and the blind to secure tax relief, the report states that exemptions should be simplified into a single formula. It also says that current servicemen should not be treated equivalently to veterans as average military pay now exceeds average civilian pay.

Tax Credits

The second recommendation is that property tax credits should be reduced to $500 except for farmers eligible to include the taxes on their farmland. Recent legislation increased the limit to $1,200.

"Since property tax relief is only received by households whose property tax burden is above average in relation to income, ...the higher credit limit is not equitable for the majority of households that live within their means apart from occasional financial emergencies," the report states.

Renters

The third recommendation has to do with renters. A 1973 law permitted renters to receive property tax relief on an equivalent basis with homeowners, but evidence suggests that few renters have received property tax credits. The apparent reason is that while the 17 percent rent property tax equivalent is appropriate for the state as an average, renters live mostly in high tax rate areas of the state.

The report suggests that the preferable solution is "to vary the 17 percent tax equivalent figure with the local tax rate actually paid....An alternative would be to increase the tax equivalent figure to 20 percent for certain high tax locations where many renters live."

Fraudulent Claims

The fourth recommendation is based on findings that exaggerated and fraudulent claims for property tax credits are a problem, due in part to the complexity of the law.

"Adoption of the first recommendation wuuld reduce inaccurate credit claims," the report says.

"The forms should be redesigned to require more information on sources of income and special status (age, veteran, etc.). The Treasury Department should be given the funds and the authority to verify amounts of incomes from public sources, such as social security, veteran benefits, unemployment insurance and public assistance."

Assessing

If the above findings are not controversial, attendants at the meeting might like to consider the suggestion that "assessing districts should be reduced in number and increased in size.

"The larger units should meet minimum staffing requirements and performance criteria should be established. Assessing districts which don't meet the professional standards established should have the state perform the assessment role. Large commercial and industrial property should be assessed by the state to assure uniformity."

Conclusions to the report are three-fold:

1. Use of the property tax is limited by a complex system of millage limitations in law and, in some cases, by constitutional provisions. Resistance to increasing millage ratea sometimes precludes the growth of the property tax revenue, thereby decreasing municipal services which causes urban decline.

2. The property tax is heavily used for educational purposes which effectively limits its use for general government purposes.

3. State-mandated regulatory costs reduce the amount of spendable funds available to local governments for general purposes.

Concert

Mildred Dilling, acknowledged by critics to be the greatest woman solo harpist, will appear in concert Tuesday evening July 20, at 8:30 in the Bay View Auditorium.

Her program will include selections from Bach, Handel, Grandjany, Zabel, Watkins, Tournier, Salzedo, Debussy and Renie.

In addition to her Bay View concert performance, the artist will conduct a three-day workshop for harpists and give private lessons.

City Gets $10,000

The City of Charlevoix has received $10,000 from the Michigan Aeronautics Commission for the purpose of seal-coating and marking the runways, taxiway and apron of the Municipal Airport.

The City will provide matching funds of $10,000 for a total project of $20,000.

Extension Director Highlights Year

By Ed Rebman,
County Extension Director
And Secretary
Of the District

The program and activities of the Charlevoix Soil and Water Conservation District for the year were under the leadership and direction of five directors: Clayton Healey, East Jordan; Charles Kiteley, Charlevoix; Terry Healey, Charlevoix; John Wieland, Charlevoix and William Korthase Jr. of Boyne City.

Clayton Healey served as chairman, Charles Kiteley as Vice-Chairman and Terry Healey as Treasurer. Ed Rebman, Charlevoix County Extension Director has served as Secretary of the District ever since it was organized in September 1948.

The directors reviewed 13 permit applications under Act 346, the Inland Lakes and Streams Act. All of these were proposed according to specifications or were under the responsibility of the DNR.

The directors again assisted in the Conservation Education Program by awarding a scholarship to Ann Schenk, Charlevoix Middle School teacher to attend the Conservation School at Higgins Lake. Her report is printed elsewhere in this edition.

The directors entered into a program with the Emmet, Antrim and Otsego Districts and exchanged copies of board minutes. Thus a more unified program in soil and water conservation was made possible.

A dedication program sponsored jointly by the City of Boyne City was held on August 28, 1975. This marked the completing of the erosion control of the shoreline and the Memorial Park building in the RC&D program.

The directors and the secretary again completed the printing of a new County Plat book.

Assistance was given to the youth education program by awarding four scholarships to 4-H members in the Conservation project. They also supplied materials to all of the churches in the county regarding Soil Stewartship week. Other materials to deal in the conservation programs were also supplied.

The directors approved two applications from land owners under Act 116, The Farmland and Open Space Act.

Due to the many requests the directors cooperate with other agencies in sponsoring an educational program in the NOTILL planting of legume seed in sod fields.

The district assists the land owners in the soil testing program by buying the soil test boxes and absorbing some of the cost.

Farmers Honored

Beginning in 1951 and every year since, the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District have shown their appreciation to District Cooperators who in their opinion have contributed greatly to the District's soil and water environmental program. The winners this year are as follows:

Maplewood Farms, Route No. 3, Charlevoix is a 160 acre dairy farm located in Section 1, 36 Hayes Township and is managed by Terry and Jan Healey. Along with dairy, this is the largest producing maple syrup farm in Charlevoix County with over 6000 taps producing from 800-1500 gallons of maple syrup a year. Conservation practices established are conservation cropping systems, minimum tillage, strip cropping, irrigation management system, farm waste pollution abatement system, and various woodland and wildlife management practices.

Wayne Saunders, Route No. 2, Charlevoix has a 170 acre Beef and Poultry farm located in Eveline Township, Section 17 and 18 and managed by Wayne and Sally Saunders. Conservation practices established are conservation cropping systems, minimum tillage, strip cropping, tile drainage, grassland management.

Mrs. Betty Currey, Route No. 2, Charlevoix owns a 325 acre sheep farm located in Marion Township, Section 4. Along with raising sheep, maple syrup is also made.

Philip Myner, Ironton has a bulldozer type of business. He has dug several manure storages for livestock farms. He has cleared additional land for property owners. He completed road work in several sub-divisions.

County Experiences Many Accomplishments

By Clayton Healey
District Chairman

This progress report has been prepared to show conservation accomplishments for the fiscal year 1975 by United States Soil Conservation Service personnel assisting the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District. Bill Grimm, District Conservationist, Rod Cortright, Soil Conservationist and Ray Weiss, Soil Conservation Technician, provide the technical assistance necessary to carry out the programs in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service and the Agricultural Stabilization & Conservation Service. Their office is located in the Sears Building, 29 North Park Street, Boyne City, Michigan 49712.

There are 264,960 acres of land in Charlevoix County. Of this acreage 45,000 is state owned. The remaining land area is under private and municipal ownership. Four hundred thirty-four land owners in the county are District Cooperators representing 59,314 acres of land. The Charlevoix District is continually adjusting and revising it's program and developing new priorities to meet the conservation needs of the District.

This year the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District approved 9 new District Cooperators, 16 Soil & Water Conservation plans and revised 7 others. One hundred fifty-five land owners were assisted with 288 service calls. Inventories and evaluations for land use treatment problems were made up to 30 land owners.

Twenty units of government were assisted with 23 contacts in which 12 inventories and evaluations were submittes for resource planning.

The following are some of the Conservation practices applied by the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District Cooperators for fiscal year 1975: Conservation cropping system, 400 acres, crop residue management 587 acres, critical area planting 29 acres, minimum tillage 440 acres, tile drainage 1005 ft., grassland planting 281 acres, grassland management 538 acres, farm ponds 1, wildlife habitat management 1435 acres, woodland improvement 305 acres, land adequately treated 2988 acres, streambank protection 3500 ft., diversions 362 ft., waterways 5 acres and recreation improvement 32 acres.

New cooperators joining the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservatiuon District in fiscal year 1975-1976 were: James Kurtz, Bruce Healey, Daniel Chapp, Arthur Rubloff, Karl Fricke, John Frey, David Parsons, Shirley Austin, Robert Malpass.

School Teacher Relates Learning Experience

By Ann Scbenk
Charlevoix Middle School Teacher

This report will consist of activities I participated in and a few of the many ideas I received from the Staff, the DNR people, and fellow teachers on how to gear what I learned to teach students about their environment, its past, present and future.

Sunday evening was spent getting acquainted with others by choosing a small rock, observing it closely and giving it back to the DNR director, Barb Horn. She then dumped the rocks in the middle of the floor, had us find our own rock, find a person who matched our rock or matched our rock to another person's rock and introduce this person to all the others. An excellent beginning! I hope to use a similar plan for the opening day of school since learning 150 names is usually a hard and uninteresting thing to do.

Monday morning Carl Bennett of the DNR Wildlife division spoke to the group on ecology. He explained that the artificial and natural system must work together and that change is not necessarily bad. He guided us on a tour of DNR study sections involving various techniques of clearing forests to produce better trees and better wildlife habitat.

In the afternoon we visited a deer yard where experiments were being conducted especially in areas of the deer's nutrient needs. That evening a panel of DNR personnel spoke about their various duties and problems. We then saw two films that would be excellent ecological films in school –"Boomsville" and "More."

Tuesday morning, Dan Turner of Eastern Michigan University spoke on how Michigan was influenced by the great glaciers. He used terms and examples in explaining this that I could use in the classroom. We then listened to Gary Schnicke of the DNR explain the fish story of the area. In the afternoon we visited Walleye growing ponds and watched them harvest the fingerlings to transport to areas which need walleye stock.

We then traveled to a gravel pit containing samples of all the types of rocks in Michigan. We found Petoskey stones, Michigan adgates and many others.

Ann Schenk

On Tuesday evening, we played a Land Use Simulation game conducted by Barb Horn. This could be used to show how people's different concerns influence how land is eventually used.

On Wednesday morning, we heard speaker Rick Jones on air pollution and were oriented to our AuSable canoe trip with slides. In the afternoon, we paddled down a section of the Au Sable listing animals, plants, destruction, construction, and other factors usable in research of river use. We ended the activity by writing a poem of the river. This could be worked into a project on Lake Michigan or the Jordan River for this area.

On Wednesday evening, we saw a film "Cry of the Marsh" and reacted to it by discussing how to best show this to students. My own reaction was that the shock value was great and would need a lot of discussion afterward to get all the feeling revealed.

Thursday morning was spent in three different activities. We used a values clarification game to determine our own recreational wants and needs. We listened to Bill Pierce and Jim Wicks of the DNR as they spoke about their activities and problems in the recreational and Parks areas. They used slides and a large chart showing the overlapping of governmental agencies concerned in recreational areas. We also heard the futures of these two departments.

Before lunch we viewed the film "Time of Man", a film showing the evolution of man and showing how through over-population man may destroy himself. This is an excellent film for ages junior high and up. In the afternoon we visited the sewage ponds in the Higgins State Park. It was hard to believe how the area looked like any other wilderness area.

We then traveled to Hartwick Pines where we had an excellent talk on the old logging days by Wendell Hoover. That evening we reviewed the mornings film and the instructor, Pearl DiMattia stated that all of our world problems come from over population. We also discussed how keeping alive people who would otherwise die is weakening our gene bank.

On Friday morning, Arthur Lennox spoke about the proper way to plan for the use of land and stressed the problems of soil erosion by water. We then had a wrap uo and evaluated the entire week. week.

THE ABOVE picture shows a completed section of the 2200' of the Lakeshore Stabilization measures installed on the Boyne City Veterans Memorial Park RC&D project. The old debris was removed, a new shoreline established. First a layer of stone was laid on bottom, then covered by perforated poly filter x plastic filter cloth, with another layer of stone on top. A retaining wall was then installed with the filter cloth laid along the inside of the retaining wall. The boulders were then placed very carefully so that maximum protection could be obtained. The areas in back of the retaining wall were then filled and reseeded. The perforated poly-filter x plastic filter cloth allows water to move in and out and keeps the fines in place. At the left, is the same section as it was in 1972.

THE FARMER of today, in managing his farm waste system, has to consider storing, handling, and disposing of farm waste, while at the same time, maintaining an effective pollution abatement program. A 100 cow dairy herd creates enough volume of manure equivalent to a town of 1600 people. Each farm has different problems and conditions to work with. This liquid manure pit for this farmer allows him to store manure up to 150 days. This eliminates the daily hauling of manure during the winter months and allows manure to be spread in spring and readily incorporated into the soil.

Water Bank Program Gains State Support

Department of Natural Resources' wildlife officials strongly support the 1976 Federal Water Bank Program as one of Michigan's best opportunities, they say, to preserve privately-owned wetlands by paying annual fees to the owners.

Purpose of the Water Bank Program being conducted this year in Kent, Lapeer and Shiawassee counties is to protect, restore and improve wetlands primarily to benefit waterfowl, according to DNR wetlands specialist Gerald Martz.

"In addition," Martz says, "habitat for a host of other wetland wildlife will be preserved as part of the effort. Upland nesters, including puddle ducks, pheasants, songbirds and rabbits, will benefit from undisturbed nesting cover in areas left in their natural state."

Landowners in the three participating counties can arrange for ten-year contracts with the federal government through the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Eligible land includes shallow and deep fresh marshes that usually hold water through the summer season and abound with cattails, bulrushes, willows and duckweed, Martz says.

More than $500,000 is available for wetland preservation use over the next ten years.

State Initiates Pollution Curb In Water Areas

Michigan conservation officers and other law personnel have been notified they should resume enforcement of the state's watercraft pollution control law, now that federal certification of Michigan's program has been received, reports the Department of Natural Resources.

Enforcement of the Michigan law had been halted, pending state requests to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) that Great Lakes water quality be given special consideration above less-stringest national watercraft pollution control regulations, says William G. Turney, Chief of the DNR's Bureau of Environmental Protection.

Enforcement of the law will include inspection of the watercraft and issuance of a certification sticker for approved equipment or a citation for violation of the stringent Michigan regulations.

Turney says the 1970 state law (Act 167) makes it unlawful to discharge sewage overboard from any vessel plying the Great Lakes and Michigan inland waters.

"It is equally unlawful to have sanitary facilities on board watercraft which would allow some overboard discharge, whether treated or not," he states. "Portable sewage recepticles which can be taken ashore and emptied into conventional treatment facilities are permissible."

State officials contend that a tie-up of several large Great Lakes boats in one area can potentially discharge the same amount of sewage as a small community.

"With one-third of Michigan's population getting its water supply from the Great Lakes, it is of utmost importance to keep the water quality as high as is possible," Turney concluded.

Although the EPA has established standards and the U.S. Coast Guard has promulgated regulations permitting the use of flow-through sewage treatment devices nationally, the State of Michigan has been given preemptive certification to enforce its own law against recreational craft in its own waters, according to Turney who is also Acting Executive Secretary of the Water Resources Commission.

"The only sewage disposal facilities that may legally be installed on recreational watercraft are holding tanks, including portable units, recirculating systems or incinerators," says Turney. "Any vessel found to have on-board sanitary facilities other than these will be considered in violation of the law and the owner subject to citation and possible fine."

Turney further notes that recreational watercraft of other states and countries will be subject to these requirements at any time they are in Michigan waters, and liable to the same citations and penalties.

Conservationist Reviews Project History

By Bill Grimm
District Conservationist

Since 1948, the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District, through it's various programs, has provided District Cooperators and other Charlevoix County Landowners education, technical assistance and materials in applying needed soil and water conservation measures to the natural resources of Charlevoix County.

Many of you will remember the early tree days the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District sponsored. In the years 1948 to 1950, the District received tree planting stock free from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, Whereby the District in turn delivered the tree stock to Landowners at a handling charge of $2.00 per thousand. In recent years the Charlevoix District has published the Charlevoix County Plat Book for needed income. Times and circumstances have changed. Charlevoix County had at one time 2 or 3 custom tree planters — today they have none.

The District in later years cooperated with the Emmet SCD and the Petoskey FFA tree days.

Although the amount of trees planted has declined, more people are planting trees. Many landowners used to plant 20,000 to 30,000 trees — today they only plant 100 - 200 of them. All in all, since 1948, at least 3 million trees have been planted by landowners.

Remember when Charlevoix District had their annual meeting in the winter? —now they are in July.

When East Jordan and Boyne City had active FFA Chapters—the District held annual Soil Judging and Tree Identification contests?

Remember the Soil Runoff Plot the District had on Hi Brock Farm on M-66?

One time the District owned and rented a marsh plow—all this is by the board now.

Let us not forget the many and varied soil and water conservation measures that were applied on the lands—such as over 500 acres of critical area stabilization, 23,000 feet of streambank stabilization, over 5,000 acres of stripcropping, many of which are still maintained, remember when water was needed for livestock over 20 spring developments were established.

Speaking contests were held in 1953 and 1954 when Harry Pearsall of East Jordan placed first in District competition and second in State Contest held in East Lansing.

Tile Drainage became a new practice around 1962 when the District was able to get a tile contractor to come to the area—to date figures show 130,000 of tile drains have been installed.

Nearly 100 pounds of livestock, fish and wildlife have been installed.

Remember the 15-20 milking cow herds—nwo herd size is up in the hundreds. This has resulted in a new look regarding management of farm waste where debris basins, disposal lagoons, diversions, holding tanks, ponds and irrigation are now a part of the farm waste management systems.

I remember when orchard folk went around to farms to buy livestock manure. In this day and age manure is now being managed with tender loving care.

I could go on and on indicating past District programs, events and accomplishments but there is no doubt that the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District has been an active local unit of Government in the preservation, protection and the proper treatment of Charlevoix Counties natural resources through Charlevoix County landowners.

In 1969, the District became co-sponsor with the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and twelve other Soil Districts in what is known as the Northwest Michigan Resource and Conservation Development District. The Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District through this program has brought in Federal and State Grants and / or cost-share monies totaling $524,672.00.

The Soil Directors duties have become complex—until 1975 the District was only envolved in one legislative Act (Act 297 P.A. 1937) Michigan Soil Conservation District Law. Now they are also involved legislatively in P.A. 346 (Inland Lakes & Streams Act), P.A. 347 (Soil Erosion and Sediment Control Act) and P.A. 116 (Agricultural and Open Space Preservation Act).

The Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation Districts accomplishments are many and varied but these could not have been done had it not been for the dedication, foresight, and hard work of past and present Board Members.

Since this is the Bicentennial Birthday of our great Nation, and the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District has been in existence the last twenty-eight years of the 200 years, it is more than fitting that the following Board Members be recognized for their outstanding service in assisting the landowners of Charlevoix County to preserve, protect and properly treat the natural resources of Charlevoix County. They are George Klooster, Clayton Healey, Pete Winnick, Norval Korthase, Clayton Smith, Harold Goebel, Robert Straw, Clyde Warner, Robert Reidel, John Wieland, Norbert Nachzel, Lee Sneathen, William Korthase Jr., Franklin Cellern, Terry Healey and Charles Kiteley. Also Ed Rebman, County Extension Director of Cooperative Extension Service, M.S.U. who has been the District secretary from 1948. Clayton Healey, Chairman of the Charlevoix SCD has also been on the board since 1948.

LAKESHORE PROJECT DEDICATION--Engineer Jim Muscheli of United Associates, Cheboygan, points to large rocks used in the lakeshore stabilization project his firm constructed at Boyne City's Veterans Memorial Park. Dedication ceremonies were held last fall by the Charlevoix Soil & Water Conservation District and the City of Boyne City. After a ribbon-cutting, Muscheil conducted a tour of the lakeshore and shelter building. At a luncheon, conservation district officials spoke and showed slides of the project while it was under construction. State Conservationist, Art Cratty, had high praise for all parties involved in the $300,000 plus project, saying, "I wish they all went this well."

Pollution Deadline Nears

Michigan's "Water Strategy for Pollution Control" document is available for public review and comment before it is presented to the Water Resources Commission July 22 and submitted to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) next fall.

The information was prepared for inclusion in the State Environmental Program Plan and will be submitted to EPA before the next fiscal year which begins October 1.

It outlines planned procedures of the Water Quality Division, Department of Natural Resources, for issuing state-federal wastewater discharge permits.

Animal Waste Storage Requires Specific Care

By Ray Weiss
Soil Conservation Technician
Soil Conservation Service
Boyne City, Michigan

The Soil Conservation Service standard requires that the storage unit have adequate volume for at least 120 days, 150 to 180 days are recommended.

If the storage unit has adequate volume it will allow the farmer to plan his unloading time at other than peak planting and harvesting times of the year. With proper management this can eliminate the farmer from having to spread manure during the wet season of the year, thus preventing compacting the soil.

The condition in which the storage unit maintains the manure is very important since it will affect the amount of nitrogen retained in the manure. If the manure is stored with little or no drying, the nitrogen loss can be held to a minimum.

If adequate storage is provided manure can be spread as time permits and fields are in condition. The following are examples of times when manure can be spread and the nutrients will be available for a growing crop. a) Prior to planting corn in the spring; b) Late spring, or early summer on land that will be planted to wheat in the fall; c) Spread on hayfield immediately after first cutting of hay; d) If there won't be any chunks in manure it may be spread on wheat stubble and new seeding. If manure is not spread uniformly large chunks may smother new seeding; e) After corn harvest in the fall of the year.

The main management problem of the facility is to have it empty in the fall to allow adequate storage for the entire winter. An additional 30 days storage is fairly inexpensive as compared to the overall cost of the project and 30 days extra storage can mean a great deal in management of the farm operation.

Charlevoix School Board Reveals Bond Details

By FRAN MARTIN

A resolution authorizing two bonding propositions to be placed on the ballot in a special election scheduled for Sept. 27 was approved by the Charlevoix Board of Education Monday.

At the same time the board voted to approve the process of construction management for the construction planned in the referendum to go before the voters on Sept. 27.

The proposition for the purpose of erecting, furnishing and equipping additions to, remodeling and partially re-equipping the high school and the middle school calls for a bond issue of $3.1 million.

A second proposition to erect, furnish and equip an auditorium as an addition to the high school building would require a $525,000 bond issue.

The bond issues would be financed by the sale of general obligation unlimited tax bonds for a period of from 16 to 20 years.

The board discussed issuing the bonds for a longer time, 25 to 30 years which would allow a lower millage levy over a longer period. However, the members voted for the shorter time in order to save the higher interest rate than the 25-30 year bonds would necessitate.

Supt. James A. McKimmy said the shorter term bonds would require an estimated maximum three mills while the longer term bonds would require a lesser millage but would cost more in the long run because of the interest rate for the extended period of time.

The board decided to utilize the process of construction management for the proposed remodeling, renovation and construction program. Under this process, the bidding project would be broken down to as many as 70 divisions of work with no consolidating of trades which result in higher costs; allow direct material purchase and other methods of cutting costs.

This would replace the conventional acceptance of a prime bid with the company sub-letting various phases of the construction.

With the assistance of a construction management firm, the school district would become its own general contractor

The Charlevoix board has been considering this type of construction for some time and has visited several school districts which have utilized this method in their construction of new schools.

The decision to go this route if the bond issues are approved was made Monday after hearing presentations by Charles (Bud) Decker of Construction Coordinators, Inc., of East Detroit, who stated that as much as 19 percent of building costs could be saved by utilizing construction management and by William Hamelink of the firm of Elzinga & Volkerw, Inc., of Holland.

Becker said his firm's fee would be an estimated $154,000 for the school projects and $169,467 for the combined projects while the Holland firm quoted a price not to exceed $160,000 for the entire project but offered not breakdown of the fee.

The board, after hearing both presentations, voted to discuss the issue further before deciding on a management firm.

The board also accepted the resignation of Mrs. Steven (Mary Lou) Smith as Home Economics teacher.

Non-residents shall pay tuition fees as set by the Board of Education with 75 percent being paid by the day of enrollment and the remainder by the fourth Thursday. All non-residents shall live with a parent, parents or legal guardian while attending the Charlevoix schools. Proof of guardianship must be on file at the principal's office

Council Considers Parking Ordinance

City Council hopes that an ordinance adopted Monday night will effectively discourage or eliminate overnight parking in the city-owned lot at the foot of Clinton-st. on the waterfront. The new law has sharp teeth.

Aimed specifically at those who have been leaving their car in the lot during the course of several days visit to Beaver Island it authorizes police to have any vehicle left in the lot between 2 and 6 a.m. towed.

In order to claim the car, an owner must be prepared to pay a $10 fine and towing costs, as well as a storage fee of $2 for each 24 hour period or fraction thereof.

Hours of the lot and penalties involved will be posted.

Council adjourned its regular session Monday to convene temporarily as a Zoning Board of Appeals in considering a request for variance to erect a 10 by 20 foot billboard.

The Erber Auto Company has applied to erect the sign on the southeast corner of M-66 and US-31, facing traffic northbound on 66.

It is already manufactured, unlighted, and intended as advertisement for the company.

If erected, it will be the first billboard within the city limits.

The request was tabled for a recommendation from the ordinance committee and further evaluation. Council will convene again as a board of appeals on Aug. 9.

Further information is also needed, Council decided, before it can support a settlement between Consumer's Power and the Ratepayer's Association protesting the electric company's wholesale price hike.

The Michigan Power Commission is intervening in the dispute, and a meeting is scheduled for July 28 in Lansing to attempt a settlement.

Consumer's has agreed to settle at $4.2 million, an increase of 33 percent, while the Ratepayers expect to be able to reduce that to $4.059 million, or close to 30 percent increase.

Charlevoix is one of 14 cities participating in the Ratepayer's protest, and while council was not pleased with the proposed terms of the settlement, it felt there was little recourse.

"You'd have a fat chance by yourself," said Jeanine Wallace.

Council agreed to poll other cities involved to determine whether there might not be an alternative.

Consumer's is currently changing an interim rate that went into effect last fall.

The hike has been passed on to customers in the form of fuel cost adjustment charges, said Mayor Edward P. Hanson, and current rates are very close to rates proposed in the settlement.

A letter from the Michigan Aeronautics Commission led Council to decide not to become involved in a cost-sharing plan with the state for proposed work on the airport runways.

It had been the city's understanding that the runway was just to have been seal-coated with city and state sharing equally the projected cost of $18,900.

Several members of the council expressed concern that tar and chips would cause a lot of propellor damage.

Acting City Administrator Robert Wexstaff said that it would cost approximately $3,500 to clean and seal the five 3,500-foot cracks in the runways.

He recommended that the city do just that, and wait several years before seal-coating the air strips thereby saving fairly recent painting work on the runways.

Council agreed.

In other action, Council:

--Learned that Tri-City Asphalt has agreed to have its paving material inspected according to state specifications.

-Heard City Attorney Don Berlage say that he expected no conflicts between his city post and the position of county prosecutor should he be elected next fall.

-Granted approval to the Lion's Club for an air show to be held on Aug. 22 on the condition that the club provide insurance.

-Referred to committee a recommendation by Joe Morris that expenses for the city's recreation program be reviewed in more detail. Last year's expenses represented "a staggering total", $57,000, Morris said.

-Learned that the city's day camp has been canceiled due to lack of interest.

-Scheduled a preliminary meeting on the budget for Aug. 2.

-Referred to committee a question of policy concerning the extension of city services outside city limits.

-Heard Wexstaff suggest that a deteriorating curb on Clinton-st. be replaced and the street widened 10 feet to accommodate diagonal parking in the future.

-Discussed the problem of golfers causing planes to stop on the runway while retrieving lost balls.

-Learned that three double-headed parking meters were stolen during the Venetian Festival, and "are probably lamps already," Wexstaff said.

During the summer months people living on the North Side of Charlevoix and on the South Side of Petoskey Ave. have a difficult time entering traffic to get downtown.

This is caused by drivers, coming toward Charlevoix from Petoskey on U.S. 31, driving in the center lane of the highway instead of the right lane. Now if these drivers were going to make a left turn, the center lane would be the correct place to be, however, I have followed (but not in the center lane) many of these drivers from one side of Charlevoix to the other and a few will turn left at the intersection of U.S. 31 and M-66 but the majority head south toward Traverse City.

I would like to figure out the mentality of these center-lane'ers and what causes them to object to the outside lane. Perhaps they have never read the regulation on this aspect of highway driving. As a matter of information the Michigan Motor Vehicle Code Section 257,642 (page 123) subsection (a), states in part "... vehicles shall be driven within the extreme right hand lane except to pass or turn left."

If someone knows why these people insist on the center lane instead of where the law says they should be, I would like to hear from them..

Three Northville Men Killed

Three Northville businessmen were killed Thursday evening in a one-car accident on the Charlevoix-Boyne City road seven miles east of here.

They were Gerald R. Belanger, 43, owner of the car and believed to be the driver, Duane Norman 50, and Daniel D. Holloway, 35, who were among 16 Northville businessmen who were on a golfing holiday at Boyne Mountain.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff's officials, the car, apparently driving at a high rnte of speed, was traveling toward Charlevoix when it failed to negotiate a curve on a hill located between Camp Seagull and the Lake Charlevoix Farm (former MacDowell farm), left the highway and skidded sideways into a concrete abutment. The impact threw the car back into the roadway some 70 feet farther along the highway. The bodies of Norman and Holloway were found near the point of impact. Belanger's body was found approximately 20 feet from the car, a 1976 Olds Cutlass.

The bodies were returned to southern Michigan for services and burial.

Women Employment Figures Climb

In Charlevoix County, women have been entering the labor force in growing number in the last few years. At the present time, more of them are holding down jobs than ever before.

According to the latest government figures, some 2,930 local women, out of a total female population of approximately 6,220 over age 16, were employed or were seeking employment in the past year.

The proportion, 47.1 percent, contrasts with the 33.4 percent that were in the local labor force back in 1960.

Elsewhere in the United States, the proportion is over 39 percent.

The details on the female surge into the labor market, as it has affected the various sections of the country, are based upon data from the Department of Commerce and upon a sampling survey made by the Department of Labor.

Nationally, the figures show, there are now more than 37,900,000 women in the labor force, as compared with 31,500,000 in 1970 and with 23,240,000 in 1960.

The increase since 1960 amounts to 63 percent, as compared with an increase of only 32 percent in the female population.

In Charlevoix County's regional area, they show, approximately 37.9 percent of all jobs are now held by women.

Elsewhere throughout the United States, 40 percent of the jobholders are women.

Boyne Valley Railroad Opens

By TOM DAMMANN

BOYNE CITY–The Boyne Valley Railroad's (BVRR) Saturday's ribbon-cutting celebration put the official stamp on the state's shortest railroad's most recent incarnation.

The railroad, born in 1893 during Michigan's lumbering era, is now running four daily round-trips on it's 7.2 miles of track, from Boyne City to Boyne Falls.

Saturday's ribbon-cutting by State Representative E. Dan Stevens (R. Atlanta) in a ceremony complete with marching bands, an American Legion Color Guard, and the firing of rifles in military salute, was highly festive because until an historic auction last May 15, it was thought the Boyne City Railroad, as it was then called, was doomed for burial, a common event for railroads these days.

On May 15, the BCRR was placed on the auction block by its former owner, Grand Rapids furniture tycoon, Hollis Baker, who had closed down its operation as a tourist attraction three years ago with the advent of the energy crunch and economic recession.

Because Baker had stipulated that the BCRR with its rolling stock, buildings, right of way, real estate and quantities of rail-road memorabilia be auctioned off piece by piece, the demise of the road was a forgone conclusion in the minds of most people – excepting a small group of local businessmen and residents.

With Representative Stevens acting as their advisor and spokesman, the group successfully bid on the essentials necessary for running the railroad.

They acquired the yellow 44 ton diesel electric locomotive, their open air passenger cars (subsequently they have purchased three 1913 pullman day coaches), the two terminal depots and the 7.2 miles right of way and trackage.

Scoffed at as amateurs, the BVRR's nine incorporators, headed by newly elected City Councilman Joseph Gierlach, 33, President and General Manager, have become town heroes.

This was evidenced on the morning of July 16 when throngs of people lined up at railroad crossings and other vantage points along the line to cheer the passing of the first train in three years.

The day before July 15, the final purchase agreement papers with Hollis Baker had been signed.

Immediately invitations went out to familes and friends of the nine incorporators and company employees, to join in a joy ride to Boyne Falls and back.

The first to climb aboard was Chuck Williams, who had served as General Manager for Baker, and who had joined the railroad exactly 30 years before, on July 16, 1946.

At the locomotive throttle was Howard Fineout, Engineer, who had also served Baker.

Retired Detroit School Principal Thomas Carey, now a resident of Boyne City, served as conductor.

The train has been operating steadily since, making four round trips during daylight hours only.

It has averaged 100 passengers daily, with almost 300 on some days, which Gierlach thinks is a good beginning, since there has been little advertising to date.

It has become a family – community affair, with friends and relatives pitching in to clean up the old passenger cars, and helping install a working restaurant in the Boyne City Depot.

This opened Wednesday under the management of Betty Kelts who inherits her expertise from her parents who operated the renowned Red Fox Inn in Horton Bay.

Parents with children who have never been on a train, make up the passenger list of the White Pine Line Special, which wends its way through farmland and inside a mile long tunnel of foliage in a maple forest.

The trip lasts about 40 minutes and before reaching Boyne Falls the train passes the chalets and lodges of Boyne Mountain ski resort.

The railroad was founded in 1893 by lumbering pioneer W. H. White, and eventually extended across the state to Alpena, as part of the extensive lumbering operation of the White Lumber Company.

One of the points of interest along the excursion line today is the remains of a ghost lumber community called Doyle, Conductor Carey points out.

Passenger service was established shortly after 1900 and continued until the Great Depression of the 1930's which coincided with the end of the lumbering era.

It survived by hauling leather from the Boyne City tannery and coal back from Boyne Falls.

In 1970 the tannery closed down and Hollis Baker bought the railroad.

Editorials/Opinions

Clear Choices

Charlevoix voters have difficult, but some clear choices when they head for the polls on Tuesday.

For the first time in several years, local residents will be able to decide what type of person they want to sit at the helm of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Voters can feel relieved that any of the three candidates could adequately fill the position. The decision rests on what type of philosophy they're interested in the department operating under.

Incumbent Phil Sumner, in our opinion, has demonstrated that he is a capable administrator and over the years has done a good job in working with the people of Charlevoix County.

We feel Sumner's strongest point is his grassroot's experience of law enforcement. Unlike many so-called "law enforcement school" graduates, Sumner has spent many years in the field picking up his knowledge.

An equally interesting candidate is Charlevoix County's Chief Probation Officer, George Lasater.

If elected Sheriff, we feel he could bring a new dimension into local law enforcement with his proposed expansion of rehabilitation programs at the county jail.

We also find his proposed substation concept at the east end of the county interesting, especially since much of that territory does not receive the same coverage as other parts of the county.

Finally, we see Lasater bringing in a better relationship between the courts and the Sheriff's Department with his connection in both departments already established.

The third candidate, Robert Neff, also brings an interesting perspective that could be of benefit to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Although it has been some time since he has been with the Michigan State Police, we can't help but think his experience and background with that department would lend itself to cementing cooperation with police agencies.

We also think his background as a local businessman not only would bring a "businessman's approach" to operating a county agency more efficiently but would bring in a businessmen's perspective.

Neff's point about the lack of rural patrol for breaking and enterings is a valid one--especially in a resort area where there are many seasonal dwellers and unoccupied cottages.

Similarly, we see a distinct difference in the county's other race--the race for prosecutor.

To us, the candidates represent the continuation of a full-time prosecutor's office or back to the part-time prosecutor's office that the county had under former prosecutor Harvey Varnum. Both have their merits.

We have been impressed with Prosecutor Roy Hayes since he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by Varnum's resignation earlier this year.

We think he has shown us the value of having a full time prosecutor in the county and what can be done.

Equally impressive are the credentials he brings with him to Northern Michigan.

On the other hand, we find former assistant prosecutor Don Berlage's proposal to give the same service that was offered under Varnum's and his office for half the price interesting.

Besides his local prosecuting experience, we think Berlage's planning commission and land use background would prove invaluable to the county in a time when rapid development has been taking place.

And like his opponent, Berlage has unquestionable credetials for the position.

In either race, we see no reason why any of the candidates could not fill the position and do justice to their jobs.

We hope local residents will seriously look at the different directions that both county departments could take under the different philosophies being offered and make their decision on that basis.

There are some definite distinctions and only close examination of the candidates will bring those differences to light.

Letters to the editor

Questions Stand

To the Editor:

I listened to Mr. Lasater and Mr. Sumner on Sound-Off Saturday.

Mr. Lasater talked about a rehabilitation program for prisoners at the Charlevoix jail. A few days or weeks is the most time the prisoners are incarcerated. I could understand this if we had a prison where the prisoners are incarcerated for months or years.

Does Mr. Lasater think being a sheriff is an easy position? He stated after six months he may teach part time.

I myself prefer Mr. Sumner for sheriff. Rather than a sheriff he is already talking about a part time position.

About this sub-station at Boyne or Walloon. With a deputy stationed there, where will the monies come from? Lasater stated it would save time, gas and wear on the cars. Won't this deputy have to have a car? Won't this mean an extra car, also gas. There will also be wear on this car. It may save time, but! One man will put in his eight hour day. He will also be called on emergencies after hours. Won't this mean overtime pay?

(No name, please)

Glad He's Running

July 13, 1976

Dear Editor:

It's not too often I can hand out compliments to our elected officials, but this one is long overdue.

We now have, in our county, probably one of the best, if not the best, criminal prosecutors in the state. I have yet to hear one complaint from any law enforcement officer and that's saying something. I, personally, have had some disagreements with Mr. Hayes, but he is always polite and respectful in his dissent, and that is class among prosecutors.

I sincerely hope Mr. Hayes is as content with all of us as we are with him. Keep him here and vote for Roy C. Hayes, your present prosecutor.

Watch Out!

I wonder why Herr Friske is avoiding listing his membership and leadership with the John Birch Society this time around? Even though many of the organizations he lists as having membership with are part of the Birch main organization.

We, in Benton Harbor, have been assaulted by the wild rhetoric of his brother as have those in Muskegon at other elections.

They are like crab grass – appearing over and over again, even though the people don't want them.

The Birch Society sends money to potential political candidates from all over the U.S. – Texas, California, Massachusetts - in order to try to infiltrate our government with these "conspiracy mongers". They spend all their time promoting their Liberty Amendment, to working for the nonconstituents.

Another Venetian Festival is history - – perhaps the biggest and the best in almost a half century of boat parades and fireworks.

And although Charlevoix's annual extravaganza attracts more visitors every year, it is also becoming something of a family holiday.

Long after the last burst of fireworks lit the evening-sky over Round Lake Saturday night, Holly and I took our pre-bedtime saunter down Dixon-ave. Almost every home was lit up like Christmas Eve, with backyard, front yard, patio and veranda parties in progress up and down the street.

Apparently the sons and daughters of Charlevoix families have decided Venetian weekend is a super time to visit the old folks, because former residents and old friends flocked back in droves this summer — giving a new dimension to a celebration which many of us feared was becoming overly commercial.

Although many of us bemoan the added demands of our time and talent necessitated by the Venetian Festival, if it continues to be a "homecoming," it will be well worth the effort--and then some.

SPECIAL CREDIT for the success of this year's Venetian Festival has to go to Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce.

In addition to tying together all the loose ends, Mrs. Merta arranged for the new "Pageant of Drums" on Friday night, in which many drum and bugle corps from throughout Michigan, Ohio and Ontario took part. Not only was the program superb, but the young people stayed overnight (sleeping on the floor at the high schooll and marched Saturday in the Venetian Street Parade.

The added units — and their foot-tapping music — beefed up the parade tremendously and left out-of-town spectators well satisfied with their trip to Charlevoix.

I hope the "Pageant of Drums" continues to be a part of the Venetian Festival and that the young musicians will come back to Charlevoix summer after summer.

ONE OF the perennial highlights of the festival — as least so far as this corner is concerned — is the appearance of the young athletes from the Palaestrum Gymnastics Camp at Williamsburg.

Although we oh'd and ah'd all week over the skills of the Olympic contenders at Montreal, we saw little on the tube that wasn't duplicated in East Park Saturday afternoon.

For those of us who turn somersaults only when we fall down the front steps on icy mornings, the demonstration of gymnastic skills was a mystifying as it was awe-inspiring.

Before the show in East Park, one of the young gymnasts stopped by the Episcopal Church's carameled apple tent to chat.

"You fellows have been coming to the Venetian Festival for quite a while," I commented as I stirred another batch of caramel in a big copper kettle.

"Four years," he answered nonchalantly. "But you've probably been making carameled apples here longer than that. I've watched you stir that same kettle as long as I can remember."

So I guess we all have our own niche in life. He does somersaults and I make carameled apples. Of the two, I prefer his job to mine; but I'm not so sure he'd reach the same decision.

+ + +

I KEEP HEARING drums and bugles. Do you thing Charlevoix might - – sometime — organize its own drum and bugle corps? I think we could count on plenty of assistance in the area of "how to" from the Midshipmen in Petoskey. It's something to think about.

Erma Bombeck

In trying to improve the quality of children, a reader in Illinois suggested it would be nice if children were like geese.

To support his theory, he noted, "Geese come supplied with their own boat, airplane, sleeping bag, swimsuit, flippers and rain gear. They carry an all-purpose utility knife and fork set, complete with airhorn, feather fixer, fly snatcher, egg turner and grass clipper all mounted on a self-propelled chassis. (I like that.)

"Their feet are always clean, have non-skid soles that last a lifetime, and dark sensible clothes that are stain resistant and drip dry."

Ah, yes, I too have often looked at animals and thought what nice children they would make.

I never see a self-cleaning cat that I don't remember my son with a chocolate mustache that his tongue can't reach.

I never see a hamster tidying up his bed by nosing his little chips into a pile that I don't think bitterly of the day my son's aquarium caught fire from pollution.

I never see a kangaroo with her young in her pouch that I don't remember our daughter who fell out of the bunk bed and required five stitches.

The grizzly bear who doesn't have to be told to put on his coat when he goes out in the cold. The parakeet who has the sense enough to go to sleep when you cover his cage. The family dog who not only recognizes you in public, but sits next to you.

Even a newborn sea turtle without vision, without experience, will head toward the sea in search of his own drink of water.

The list of animal accomplishments is dazzling. I could go on forever comparing children to them. So why do we settle for bad plumbing, sticky fingers, erratic behavior, and a body that grows out of clothes even before the bill for them arrives?

Have you ever heard a child laugh? It starts from somewhere around the navel and works its way up by a series of hiccups and melodious sounds and finally travels between two spaces in the front teeth and out. It's infectious. It gladdens the heart. It's probably the most wonderful sound you'll ever hear.

There isn't an animal in the world who can do that.

Suffering

Recently, while suffering an attack of old-fashioned morality brought on by a Jimmy Carter speech, I wrote a terrible thing. I wrote that Hubert Humphrey is a fourflusher because he reneged on more than $800,000 in 1972 campaign debts.

This made Humphrey angry and he sent me a letter saying so.

"I have been brought up to pay my bills, and I do so," he said.

Humphrey's letter should be preserved as a fine example of how slippery politicians grease their way around cut corners. His reasoning is typical of the lopsided justice which pardons a Richard Nixon and sends a two-bit burglar to prison.

Humphrey didn't deny that a group of his creditors, owed $900,000, went payless for four years and then had to settle for four cents on the dollar. Except, he said, the debt really hadn't been his in the first place.

The $900,000 had been lent "to the campaign committee and not to me," Humphrey wrote in his letter.

Oh well, that's different. I thought Humphrey solicited the cash personally and took it home and slept with it. I didn't realize the loans were transacted through a committee. The lenders probably never heard of Hubert Humphrey. They weren't buying favor with a possible president. They thought the money was going to be spent on long underwear for freezing Indians.

But no, that can't be. In a later paragraph, Humphrey admitted that the lenders "were all personal friends who are very well to do and who are not complaining at all over the fact that they received a very small settlement on their loan."

In fact, Humphrey said, these generous buddies knew when they lent the dough that "there was the possibility that the committee might not be able to repay."

Why worry? Hubert might get elected this time and it doesn't hurt to be able to say to the president: "Hey, Humph, remember that time I wrote off that $150,000 your campaign committee owed me? Well, here's what I'd like you to do..."

Anyway, if the stingees are not griping about being stung for $800,000, Humphrey said, "others who have no liability or interest in this matter ought not to be raising their voices in complaint." He means me.

Sorry, Humph, but my voice remains raised.

The senator from Minnesota has as much as admitted that the loans were phony, and were really contributions. So why weren't they called that in the first place?

Humphrey admits the loans were made by his personal friends, yet he accepts no responsibility for them. Some "campaign committee" signed the IOU.

Perhaps some campaign laws were bent. It's a safe bet that what the Humphrey committee did in 1972 it couldn't get away with in 1976. Which doesn't necessarily mean the world is getting better. It simply means the cheaters must find new ways to cheat. And they will.

It saddens me because I used to be a Humphrey fan. He was my kind of liberal. I figured he was for the little guy and certainly he wouldn't condone the type of cruddy justice which says raggedy muggers are crooks but well-dressed welshers are modern princes to be admired for their lofty goals, rather than condemned for their crummy ethics.

But forget the legal niceties. I'm talking about old-fashioned morality, that glowing quality which all the politicians embraced so enthusiastically in the Watergate parking lot. I'm talking about justice that doesn't peek under the blindfold.

If Joe Slob borrows $5,000 and doesn't pay it back, he faces court action. If the transaction was a fraud, he faces prison. If he does his stealing in a less genteel manner such as mugging, he could be stoned to death in the courthouse square.

But big-shot candidates can fuzz over the roadblocks built for peasants. Bribes are loans and loans are contributions and they all add up to the stickum that keeps good buddies together, on top. Only a few arrogant meatheads, such as Agnew, come unglued.

Hubert Humphrey won't be elected president. But he could have been, and why not? He didn't do anything dozens of other candidates haven't done through the years.

And he would have been an improvement over the last guy elected.

For months, people have been complaining that they don't know anything about Jimmy Carter.

Maybe that explains his success. The more you learn about most candidates, the more inclined you are to vote for a stranger with a big smile.

Meet Charlevoix

Fred Willis

Fred Willis of Charlevoix is retired manager of the Charlevoix Co-op Company. Here he tells the Courier about how farming and the Co-op has changed through the years.

COURIER: What years did you spend at the Co-op?

WILLIS: From 1938 to 1964. When I first went there, I thought it would be for three or four months, but it turned out to be 26 years.

COURIER: What did you do before you worked for the Co-op?

WILLIS: Farmed, and once worked as a herdsman. I was born on a farm on the lake in Hayes Township.

COURIER: What are some of the things the Co-op did when you were there that they no longer do?

WILLIS: Well, we used to sell coal, for one thing. Also, we used to haul cream to the Jordan Valley Creamery. We picked it up at the farms twice a week. That was before the days of the Michigan Milk Producers Association. We promoted growing vetch and wheat together--the vetch grew up the wheat stems. The Co-op separated the vetch from the wheat, dried it, and sold it. It was used for cover crops, especially in orchards, because it produces a lot of nitrogen. It was also used for plantings along the highways. If the farmer wanted the wheat back, we returned it. In the thirties, when business was poor, the Co-op went into the roofing business--putting metal roofs on buildings.

COURIER: What else?

WILLIS: We also promoted the growing of beets and potatoes and kidney and navy beans. Farms were smaller in those days, 40, 80 or 160 acres, and more diversified. In 1955, the Co-op bought out the Argo Milling Company which handled coal and farm equipment. It was located where the Weathervane now is. Later they bought out the Charlevoix Coal and Ice Company, a cold storage operation. They also built a poultry processing plant for dressing and processing turkeys. Some farmers grew as many as five to ten thousand turkeys a year. The Co-op also processed some chickens.

COURIER: How have area farms changed through the years?

WILLIS: They are larger now but there are not as many. Less acreage in the area is devoted to farming. While most farm houses are now occupied, many of them are not occupied by working farmers as they were in the old days. Farmers used to make their living on the land. It was a full-time job, not a part-time job while working in a plant or some place else like so many do now. There used to be more orchards, too. We shipped a lot of apples. But there is more corn now than there used to be. Paved roads and electricity have made the biggest difference in farms.

WILLIS: Well, the farmer today has to be pretty near a scientist to do his job. We wouldn't have half enough to eat if it weren't for the fertilizers, insecticides, fungacides and other things farmers now use to raise their crops.

COURIER: What do you do now that you're retired?

WILLIS: I'm secretary of the Charlevoix County Farm Bureau and secretary of the Charlevoix Development Corporation. I was on the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board for 25 years, 20 of them as secretary.

COURIER: So you're a farm boy turned city man?

WILLIS: Yes.

During Venetian Festival

Heidi Dove Reigns as Venetian Queen

By FRAN MARTIN

Heidi Dove, 18, a tall, blue-eyed brunet, was crowned as the 1976 Venetian Queen at the annual Venetian Pageant which launched the Bicentennial version of the festival Thursday night.

Queen Heidi, who is 5'7½" in height, was chosen from among eight candidates to reign over the festival and to represent the community for the coming year. Kathleen Martin was named first runner-up; Kim Gould, second runner-up and Mary Wolf, Miss Congeniality. Dona Bellows, Diane Haggard, Karen Holow and Sue Mabee will serve as members of the court.

Queen Heidi, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stokes, was a dual winner having won the talent division with her presentation of a folk song, "That's the way I always heard it should be". She accompanied herself on the guitar.

The candidates presented a wide variety of talent choices which included a humorous monologue "My friend, Snoopy" by Dona Bellows; a flute solo, three movements of the Hungarian selection, "Csa'ra's" by Monti by Diane Haggard; an exhibit of her own colored photography by Kim Gould; an organ solo, "Lara's Song" by Karen Hollow; a vocal solo with guitar accompaniment by herself by Sue Mabee; a film presentation of herself doing synchronized swimming to music in the Weathervane pool, by Kathleen Martin and a presentation of her art work by Mary Wolf.

The pageant opened with the eight candidates singing a medley of popular songs accompanied by Steve Stargardt at the piano. They then appeared in a mini fashion show with the girls modeling garments from Shop of the Gulls, Lieberman's, Kaden's, the Clothing Company, Fay's, Mettler's and Alice Jane Dows.

The talent division of the pageant was followed by the appearance of the candidates in formal evening wear with each accompanied by an escort.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY:

For many years the Office of County Drain Commissioner was just a political Office in name only. During these years the Drain Commissioner was not active in enforcing some of the laws as pertaining to Subdivisions and soil erosion as the Office was never funded by the County as an active department. Therefore numerous problems arose in regards to drainage in Subdivisions and Plats. For the past seven years Ronald Geer has been a very active and working officer, both as Deputy Drain Commissioner and as elected Drain Commissioner. All Subdivisions are now reviewed and approved by Mr. Geer and necessary corrections in regards to drainage and soil erosion are enforced by him.

I have worked very closely with Mrs. Geer in regards to Subdivisions and know that if he did not enforce the laws that we would have considerable problems with drainage and soil erosion in said Subdivisions, which would also effect adjoining lands. Some of the older Subdivisions were never approved by the Drain Commission and because of the new laws in regards to soil erosion and sedimentation only some of the lots can be approved for residential purposes. One example is on Beaver Island where about one-third of the lots in a large subdivision are not suitable for residence.

In my estimation Mr. Geer has been a very dedicated and effective Officer and therefore I urge his re-nomination and re-election as Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner so he can continue the good work that he has done in making the Office of County Drain Commissioner an effective Office.

Marian Township Considers Public Assembly Ordinance

By MARSHA ROBINSON

Marion Township will eventually have an ordinance providing for the regulation of public assemblies, but not before the summer is over, township officials predict.

Action on the ordinance was sparked by complaints from property owners in the neighborhood of Castle Farms, where two outdoor rock concerts have been staged recently.

After a public hearing last Tuesday night, the township board agreed to appoint a committee representative of various sections of the township whose job it will be to draft an appropriate ordinance.

Enactment procedure requires that the township hold another hearing with proper notice and publish the ordinance before it can be adopted.

At Tuesday's hearing, Castle Farms owner Arthur R. Reibel and his neighbors presented contrasting versions of how the concerts were being handled.

Chief spokesman for the property owners was John Michael, who gave the board petitions with 82 signatures protesting the concerts.

The volume of the music, trespassing, and traffic generated by the size of the crowd as well as drug abuse and unauthorized fireworks were cited as disturbing, dangerous to public safety and an invasion of private rights.

The music can be heard for miles around, witnesses said. said.

"Who do I call to get my kids to sleep?" one man asked.

Michael recommended that the board use a Health Department ordinance as a model for the township.

That ordinance would require a sponsor to detail provisions for police and fire protection, food and water, sanitation, medical facilities, vehicular access and parking, camping and trailer facilities, lighting, communications, noise control, cleanup, and insurance and bonding arrangements before a permit for public assembly would be issued.

Reibel said that he had no objection to a regulatory ordinance, but denied that problems were as extensive as his neighbors claimed.

The events are "well-organized," he said.

"We made every effort to avoid problems, and we have had no problems, with the possible exception of noise," Reibel said.

He maintained that both the police and the health department were consulted in the planning stages, the property was fenced and more than the recommended number of sanitary facilities and security guards were provided.

"There were no drugs and very little drinking," he said.

Reibel said that his security men had been directing traffic on M-66 during the concerts, but that the Sheriff had asked them to be removed because they had no jurisdiction on the public highway.

Attendance was running at a little over 4,000 for the events, he said, and dates for three more have been finalized, with the last one being on Aug. 7. A fourth, to be held Aug. 28, is in the process of negotiation.

Township officials doubted that an ordinance could be adopted by the first part of August.

Supervisor Robert Porter reminded the public repeatedly that the township had no authority to forbid the concerts, and said that a regulatory ordinance would not only apply to Castle Farms, but to every assembly in the township as well.

Elliott C. Roberts, Director of Hospitals, Detroit General Hospital and trustee of the American Hospital Association, made the presentation earlier this month at a meeting on Mackinac Island.

Township Delays Permit

By MARSHA ROBINSON

The Marion Township Board decided that the legal question was beyond them Tuesday night, and voted to table a request by Castle Farms, Inc. for a recommendation to the Liquor Control Commission for the approval of a dance permit.

Application was made to permit dancing in the tavern at Castle Farms.

Attorney Barbara MacKenzie represented the Loeb family in pointing out to the township board that the property in question was sold subject to building and use restrictions included in the deed.

And those restrictions included the stipulation that no part of the premises be used for "a dance-hall, gambling-hall or slaughterhouse."

For the board to recommend approval of the permit would thwart the deeds intention to protect the property from an undesirable use, MacKenzie said.

Attorney Arthur R. Reibel, who with his wife owns Castle Farms, argued that the deed did not apply to the property in questions.

He added that a 10 by 15 foot dance floor would not be defined as a dance-hall, and recommended that the board approve the request, suggesting that the Loeb family take their case to Circuit Court.

"A dance-floor isn't going to harm anybody," said Supervisor Robert Porter, but he also said "it isn't our place" to decide a legal question.

Brouillette said his 16 years as Prosecuting Attorney has given him the experience and understanding of local problems that qualify him for the position.

He has served as Dickinson County Democratic Chairman from 1966 to 1970; 11th Congressional District Treasurer, 1970 1974; Dickinson County Prosecuting Attorney, 1960 1976; and Iron Mountain City Attorney, 1958 1960.

Dale

Malcolm W Dale, 51, is a real estate broker and has lived in the area for 8 years. He attended the University of Michigan for 2 years.

Dale says he is running for office because the present Congressman has joined with other liberals of both parties who are voting our country into moral, economic and political bankruptcy.

"If the Christian United States is to remain free, the halls of Congress must be filled by men and women that will uphold their oath of office to protect and preserve the U.S. Constitution."

The candidate says he is qualified for the position because he has studied the totalitarian political and economic systems and the spiritual and material benefits that derive from a Constitutional Republican political system for more than a dozen years. For the past two years, he has been active as executive secretary for the Michigan Americanism Council, Inc. and with the Christian Freedom Foundation encouraging Christ centered men and women to take an active part in local, state and federal politics. Dale said he has also trained leaders and conducted hundreds of seminars on political and economic systems and domestic and world affairs.

Dale added that being a professional politician is no longer considered necessary, nor even an asset by most United States citizens.

"Electing a man or woman to office who is beholden to no special interest group nor biased by personal conflicts of interest in the business community and representatives who will uphold their oath of office to the letter are the type of person most voters are seeking," he said when asked about his political experience. "I am such a man."

Ruppe

Philip E. Ruppe, 49, is the incumbent Congressman for the 11th District and has served in that capacity for 10 years. He is a life long resident of Houghton, Michigan and holds a bachelor's of arts degree from Yale University.

"My chief motivation has always been to serve the people of the 11th District, and I am running for re-election because I believe I can continue to represent our region effectively," he said.

Ruppe said his specific objectives in the next congressional session include maintaining the environmental integrity of Northern Michigan, pushing for enactment of his Balanced Economic Development bill to create new jobs in the region and increase investment in the private sector and fighting for federal agencies that have outlived their usefulness.

"I also believe that the time is ripe for action on welfare reform and on my proposal to provide all Americans with increased protection against the cost of catastrophic illness," he added.

Ruppe stands on his 10 years as a Congressman for his qualifications. He presently serves as ranking minority member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and ranking member of the Mines and Mining Subcommittee of the House Interior Committee.

"During my tenure in the House, I have worked to create jobs, improve the quality of life for our senior citizens, hold down inflation, increase our supplies of energy, reduce the federal bureaucracy, protect the environment, reform Congressional practices and make Michigan's voice heard in Washington," he said.

"These goals must be pursued, and I believe my past experience enhances my ability to pursue them."

Six Primary Contests Develop for Tuesday Election

By FRAN MARTIN

If local issues bring out a large vote, then Charlevoix County will be assured of a record turnout in the forthcoming Primary Election.

In the commissioners race alone there will be six contests in the primary election and another seven looms in the general election in November. Only four incumbent commissioners are unopposed in both elections.

In the immediate area there will be four contests for commissioner...in Districts 2, 3, 13 and 15 in the August 3 election.

Clyde Cunningham, veteran commission and presently chairman of the board, is being opposed by Willis (Bill) Peters, local manager for Hooker's Laundry in District 2. Both are candidates on the Republican ticket. District 2 includes Marion, Norwood, St. James and Peaine Townships.

A real battle has developed in District 3 where the incumbent Clayton A. Smith decided not to seek re-election after an error in filing his nominating petition would have required seeking relief through the elections commission and the courts. As a result, John E. Haggard of Charlevoix Township and Herbert Friske of Hayes Township will be out campaigning for the nomination. In November, the winner will be opposed Leroy R. Haertter of Hayes Township, a Democrat.

In the city proper, District 13 (Ward I) and District 15 (Ward III) there will be contests. In District 13, incumbent Donald B. Meggison will be challenged by Ralph A. McRae, former city councilman. Incumbent I. Lee Moerland of District 15 is being opposed by Theodore E. Browe, Jr., retired Air Forceman who has returned here to make his home. All are candidates on the Republican ballot.

The fifth contest is in District 6 where Cliff Gratsch, former Melrose Township officer, and Larry D. Matthew, former Melrose township supervisor prior to 1969, are seeking the nomination for the office being vacated by Harry Griffin, veteran commissioner, who is a candidate for supervisor of the township. Both are candidates on the Republican ballot.

The sixth contest will be in District 12, one of three districts within the city of Boyne City. This will find Richard J. Dubin and John D. Kujawski, former commissioner, seeking the Republican nomination. In the general election, the winner will be opposed by Democrat James H. Goebel for the seat being vacated by Democrat Michael Fulkerson who is not a candidate for re-election.

In the general election in November, incumbent Oscar W Ward a Democrat will be opposed by a newcomer to the political scene, Marlanne Thomure in District 14 (the city's second ward); incumbent Rudolph L. Flurenski, a Democrat, will be opposed by Oral E. Sutliff, a Republican, in District 11, a section of Boyne City; incumbent Republican Ralph C. Richardson will be challenged by Democrat Karl Waldner in District 5 (Eveline and Wilson townships); in District 8 (a section of East Jordan), incumbent Democrat Richard A. McKinnon, who was elected in April to fill a vacancy, will be opposed by Republican Thora H. Kotowich whom he defeated in the April election and in District 9 (also in a section of East Jordan), Keith R. Annear, retired school principal, a Republican, and Democrat Pat A. Betz, a Democrat, will be vieing for the seat being vacated by the dean of county officers, Barney Milstein, who will have completed more than 41 years as supervisor and commissioner when his term expires Dec. 31, 1976.

Candidates List Qualifications for Commission

District 1

Ingalls

Delbert Ingalls, 60, Republican, is the incumbent District 1 county commissioner and a Charlevoix County farmer. He has lived in the area for 53 years.

He said he was interested in seeking re-election because he is interested in local and county government and in seeing roads improved. He said that he was also interested in the needs of the Grandvue Medical Care Facility, and improved education.

He stands on his eight years experience as a county commissioner as his qualifications.

Niswander

Melvin Niswander, 50, Democrat, is a former county commissioner and an area carpenter. He has lived in the county for 35 years.

"I am running for the same reason as I did two years ago and won that election," he said about his candidacy.

"The people of the county need commissioners that can say yes or no with a free mind."

He said he is qualified because he is a U.S. Citizen and taxpayer.

Niswander

Christensen

District 2

Cunningham

Clyde E. Cunningham, Republican, is the incumbent District 2 commissioner. He is a 55-year-old farmer and machinery dealer and has lived in the area all of his life.

Cunningham

"I have always been interested in what I call grass roots government," he said about running for office.

"I feel this is very important in pursuing the freedom of our people and our nation.

"People have to get involved."

Cunningham has served as a justice in Marion Township in previous years and then was elected to three consecutive terms as township supervisor before running for the county commission.

Peters

Willis L. (Bill) Peters, Republican, is a 49-year-old corporation owner of Hookers Cleaners of Charlevoix. He has lived in the area for 17 years and is a high school graduate with several other special training courses.

When asked why he was running, he said he was not satisfied with the incumbent's voting record.

Peters said he was qualified for the position because of his public exposure, most recently the "property tax limitation."

He has never held a public office.

Peters

District 3

Friske

Herbert Friske, 27, Republican, is a service station owner and has lived in northern Michigan for 24 years. He holds a bachelor of science degree.

Friske said he is running for county commissioner for basically three reasons: he is concerned about the increasing erosion of individual liberties; the constant demand for more taxes; and because he would like to restore faith and confidence in people for their government.

Friske

"My most important qualification for the position of county commissioner is that I am a student of and firm believer in the Bible and the United States Constitution," he said.

He is also a former government teacher and has been active in political affairs for quite a number of years.

"The only previous political position I have held is that of precinct delegate," he added.

Haggard

John E. Haggard, 35, Republican, is a plumbing and heating contractor. A life-long Charlevoix resident, he has a business administration degree from Ferris State College.

"The reason that I am a candidate for the county commission is to try to establish a better communication between the two townships," he said about running for office.

Haggard said he felt qualified for the position because he is a life-long resident of the Charlevoix area and can be a better judge of the problems and needs of the people that he would represent.

He has been a member of the young Republicans at Ferris State College, served as a member and later chairman of the Charlevoix Regional Planning Commission and has been active in the operations of the city, township and Charlevoix government.

Haggard

Haertter

Leroy R. Haertter, 55, Democrat, is a general contractor and has lived in the area for 10 years. He is a high school graduate and has attended business college.

"As a taxpayer in Charlevoix County for several years, I've become increasingly interested in and concerned about county government," he said about running for office.

"As with my constituents, I'm sure, the cost of its various functions and services is of primary concern.

"At this time it would be premature for me to make more explicit comment in these cost areas, however I could safely and sincerely say I would maintain a conservative approach financially.

"I feel I now have sufficient time to represent the people of our county and to serve fully and adequately."

He has held no previous political offices.

District 5

Richardson

Ralph Richardson, 46, Republican, is a beef farmer and has lived in the area for 15 years. He is a college graduate.

"In my 8 years on the county Board, I have developed a very strong feeling for county government," he said about running for re-election.

"The State Government does not have enough local input and is bogged down by bureaucracy and lobbies.

"The townships have trouble raising the necessary monies for services.

"County government must keep itself strong and active so it can make the local needs known at the state level."

Richardson added that one of his major goals if re-elected is to overcome the lack of harmony within the county and obtain high quality services for the people.

As a farmer in the area, Richardson said he felt he was able to respond to the needs of the rural residents of Eveline and Wilson Townships.

"At the same time, I own lake frontage and can recognize the problems of persons owning land on water," he continued.

"Overall, I am qualified by virtue of my interest in the well-being of Charlevoix County."

He served on the Eveline Township Zoning Board and has been on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners for eight years.

Waldoer

Karl Waldner, 54, Democrat, has lived in the area for 21 years and is a home planning specialist.

Waldner says he is running for office to have "a free use" Ironton Ferry, to retire an "obsolete" county planning commission and to cut costs by trimming staff and nuisance fees. He said he also wanted everyone to get served accurately and courteously—not just local politicans.

He said he was qualified for the position because of his years of observing county government and his work with the Citizen's Information Service as co-chairman that engineered a property tax reduction vote for the November ballot.

Waldner

He has served as Zoning Administrator for Wilson Township.

Vroodran

John E. Vrondran, Democrat, 1618 Lake Shore Drive of Boyne City, did not furnish information about his candidacy.

District 6

Gratsch

Cliff Gratsch, 55, Republican, is owner and manager of a ski lodge and has lived in the area for 26 years. He is a high school graduate and attended Michigan State University.

Gratsch said he was running for office because of his concern over the transition that is taking place from rural farmland country to growing cities, townships and villages.

"We need to take a close look at these changes, and make certain that they are taking place in a way that is best for all residents of the county, now and in the future," he said.

"I believe that I can contribute toward establishment of sound future planning and the execution of sound, honest county government."

Gratsch has served as a trustee and treasurer of his township board, been a member of the board of the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce, and currently is on a township zoning board.

Matthew

District 9

Annear

Keith R. Annear, 59, Republican, is a retired educator and administrator who has lived in the area for 25 years. He has a bachelor's degree and master's degree.

Annear says he is running because he is interested in serving his community.

"My entire professional life has been spent in planning, executing and evaluating the outcomes of such planning," he said about his qualifications for the position.

"Perhaps this may apply in county government."

He has served for one term as a East Jordan councilman.

Betz

Patricia A. Retz, Democrat, 308 E. Williams, in East Jordan did not furnish any information about her candidacy.

District 13

Meggison

Donald B. Meggison, 52, Republican, is a mechanic and the incumbent commissioner for his district. He is a lifelong resident and Charlevoix High School graduate.

He is running for office because he is interested in government and hopes to carry on.

McRae

Ralph McRae, Republican, is a building contractor and has lived in the area for 30 years. He has had two years of college.

"I am interested in the actual practice of local governments," he said about running for office.

"It is a great challenge to me to work on the many problems that confront our county.

"I mean to see that the taxpayers' interests are protected and that the first ward in particular receives a direct benefit from the money it hands over to the county."

McRae

McRae feels he is qualified because he is willing to be involved in and work for better governing policies.

He has been a first ward city councilman and says he has tried very hard to improve local government, having initiated many new ideas and brought light to a few short comings.

He said he is very concerned about expenditures and taxation.

District 14

Ward

Oscar Ward, Democrat, 57, is self-employed and has lived in the area for 48 years.

Ward says he is running because he has lived in the area most of his life and understands local problems.

"Now that I have been initiated by serving well into my second year on the board, I find myself more convinced than ever that the taxpayer and his interest are being shortchanged in government and he knows it," he said.

Ward is seeking his second term in office.

Thomure

Marianne Thomure, 45, Republican, works at Kings and has lived in the area for six years.

She holds a bachelor's degree in music education.

"I can contribute to the efficiency of operation and development of local government," he said about his candidacy.

"If we are to retain local control, elected personages must be interested in the position for the betterment of providing services necessary to the citizens from the local level, not for the personal financial remuneration involved."

Moerland served as a Charlevoix City Councilman from 1956 to 1960 and has been a county commissioner since 1965. He was also on the Charlevoix Planning Commission from 1965 to 1967.

Brouillete: Candidate for Congress

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Fran Brouillette cites unemployment as the major issue in his challenge to incumbent Phil Ruppe, (R. Houghton), for the United States House of Representatives' seat for Michigan's 11th District.

After appearing in Charlevoix's Venetian Festival Parade, in an effort to make voters more aware of his campaign, the Iron Mountain Prosecuting Attorney was interviewed by THE COURIER on a wide variety of issues.

Brouillette, 44 years old, who ran unsuccessfully in 1974 against Ruppe, says in the past two years "unemployment in the 11th District has risen from 7.4 percent to 15 percent. The national average for unemployment is 7.5 to 8 percent.

"While no one Congressman is responsible, Phil Ruppe claimed in 1974, that he should be elected because the district's unemployment was only 7.4 percent. Now it's grown to 15 percent. If he took responsibility then, he should now," Brouillette challenges.

Brouillette claims Ruppe has done nothing to help alleviate the situation.

Asked what he'd do if elected, he says, "I don't believe in the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill, because it would create more federal bureaucracy" (the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill currently being debated would make the federal government the employer of last resort).

Brouillette says he prefers "a piece-meal approach" to solving unemployment.

"I would have voted for a $6.2 billion public works bill, not the $3.9 billion which Ruppe supported."

He continues, "I advocate a system of tax credits to industries which are locating in areas of high unemployment or expanding to hire more.

"This tax break would be contingent on the industry hiring unemployed workers. I would aim particularly at unskilled workers."

As another example of his "piece-meal approach'; Brouillette suggests federal funds aught to be spent for scientific research at such institutions as Michigan Technological University in Houghton, to study ways of mining the low-grade iron ore of the western Upper Peninsula. Mining the major source of jobs in the western UP ceased when costs became too high, after World War II.

Brouillette accuses all incumbent congressmen, who voted for the 1975 Congressional pay hike of "insulating themselves from the effects of inflation."

Congressional salaries excluding all the extraordinary allowances, were $42,500, Brouillette says.

The pay hike bill, which Ruppe supported, raised salaries to nearly $45,000 a year, Brouillette charges.

But, Brouillette's main target is "a cost of living allowance" which would continue to adjust salaries upwards with inflation.

"One of the chief causes of inflation are acts of Congress." he says.

"If they insulate themselves from the effects of inflation, one wonders how hard they'll work for us to resist the effects of inflation," he questions.

Brouillette claims, "If I'm elected I'll introduce legislation to retract the cost of living allowance amendment."

He admits the effort would probably be futile.

Financial disclosure by the candidates of their assests is another area in which Brouillette challenges Ruppe.

"I do not say he is involved in conflict of interest, but he has not given us the details on stocks he owns.

"Ruppe owns stock in oil companies and utilities," Brouillette says he knows from public records. "But we do not know how much stock he owns in these.

"Yet he continues to vote for deregulation of oil and utility companies," Brouillette charges.

Citing the general suspicion with which people now view politicians, he claims Ruppe "has failed to remove all doubts."

Brouillette responded as follows to other issues:

Year-round navigation on the Great Lakes – "I have four points I want covered before the question is settled: erosion caused by ice breaking; problems for island residents on the St. Mary's River; the problem of ice slivers jamming the Soo power plants; and if taxpayers are subsidizing private industry."

Brouillette questions if the steel companies, who are promoting year-round navigation and need the Coast Guard ice breakers to maintain the chipping lanes, aren't merely moving ore to reduce stock piles, thus reducing their personal property taxes, rather than feeding their steel mills.

–Nuclear Power Plants – "If elected I'd hold public hearings with recognized scientific experts to hear and answer people's questions."

–Alpena as a nuclear waste burial site–"I am totally opposed.

"For so many years they didn't think there were people up here and tried to make it a park. Now they know we have people so they want us to be a garbage dump."

–Pentagon and Defense spending – "We must maintain a strong defense, but cut fat.

"Specifically cut the B-1 Bomber and reduce troops in Europe." Brouillette points out he served with NATO forces in France while in the Army from 1955-57.

–Foreign policy – "I would have opposed our military aid to Angola.

"I favor foreign aid in the form of food, economic aid and industrial expertise, not military or CIA activities."

–Environment – "There must be a balance between environment and jobs.

"For example, the Tennessee Valley Authority is exploring the UP for uranium. We have got to study what they are going to do and how many jobs they'll create. We must restrict the damage to land and be sure it's returned to its original condition."

–Indian Fishing Rights – "If in fact they have treaty rights with the United States, then they should be enforced. But I expect they'll have to negotiate so the fish population is not destroyed."

–Seafarer/Sanguine (the Navy's proposed 4,000 square mile underground antenna grid for the UP) – "I am opposed until I am convinced it is necessary for national defense, that it will work, that there's no other location for it, and that it is not significantly harmful to the environment."

Challenging his opponent, Brouillette says, "If we pay Ruppe $45,000 a year, he should be investigating this for us and reporting to the electorate."

Brouillette calls Ruppe's reliance on a referendum on Seafarer a sham.

"He knows the Defense Department wouldn't abide by 'a binding vote of the people,' they never have.

"What has Ruppe done to convince the Governor, his friend, to use his veto power?" Brouillette challenges.

–Reserve Mining – "There is asbestos in Lake Superior as far east as Marquette. Reserve is dumping 67,000 tons of tailings into the lake daily.

"If elected I'd introduce legislation to stop this. Reserve would cease or agree to a government controlled program for an on-land disposal site.

"If Reserve proved, by opening their corporate books, that they couldn't afford this, they could have a government loan, which they would have to repay with interest."

Brouillette, who received his Doctorate of Law from Marquette University in Milwaukee, challenged Congressman Ruppe to take positions on issues for comparison's sake.

Faith dispels Our Fears about the future

The future is something we view with alarm,
When we think what tomorrow might bring;
For we all are concerned with our safety from harm
That could come from some terrible thing.
Yet through faith and your Church you develop a trust,
Then the future can bring what it may;
For you'll learn through each lesson that will be discussed
That the Lord will protect you today.
So, forget all those things that may never appear,
Such as poverty, sickness or crime;
You can go all through life and have nothing to fear,
If you'll live it one day at a time!

-Gloria Nowak

And if to-morrow shall be sad, Or never come at all, I've had
At least today!
-Edward Hersey Richards

Credit Union Earns Award

The Charlevoix Federal Credit Union has been given the Thrift Honor Award for 1976 by the National Credit Union Administration.

Thrift Honor Award Certificates are awarded annually to the top ten to 14 percent of those Federally-chartered credit unions that have shown the largest average monthly rate of increase in total savings, taking into account additional factors reflecting conscientious effort by credit union officials to encourage thrift.

The Charlevoix Federal Credit Union was the only Union in the area to receive the award.

Lasater Wins Sheriff's Race

3 Upset in Primary

Two incumbents were upset in three primary contests in Charlevoix County where George T. Lasater with a total of 1472 votes came out ahead of incumbent Philo E. Sumner, who polled 1281 and Robert Neff, who had 1066.

Neff carried the city of Charlevoix by a margin of 490 to 314 for Sumner and 261 for Lasater.

Lasater will be unopposed in the November general election.

In the second upset, Clayton Healey, the challenger on the Republican ballot, polled 1619 votes to upset incumbent Ronald G. Geer who had 1541. David Nachazel, the Democratic candidate, collected 628 votes.

In the third contest for county office, incumbent prosecutor, Roy C. Hayes won hands down over challenger Donald J. Berlage by a margin of 2009 to 1452. Hayes will be unopposed in November.

Uncontested candidates and the votes they received follows: Clerk: Clarence F. Rabach, Republican incumbent, 2888 and Lois Wasoski, Democrat, 739; treasurer: Anah H. Potter (R), 2865; Register of Deeds: Grover C. Geneit, (R), incumbent, 2821 and Matthew Waldner (O), 637; Surveyor: Mary C. Feindt, (R), 2725.

Rabach said the turnout was between 25 and 30 percent of the voters and quite high for a primary election.

In the contests for County Commissioner in Charlevoix County, incumbents in the city of Charlevoix came through unscathed and thus will be assured of re-election to their respective posts.

In Charlevoix's first ward, incumbent Donald B. Meggison defeated Ralph A. McRae, the challenger, by a margin of 253 to 95 while in the third ward where I. Lee Moerland, the incumbent, polled 221 to 119 for Theodore E. Browe, Jr.

In District 3 (Charlevoix and Hayes Townships) where John E. Haggard and Herbert Friske were seeking the nomination for the seat being vacated by Clayton A. Smith, Haggard out-polled Friskie 290 to 140. Haggard will now face Leroy R. Haertter, a Democrat, who had 69 votes in Tuesday's election.

Clyde E. Cunningham, incumbent, won the nomination over Willis Peters in District 2 (Marion, Norwood, St. James, Peaine Townships) by a margin of 224 to 140.

Eslewhere, Larry D. Matthew won over Cliff Gratsch for the nomination in District 6 where Matthew had 90 votes to 71 for Gratsch. District 6 includes Melrose and Chandler Townships.

In Boyne City's District 12, John D. Kujawski received 79 votes to 58 for Richard J. Dubin for the Republican nomination. Kujawski will now meet James H. Goebel, Democrat, who received 41 votes on Tuesday. They will seek election to the post presently held by Michael Fulkerson.

In contests on the Democratic side of the ballot, Robert Christensen won over Melvin Niswander by a margin of 20 to 12 in District 1. The winner will meet Republican incumbent Delbert Ingalls in November. District 1 is South Arm township.

In a second Democratic contest, Karl Waldner defeated John Vrondran by a vote of 55-44. Waldner will now face Republican incumbent Ralph C. Richardson who had 254 votes in November in District 5 (Eveline and Wilson Townships).

Congress: Representative from the 11th District: Ruppe (R), 2549; Dale (R), 1009; Brouillette (D), 721.

CHARLEVOIX Federal Credit Union's proposed new building.

Credit Union Plans Expansion

Charlevoix Federal Credit Union unveiled plans this week to construct a new $200,000 facility located at the corner of Petoskey Avenue and Burns Street in Charlevoix.

Credit Union officials said construction of the new colonial design structure would begin as soon as possible with completion anticipated this fall.

The Credit Union is presently located in an office building complex at 710 Bridge Street.

"We need room for more space," explained Kate Brady, office manager and treasurer of the Credit Union, about the decision to construct its own facility.

"We have reached our limits in the present location and need more space to provide continued good service to our customers."

The new 3,400-sq. ft. facility will be constructed of white brick and will feature all the new modern financial innovations with teller stations, individual private loan booths and a drive-in window.

Danash Associates of Pontiac is the general contractor with subcontract work being done by local contractors.

Federal Credit Union became federally chartered in 1969 and served families and residents within a six-mile radius of the Charlevoix Post Office.

In 1972, the field of membership was extended to all persons living or working within the county.

The credit union has grown from 162 members and $50,000 in assets in 1969, to 2,500 members and over $2 million in assets this year.

"We have become one of the most progressive credit unions in the state," Mrs. Brady said about the company.

The credit union has four full-time employees besides Mrs. Brady.

Serving on the building committee with Mrs. Brady, are Clem Wagner, president of the credit union; and Michael Gibbons.

Band Makes Special Visit

Charlevoix will host Michigan's Bicentennial Band, the Fifth Michigan Regimental Band, in concert here Friday while the 140-man unit is on tour under their sponsorship of the Michigan Council for the Arts and the Michigan Bicentennial Commission.

The band, a Civil War recreation of the 1861 band that fought with the Army of the Potomac in many of the historic battles of the war, will present a two-hour concert in East Park at 8:00 p.m. Friday. In the event of inclement weather, the concert will be held at the high school gymnasium.

Appearing under the direction of Major Thomas G. Broka, the band includes a regimental color party, a historical flags color party, U.S. Navy dancers of 1851, a regimental fife and drum corps and a hango band.

The band is presently touring the state. It was in Alpena Saturday after touring the eastern shore of the state and will travel to a section of the Upper Peninsula including the American Soo, several places in Ontario, and Newberry. Charlevoix was named as a concert site following a cancellation in Ontario. The band's appearance here will be the only one in the immediate area.

The band has made many appearances in the state and elsewhere during the bicentennial tour. Among its recent appearances prior to opening its present tour was at the Canadian National Exposition.

The band has been named to welcome the tall ship, Norway's Christian Radich, when it visits Detroit later this month, while on its tour during Operation Sail.

No Celebration

I would like to say that for this being the 200th Birthday of America, the town of Charlevoix had no celebration at all. The picnic at Depot Beach had not even ¼ of the people of Charlevoix. It was a big farce. All the surrounding towns had some sort of celebration. But, I guess there wasn't enough of the important money people in Charlevoix for our Chamber of Commerce to bother about. After all, who cares about the residents. It's pretty bad we had to watch other towns celebrate the Birthday on TV. Everything is celebrated on Venetian Weekend in Charlevoix, but I don't think the 200th Birthday should be. I think Charlevoix could have done a lot more. A disappointed resident.

Private Property

Private property that is designated as such with signs should be respected by the potential mushroom pickers. If city people should strangers roaming around their property they would not hesitate to call the proper authorities, so they should be foreworned that the same will be done on clearly marked private property this year, thank you.

Pride

We have always taken great pride in our slogan "Charlevoix-the-Beautiful". However, it would seem we are slackening in the image when we see waist-high weeds and tree seedlings adjoining our parking meters on the city-owned property on Mason Street.

'Charlevoix is the Place We Always Want to Come Back to'

By PEG OHLE

"Charlevoix is the place we always want to come back to."

That is the sentiment of a family that has its roots deep in Charlevoix as a summer home.

It all started four generations ago when Albert A. Badger was general superintendent of the Pere Marquette Railroad and used to bring his family to Charlevoix in his private railroad car to stay at the old Inn. Later his daughter, Mrs. Frank Fitzsimons, had a summer home here where her six children played the summer away.

Mrs. Fitzsimons is here again this summer with two of her daughters and eight grandchildren. The children are swimming, sailing, bicycling and playing tennis just as their parents and grandparents did.

And they came a long way to do it. Kathy Fitzsimons Tschurchenthaler and her four children, Lisa, Paul, Christa and Mary Beth, came from a town near Basil, Switzerland. Mrs. Fitzsimons and her daughter Mary Fitzsimons Toomey and four children, Patrick, Michael, Tom and Matthew, came from San Diego, California.

The family gets together at least every two years for a reunion in Charlevoix. The two Fitzsimons sons, Peter and Paul, make their homes in Traverse City, daughter Fran Cosentino lives in Detroit and daughter Jan Dilley lives in West LaFayette, Indiana.

Mrs. Tschurtschenthaler has lived in Switzerland for ten years. Her husband, John, is in the financial department of a Swiss company. He is a native of Austria, where she met him while going to school.

"My children are Americans and it's good to have them in America and to know their own country," Mrs. Tschurtschenthaler says.

When the family moved to Switzerland ten years ago, the children spoke only English. They were put in the local public school in which classes are conducted in German.

"We just dumped them there," their mother says, "and, six months later they had mastered the language."

The family is returning to Switzerland next week because the children must be in school August 15. The weekly school schedule includes a Saturday morning session, but there are more vacation periods than in this country. Besides the summer vacation, the children have time off in the fall, winter and spring, with the winter vacation being devoted to skiing in the Swiss mountains.

In the years when the family does not come to Charlevoix, they usually spend their summer vacations in Austria.

One comment Mrs. Tschurtschenthaler made is not often heard, either from summer visitors or year-round residents.

"We love to go shopping here because prices are lower than at homa. Groceries and meat are about half the price and clothes cost less, too."

When asked how Charlevoix had changed since she first started coming here, Mrs. Fitzsimons mentioned the store fronts and the condominiums.

"Some of the old faces are gone, too, but Charlevoix is a friendly town," she said.

Art Fair Only 2 Weeks Away

Charlevoix will be the scene August 14 of the 18th annual Waterfront Fair for Artists and Craftsmen.

Sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, the event will feature 159 artists exhibiting paintings done in all the media, drawings, ceramics, sculpture, jewelry and graphics among other art forms.

According to Ms. Suzi Reis, chairman of this year's fair, jewelry promises to be one of the most exciting categories with 20 of the most outstanding from Iowa, Florida, Ohio, California, Virgin Island and Michigan showing at the fair.

It's been 18 years since the Waterfront Fair came into existence. The degree of professionalism and artistic creative excellence has increased 99 percent over the past 18 years Ms. Reis added.

Among the new exhibitors at the fair will be Ruth Lines of Lapeer whose ink drawing "Old Willow" was among several paintings by Michigan artists selected to hang in Governor Milliken's office on a rotating basis during the year.

The Waterfront Fair will henceforth be known by a logo which was designed and drawn by Charlevoix's own Bill Staffel. The symbols signify the sun which always shines on the fair, the water and the ever present sea gulls.

The Waterfront Fair will be held in East Park from 9:00 a.m. until dusk on Saturday, Aug. 14.

State Opinion on Electrical Fund Makes Little Difference to City

By Ken Winter

A State Attorney General's opinion defining the use of surplus electrical funds by Charlevoix city fathers for city projects apparently will have little impact, according to Mayor Edward P. Hansen.

The city major was reacting to a recently issued opinion by Attorney General Frank Kelley that stated Charlevoix is not prohibited from earning a profit from its municipally-owned electrical operation.

"It is my opinion that municipally-owned utilities operated by a fourth class city...are not prohibited from earning a profit as long as such surplus revenues are applied by the municipality to the cost of services and plant," he wrote in his opinion.

Using excess monies from city utilities for general fund operations has been a source of controversy in both Charlevoix and neighboring communities for many years.

This attorney general's opinion came as a result of a request by State Senator Robert Davis, who had been contacted by former city counciiman Sam Supernaw.

Supernaw, who served on the council in the early seventies, said he had always asked the question as a city official and was told it was legal.

He said he thought it was unfair for the utility users to be subsidized by the citizens.

Originally, Supernaw said he had asked the Public Service Commission to take up the question and later had to go to the Attorney General.

"I just want them (city council) to plan for the future," Supernaw explained.

"I just want the city to quit using the utility like a pot of gold.

"Let the utility pay for itself."

Mayor Hansen said he wasn't sure what Supernaw's motives were, but that he didn't see any problem.

Last year, the city transferred some $90,000 from the electrical fund to the general fund for use in various projects including street and harbor improvements, Hansen said.

A year earlier, the city transferred some $22,500.

"The plant is the whole city operation--sewers, streets, etc.," Hansen said.

He said monies being transferred into the general fund are simply going back to work on the city operation. For example, money could be transferred from the general fund to remove a tree that might have been killed by a power line.

Hansen said he looked at the attorney general's opinion as requiring the city to simply establish a line itemization of what electrical funds are being used for in the city.

"I'm not against sound fiscal handling," he said.

"The attorney general has really told the city not to pile up too much excess monies."

Hansen said the practice of transferring electrical funds to the general fund has been going on for 20 years.

Officers Elected

Mrs. James (Suzi) Reis of Charlevoix was elected secretary of the Crooked Tree Arts Council at the group's annual meeting recently.

Other officers are Mrs. Paul Brown, president; Mrs. James Herlocher, vice-president; and Mrs. Niles Hill, treasurer, all from Petoskey.

New board members are Larry Wojcik of Petoskey, Mrs. Ronald Snyder of Petoskey and Mrs. Dennis Jason of East Jordan.

Ma Bell May Not Be So Motherly

Ma Bell is in the midst of launching a massive campaign to save the little guy with its endorsement of the Consumer Communications Reform Act of 1976.

Although we cannot fully believe that their sincerity in promoting the legislation is simply to help low and fixed income people, the Bell System's case is worth exploring.

According to Bell System, the Federal Communications Commission is pursuing policies that will hit hard at the pocketbook of the typical home telephone user.

They say the FCC is promoting what it calls "competition" in certain parts of the telephone industry. But, Bell claims what actually is developing is an arbitrary division of the market.

"An example is the market for intercity private lines–that is, communications channels between cities that are leased for the exclusive use of certain customers, mainly large businesses," Bell says.

"The regulated telephone companies serve all customers, regardless of cost, regardless of location. Newly authorized suppliers, however, may pick and choose the routes and customers they will serve, "skimming the cream" from the more profitable intercity routes."

As a result, Bell says the little guys will lose while many big businesses stand to gain from these developments.

They say current federal regulatory policies will force the telephone companies to depart from traditional pricing patterns which favor home users.

At the same time, the industry is being made less efficient because of needless duplication of facilities and the fragmentation of service responsibilities.

In the final analysis, Bell says the nation could well be faced with higher home telephone rates, higher long distance rates for less-populated areas, a higher telephone bill for the country as a whole and lower quality service.

Ma Bell says that most Americans think that competition always benefits the "little man." More often than not, this is true.

But in the case of regulated telephone industry, competition reduces the funds available to hold down the cost of basic telephone service to home users, Bell says.

Bell claims that if the telephone industry is forced toward pricing basic home telephone service on stand-alone basis–that is, denying it the revenue support it currently gets from other services–charges to residence customers will have to be increased sharply.

If, over a period of time, all support from other services were to be lost–because of losses to competition or because of repricing to respond to competition–monthly rates for home phones would have to be increased by about 75 per cent to cover full costs. Future inflation could, of course, drive rates up even further.

The company says that to the extent that competition fragments responsibility for the telephone network, the quality of service will suffer. To the extent that it duplicates facilities, the cost savings and improved services otherwise available to users–through more efficient, higher capacity systems–will be lost.

Because of their feelings, the Bell System is endorsing the Consumer Communications Reform Act of 1976, which has been introduced in both houses of Congress. Bell says this legislation would reaffirm the basic goal of "universal service" set forth in the Communications Act of 1934, which pursues the goal of a telephone in every home.

On the surface, the Bell System case sounds altruistic. They are able to spread the income derived from some of their moneymakers across the board to benefit all telephone users–especially the little guy.

At the same time, we have seen where competition in the telephone industry has been a direct benefit to many.

For example, now that private companies outside of the Bell System have been allowed to sell their own instruments to telephone users, we have seen Bell take a complete reversal in its marketing strategy. Now we see intermediate phone systems available to small businesses that several years ago were unheard of and were not available through Bell until competition moved in on the field.

If Bell is truly concerned about its capital now available for expansion and what will happen to that money if competition is allowed to continue, they should examine their own corporation policies.

Why should the little guy, for example, have to pay for free or discounted service available to Bell executives or employees? Why should the little guy have to pay for the benefits Bell employees find themselves getting in Northern Michigan that are not compensurate to what other area businesses offer in this economy?

We feel Bell has made some valid arguments, but at the same time we think they need to scrutinize their own corporate structure more closely.

Bicentennial Problems

Dear Editor:

One meets so many interesting and talented people while traveling that it is difficult to refrain from boring the home folks with details and pictures.

However, I feel that one anonymous retired judge should be quoted in our local papers because he shared so much honest and soul searching experience with me. It mainly pertains to the Bicentennial renewal of Democratic justice, so I hope you and your readers will enjoy his observations.

After hearing me expound on Bicentennial problems, in general, he evidently spent some time thinking about our country's future before he shared his thoughts with me in his home. In essence, not verbatim, he said:

"I think you are 100 percent wrong in your approach to solving our basic problem which seems to be corroding the cornerstone of our Democracy. However, as you note, local lay courts were created by our forefathers from their experience in developing our country and we should keep them for the future generations. Also I think you are about 100 percent correct in your diagnosis of 'Group Greed Economy.'

"But you are naive if you really believe senior adult groups, church groups, noon-day dinner clubs or group greed leaders are going to give your ideas a hearing. I believe there is one group that might effect a beginning renewal in any community and they are non-legal consumer groups.

"But the local news media must be urged to put profession above profit and give complete coverage to all sides of conflicting views presented. If the public can become properly motivated for Democratic justice and political action our country may be saved from the route of ancient Rome. Too much code law–too little justice and no brotherhood. In the end it leads to riots, wars and death.

"If such consumer groups will conduct a survey on comparative living costs and standards now with those of pre-greed group economy days I'm sure it would be an eye opener. But I'm mainly concerned with legal justice.

"A study of costs of civil and criminal justice via the modern code law and bureaucratic approach versus the Democratic practice of our forefathers would, I believe, show that criminal and civil justice was more realistic and equal for all concerned and about 75 to 90 percent cheaper with competent laymen serving as judge plus juries–than our present modern systems.

"Furthermore, I believe competent and honest professional judges and honest attorneys would find people more anxious to consult them about the more involved legal matters and trust their judgment, thus insuring them of a higher income and more self respect.

"If voters could regain their lost rights to bring any person, in their township or precinct, to trial whether a laymen, tradesman, professional, politician, bureaucrat or even a judge with their own lay judge and lay jury there would be less pre-arranged dishonest judgments rendered in favor of a person or persons in political, financial, racketeer or other fraternal relationships with the judge and one or both of the attorneys involved.

"Corrupt members of such groups especially secret law and order groups are more vicious than out and out criminal attorneys etc.

"If anyone questions this corrupt practice indulged in by some judges they usually reply, with moral indignation, that anyone can appeal a court decision. But that is basically false. Very few people have the money or emotional stamina to go through their case again.

"There is, however, one present day bit of Democratic justice left for ordinary people and that is–to demand a jury. Honest attorneys who want their clients to have real justice will recommend, especially where the truthfulness of personalities are involved, that the client demand a jury with people from the locality involved.

My Bicentennial prayer is that I live long enough to see the day when people, once again, regard judges and most attorneys and–certainly most of our government officials–with patriotic respect."

Clockwise

One of the advantages of living in northern Michigan is that we are probably as far as we can get from the abominable influence of Mexican cooking and still be within the continental confines of the United States.

At the risk of starting another "border incident", let me hasten to explain that there is absolutely nothing wrong with Mexican cooking–if you are a Mexican, live in the sun-baked border states where the food must be highly spiced to make up for the blandness of the weather, or have a cast iron stomach.

Northern palates more accustomed to mashed potatoes and hamburger patties are in for trouble if they stray too often among the enchilada fields and tamale forests of the southwest.

Unfortunately, our Katie is a Mexican food nut and any concoction laced with chili powder has her immediate and unqualified approval.

Her idea of a perfect vacation would be two weeks in a Tiajuana greasy spoon sampling everything on the menu.

I suppose we got Katie off on the wrong foot when she was four months old and I foolishly let her taste a smidgeon of chili from my bowl. She rolled her eyes, smacked her lips and emptied her jar of pureed peaches over the dog's head. From that point on she turned her back on baby food and favored adult fare instead, particularly if the adult fare has a south-of-the-border flavor.

Until Katie reached 4th grade, her experience with Mexican food was limited pretty much to chili con carne. But then the kids at school did a unit on Mexico, climaxing it with a luncheon of Mexican food. Katie was introduced to such exotic specialties as refried beans and tacos and she wouldn't rest until she had introduced her new culinary friends to her parents.

We found the refried beans in a can in Oleson's. Nearby was a box of taco shells. We were in business. Katie told us everything that was supposed to go into the tacos–lettuce, grated cheese and chili flavored hamburger sauce.

Judy browned the taco shells in the oven until they were crisp. However, I think they got too crisp because my taco kept falling apart, dumping the contents all over my lap. I was equally unimpressed with the refried beans, which tasted strangely like somebody else's leftovers.

For years after we kept a rather low profile on the Mexican food front, making chili con carne just often enough to keep Katie from leaving home.

Then one day at Oleson's a strange thing happened. I reached up to get a box of Grape Nuts and found myself with a jar of hot tamales which had wandered over from the next aisle.

"Lookee, here!" I cried. "Who's fur hot tamales."

Although Katie had never tasted them before, she insisted they be included with our week's groceries. That night she and I shared a jar of them for dinner and Katie was ecstatic.

I don't have to tell you I have had little rest since. Katie is convinced that anything that can be made commercially and be improved upon at home and tamales are no exception.

So we spent the summer pursuing tamale recipes and discussing our plan of attack. Saturday we bought a six-quart steamer (one of the necessary utensils), a five-pound bag of corn meal and a dozen ears of corn, the husks of which are recommended for wrapping tamales.

Sunday, after a good night's sleep, Operation Tamale got underway in the Clock kitchen. I had an awful time getting the right proportions of tamale batter and filling into each serving. And I had an even worse time getting the whole business wrapped up in corn husks and tied securely with string.

When I put them in the steamer, I was firmly convinced that the batter would never cook and that Col. Chicken would end up supplying our Sunday dinner.

But I was wrong. After two hours in the steamer our tamales emerged hot and tasty and done to a turn. Katie ate four of them without batting an eye.

All of which goes to prove that old Mexico is no further from northern Michigan than your kitchen range.

My husband believes if God had meant for man to put a nail in the wall, he would have given him a rubber thumb.

On the other hand, I have never gone around making holes in the wall indiscriminately, but unlike him I do not feel that a hole is an open incision.

We have argued about this for years. For every nail in our wall, there has been a battle and an ultimate decision handed down by the Supreme Court.

When the phone company cut out a little box near our woodwork to bring lines into the house, he bowed his head and said, "Our wall has been violated."

When we put up our house numbers he said, "There is no need for this. I know where I live."

We have the only cup dispenser that hangs over the shower curtain rod like a swing.

Last week, I put my foot down. "This house has all the personality of a recovery room," I said, "and that is about to change."

He put down his paper. "I want you to hang up this macrame ceiling planter."

"You want me to hang what from where?" he asked slowly.

"My macrame ceiling planter from the ceiling."

I haven't seen that look on my husband's face since he had a $5 check bounce that he wrote to his college alumni.

"Get hold of yourself!" he commanded. "Do you realize you are talking about a drill? I would have to get a ladder and measurements would have to be precise...and we'd have to find a stud and plaster would drop a blizzard on the carpet...and it could turn out to be a real head knocker."

"Other people have them hanging around," I said defensively.

Who Can You Hate?

IT'S STRANGE how memories are triggered. Last week I met Donald Crowder in downtown Detroit, in front of Hudson's. And I was reminded of William Grigsby who lived in Colorado 13 years ago. I don't even know if he is alive today.

There is no reason Donald Crowder's name should mean anything to you, although if you ever saw him making his pitch, you might never forget him.

On the other hand, William Grigsby makes a great trivia question. He made front pages all over the world in 1963. Can you remember why?

In 1963, Grigsby was a 47-year-old Denver janitor suffering from "incurable cancer" of the liver. Doctors had all but given up. As a last gasp effort, they decided to attempt an operation never before performed – a liver transplant.

The operation was a success. The healthy liver was taken from a man who had died from a brain tumor. He was white. William Grigsby was black.

Grigsby's case raised some interesting questions 13 years ago. Unfortunately, the questions are still pertinent today.

Could it be possible that, aside from complexion, Negroes are constructed the same way as the wonderful white folks?

If a "white" liver will function in a black man, can the same be said for the brain, the lungs, the eyes, even the heart?

How many "white" organs could be sewn into a little black boy before his bus driver let him off at the wrong school?

Medical science has been making tremendous advances. The wise doctors are not only transplanting internal organs, they are also sewing on severed arms and legs. They shift skin with the ease of a blood transfusion. They borrow from here and from there and fashion new noses and ears and chins and you name it.

It is conceivable that, some day, a white man could be walking around with an Indian's heart, a Chinaman's lung and a Negro's leg. Would you want your sister to marry him?

Which brings us back to Donald Crowder, who is black and who has no legs.

Crowder is 25, a former construction worker. Over two years ago, doctors said he had a bone disease. "I can't spell it or pronounce it," he told me. "But I had it."

23 operations later, he had no legs. They were both amputated above the knee.

Now Crowder spends most of his days begging on the streets. He makes a grotesque sight, half a man lying face down on his litter cart, with his empty pant legs flapping behind him.

A crude sign, lettered on a hunk of cardboard, hangs from the front of Crowder's "bed". It says: "We are raising funds for artificial legs. Could you please donate?"

Crowder is usually pushed around town by his brother-in-law, Robert Willis. Sometimes they have to walk all the way from the Crowder home on Joseph Campau. Sometimes they get a ride. Willis helps Crowder beg, standing beside him and calling out to passersby, almost like a sideshow barker.

Crowder said he takes in around $30 every day he is able to beg. Some days he is forced to stay home because of bed sores on his stumps. He figures the kind of artificial legs he needs will cost around $1,400.

I wonder why some government agency isn't buying legs for Crowder, but I didn't ask him. I didn't ask him if maybe he already had some artificial legs which he left home while he was out turning an easy buck.

Those are probably the questions I should have asked, but the truth is I'm not good at quizzing people with glaring handicaps. I choke on the hard questions and, to disguise my pity, I smile inanely when I feel like crying.

I can only report that Donald Crowder is a husky man, what is left of him, and he is strong. He proved it when he squeezed my hand in farewell. He said he wants a job, any kind of job that can be done by a strong man with no legs. If you can help him, I can put you in touch.

In the meantime, I ponder this fantasy which reaches back to 1963 and William Grigsby and the first liver transplant. Donald Crowder probably won't live to see it, but the day will come when doctors will be able to paste humans together like paper dolls, a leg here and an arm there.

But if they do it without regard to race or religion, how is a guy going to know for sure who to hate?

...Carol Roznoski

Carol Roznoski is the wife of Lieut. Commander Roger Roznoski, who last week gave up his command of the Coast Guard Cutter Sundew and will soon take up a new command in Chicago. This week Carol tells the Courier a few things about the life of a Coast Guard family.

COURIER: How long have you been in Charlevoix?

ROZNOSKI: For two years this time. We were stationed her during 1964 and part of 1965, but we were moved because of the Vietnam war. Our youngest son, John, was born in the Charlevoix Hospital in 1965.

COURIER: Has Roger been in the Coast Guard ever since you were married?

ROZNOSKI: Yes, I met him in Marquette when I was going to school there and he was stationed with the Coast Guard.

COURIER: Where have you lived since then?

ROZNOSKI: We started out in Duluth, where our first two children were born. Then we went to Green Bay, where our second two children were born. From there we came to Charlevoix, and when Roger went to Vietnam, I went to the state of Washington to be near my parents. Our next duty was in Seattle, for three years, and following that, in Juneau, Alaska. From Juneau we went to Nashville, and from Nashville, back here.

COURIER: Tell us about your children.

ROZNOSKI: Molly is 19 and goes to school in Tennessee. She has been here for the summer. Kelly is married to Richard Elzinga and lives in Minot, North Dakota, where he's in the Air Force. Linda is 15 and has been going to Charlevoix High School. David is 14 and went to the Middle School and John, 11, went to the Elementary School.

COURIER: How do they feel about moving?

ROZNOSKI: The children know they can't stay–moving is kind of an adventure for them.

COURIER: How do you feel about moving?

ROZNOSKI: We've loved it here, especially since we came back to friends we met the first time we were here. But I adjust. When you know you have to move, you can't become too attached to places.

COURIER: Do you have any hobbies?

ROZNOSKI: I love crafts and to read and ride a bike. I also love antiques, especially to look for them. Flow blue is a favorite. I've been a member of the Coast Guard Wives Club and worked for the Bloodmobile since I've been here. I also belonged to a Bible Study class at the Methodist Church.

COURIER: Is Coast Guard assignment in Charlevoix a busy one?

ROZNOSKI: Yes, last year was an especially busy season because the waterways were open all year for the first time. The Sundew went wherever needed to escort the shipping.

COURIER: How many men are on the Sundew?

ROZNOSKI: About 50.

COURIER: Where are you going for your next duty?

ROZNOSKI: Roger has been assigned to Chicago. He'll be in charge of inspecting ships and barges. It has to do with maritime law. We'll be there three years. Land assignments are three years and sea duty is two years.

COURIER: How many years has Roger been in the Coast Guard?

ROZNOSKI: Twenty-four. He has six more to go before retirement.

COURIER: What are you going to do then?

ROZNOSKI: Maybe move back here. We still have our house – we rented it to the new C.O., James O'Neil.

Your Annual 'Day at the Beach' Page

This page is dedicated:

-To the lifeguard at the Michigan Beach who consented to have her photograph taken even with zinc oxide on her nose. (A beach page is not a beach page without a picture of the lifeguard.)

–To all the pretty ladies who grimaced, sighed and finally smiled for the camera.

-To the silver-haired woman who swims every day from North Point to the dock, collecting stones on the walk home.

–To the young seaweed-pie maker, bottom center. (He throws them at his brother.)

-To Kristin, who couldn't remember how old she is. (It was her birthday. She's four and on the left in the lower right hand corner of the page.)

-To the art history student from the University of Wisconsin. (The Mt. McSauba Beach was slightly more conducive to write a paper than the Bell's Bay campground.)

-To the young man in the lower left hand corner who never made a muscle before.

-To the fisherman who wasn't fishing for anything in particular. ("Bass, maybe.")

-To the young woman who collected gentle orphaned dogs. (Four of them waited in the shade for her, leaving only to greet visitors.)

-To my editor, who was going to print an all-male bathing beauty page, "over my dead body."

Do Business Where Business Is Being Done

One-Third of County's Income Goes to Taxes

Because of the upward turn in the economy in recent months, Charlevoix County families find themselves in a more favorable financial position.

After a long struggle with depression and inflation, during which the cost of living rose faster than their incomes did, the tide was turned in their favor.

Even though inflation is very much alive and continues to push prices upward, it is no longer as severe a problem as it was a year ago.

As a result, local families, bolstered by rising incomes, strong savings and a smaller than usual debt, have the wherewithal to launch a big buying surge.

After taking care of the four basic items in their budgets– taxes, food, clothing and housing – some 28 percent of their income, on average, is available to them for other spending.

This is based upon a study made by the Tax Foundation. It shows that taxes are the biggest item in most budgets. Most workers have to devote 2 hours and 39 minutes of their 8-hour day, one-third of the time, to pay their various Federal, state and local taxes.

In Charlevoix County, translating this to an annual basis and relating it to the average level of income locally, it amounts to $4,540 per family.

With taxes out of the wuy, the remainder of the 8-hour day is apportioned as follows by the Tax Foundation: for housing and household operations, 1 hour and 32 minutes, for food and beverages, 1 hour and 5 minutes, for transportation, 39 minutes, for clothing, 29 minutes, and, for medical care, 25 minutes.

That leaves a total of 1 hour and 11 minutes of the work-day, the proceeds of which may be used for discretionary spending. It may be for recreation and amusements, for education, for savings, for personal care or for luxuries in general.

Based upon the national study, the average family in Charlevoix County has nearly three-fourths of its income going for taxes, food, clothing and shelter. In terms of earnings in the local area during the past year, it is equivalent to $9,900 per family.

CEEA Funds Hit $816,708

Comprehensive Education and Employment Act funds totaling $816,708 have been spent in Charlevoix County since the program was initiated in 1974 Alton Shipstead, who heads the program in this area, told the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners at its meeting Wednesday night.

A total of $227,539 derived from Title II funds and $589,169 from Title VI are included in the total that included $675,596 in salaries und administration. Salaries were for the participants in the program.

Shipsteud said there would be additionul funding in the program but that it would be less than in the past.

He then advised the board regarding the CETA program and outlined its various titles.

He went on to say that further funds would be available to the county through the Upper Great Lakes Economic Development Administration.

It has three titles, he said, but is not to be confused with CETA. These funds would come through a new public works program and would be available through the local EDA office. The funds will be given on a first come first serve basis for underwriting public works programs such as building programs. Work must start on these projects 90 days after funds are received. Seventy percent will be available to local governments and 10 percent to the state.

Under Title II continuing job programs will receive funds to be used for payroll costs either for existing personnel, additional personnel or subsidizing payrolls.

Title III funds are available for sewage treatment programs and will be administered as in the past.

Regulations will be disbursed by mid-August. The amount of funds was not available.

Charlevoix's Woman Supports Sea Cadets

WANTED: SEVERAL ADULTS TO HELP WITH CHARLEVOIX TEENAGERS. EXPERIENCE NOT NECESSARY BUT HELPFUL. CONTACT Pat Whitley at 547-6106, evenings.

Mrs. Pat Whitley of Charlevoix didn't place this ad, but would have if she had thought of it.

The Charlevoix parent has been beating the bushes to find some interested adults to help her establish a U.S. Naval Sea Cadet Corps program.

"What we are trying to do is get enough people to help organize a local group for boys and girls."

The Cadet Corps program is a volunteer youth training program for young people 14 through 17 years old. Chartered in 1962, the Corps is sponsored by the Navy League of the United States and gets support from the Department of Navy.

By joining the organization, Sea Cadets are afforded the opportunity to train for the Seaman, Airman, Fireman and Construction ratings.

They are also given the opportunity to study in the various disciplines including ocean science engineering, Noval Officer preparatory courses, and medicine.

According to program officials, the objectives of the Sea Cadet program are:

–to develop in young men and women an interest and skill in seamanship and seagoing disciplines;

–to inculcate in Cadets an appreciation for the Navy's history, customs, traditions and the significance of a modern Navy on the Department of Defense team;

–to build in every Cadet a sense of patriotism, courage, self-reliance and confidence;

–to raise the prestige of a military career and increase the advancement potential of Cadets who may later elect to serve with the Navy.

To be eligible for the program, a youngster must have the approval of his parents, be between the ages of 14 and 17, and a full-time student recommended by his high school principal or counselor.

However, before a group can be started in Charlevoix, Mrs. Whitley says she needs some adult volunteer help.

"The people in lower Michigan are getting the advantage," she said.

"Kids entering the program in high school stand a better chance in the Navy when they get out."

After a boy or girl completes the program, one official says they stand a better chance to be appointed to Annapolis if they are interested, or into the NROTC program if their marks in high school are high, or they can go into the Navy or Coast Guard with the rate they attained in the Sea Cadets.

CHARLEVOIX HOSPITAL'S New Neonatal Intensive Care Center equipment.

Hospital Gets New Equipment

The equipment is one mobile unit with systems that make available for immediate use, examining lights, examining table, oxygen, suction, resusitation and warming lights which are automatically controlled by the baby's body temperature through the use of a temperature-sensitive probe tape to the infant's skin.

The equipment is usually kept in the delivery room and put into use when a baby is born. It is designed as an oper incubator providing total accessibility to the infant.

Purchase of the Neonatal unit was made possible by a gift of $1,500 from the Charlevoix County Chapter of the March of Dimes and another annonymous gift of $2,000. Total cost was $3,690.

Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Cornell of Horton Bay announce the engagement of their daughter, Diane Elizabeth, to Lloyd John Himebauch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Himebauch of Charlevoix.

The bride-to-be attended Macomb County Community College and is presently employed by the Charlevoix School sytem.

Himebauch is employed by the Bellinger Marine Service in Charlevoix.

The wedding will take place September 4 at St. Mary's Church.

New Artist Moves to Area

Charles (Chuck) Koucky is a new artist in the Charlevoix area.

He has opened up the shop he calls "The Crockery" on M-66 two miles south of Ironton, where he sells reduction-fired, wheel-thrown pottery of his own creation.

Unlike most potters, Chuck built the kiln in which he does the firing. It is larger than most kilns and is heated by gas and wood, the gas bringing the temperature up to the desired figure, then wood added to give the desired ash glaze.

His pieces are many and varied, including hanging flower pots, pitchers, bowls, jugs, casseroles, colanders and candle holders.

An honors graduate of Albion College where he studied art, Chuck "hit the road" for a while, as he puts it, before settling down in Charlevoix County. Besides pottery, he is interested in painting and photography, which he plans to pursue next winter.

In the meantime, he is busy working on the tree-stump bases he devised as tables and mixing his clay in a wringer washing machine.

In the future, if things work out right, Chuck hopes to fix up the old red barn on his property for use by other artists.

Honored?

The City of Charlevoix does not have a plaque honoring the man for whom it was named, but Cairo, Illinois does.

A reader has sent us a picture of a plaque in Cairo which reads in part:

"Pierre Francois Xavier de Charlevoix, a French Jesuit, reported as early as 1721 that (this) place at the confluence of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers would be a strategic location for settlement and fortification."

Plans for a Senior Citizens Driver Refresher course for residents of Charlevoix and Emmet county have been announced.

The course will be sponsored by the Friendship Center of Petoskey in conjunction with the 90th District Court George T. Lasater, Court Probation Officer, will serve as the instructor for the course which is scheduled to begin Sept. 23, 1976.

The actual relationship between age related deficits and driving performance is unclear. However, the presence of any or all of these does not imply that accident or violation rates will increase. Older drivers should thus be encouraged to evaluate their capabilities and assess their driving skills and confidence.

Among the changes that occur with older citizens are visual acuity such as changes in glare resistance, color perception, focusing ability, peripheral vision and hearing changes such as reaction time, perceptual changes and memory ability.

Statistics show that older drivers are involved more often in certain types of accidents or violations such as failure to yield the right-of-way, improper turns, stop sign violations are most hazardous for personal injury accidents at intersections.

Statistically, older drivers have better driving records in driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor offenses and are less likely to speed or to become involved in reckless or careless driving situations.

In addition to a review of new traffic laws with emphasis an sign, signal and pavement markings, there will be a review of rules relating to pedestrians, bicycles and motorcycles, practical emphasis on intersections, correct driving procedures on major highways, perceptual skills, residential, small town, shopping center, freeways and rural roads driving and under such conditions as rain, fog, snow, sun glare and darkness.

Additional information regarding the course will be made available at a later date.

Youngsters Prepare for Charlevoix's Horse Show

By BOB BELLAIRS

For most school age young people, this is just another carefree vacation week. But for about 50 Charlevoix County Youngsters, this is a week of intense preparation for the Charlevoix County 4-H Horse Show. This week will be equally hectic for the many parents & leaders who have volunteered their time to make the show a success.

The Charlevoix County 4-H Horse Show will be at 9:00 a.m., Saturday, August 7, at the Boyne City High School Athletic Field. Competition here will be keen because points scored at this show, plus points from the Spring meet held last June, will determine the 5 people who will represent Charlevoix County at the State 4-H Horse Show, which will take place at Michigan State University on August 24.

Five different classes will be judged at the 4-H show. They are: Showmanship at Halter, Stockseat Equitation, Western Pleasure, English Equitation, English Pleasure.

Each class will include competition by four age groups. They are: ponies, 13 years and under, 14 and 15 years, 16 to 18 years.

Two fun events will also take place during the show. All horses entering the show grounds must show proof of a negative coggins test for Equine Infectious Anemia.

While the spotlight will be on the neatly attired riders and their immaculately groomed mounts, many volunteers have donated hours of their time to make this show possible. They are: Ringmaster-Penny Laurie, Walloon Lake; Scorekeeper-Lisa Bergman, Charlevoix; Registrar-Kim Sell, Charlevoix; Scorecards-Valerie Peters, Charlevoix; Cards & Pins-Alice Heath, Bayshore, Ribbons-Margaret Clute, Boyne City; Announcer-Harvey Crozier Jr., Boyne City; Judge Selection-Jeanne Michaels, Charlevoix; Coggins Test Checker-Bob Bellairs, Charlevoix; and Ring set up- everybody.

The most important person in the show, of course, the judge. The judge for this show will be Cheanne Notestine of Petoskey.

The people competing in this event are all members of the five 4-H Horse Groups that are scattered throughout the county. The club names and leaders are: Charlevoix Wranglers - Jeanne Michaels & Mary Lou Shepard, Boyne Valley Highlanders - Margaret Clute, Jordan Valley Caballeros - Beverly Walker, Range Riders - Penny Laurie & Shirley Crozier, and North Bay Saddle Club - Alice & Tusco Heath.

These leaders from the nucleus of the Charlevoix County 4-H Horse Development Committee. This committee, through monthly meetings with Ed Rebman, County Extension Director, and Bob Bellairs, County 4-H Program Assistant, set the groundwork of rules and responsibilities for the county show and for other 4-H Horse activities.

The 4-H leaders and members extended an invitation to all area residents to come and see how these dedicated young people are working with their beautiful, well trained horses. There will be no admission charge.

Seniors Plan Picnic

The annual Senior Citizens picnic to be held at Whiting Park later this summer is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 19, Arthur Saworski of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging told the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners Wednesday night.

Those attending are asked to bring a dish to pass and their table service. Barbecued chicken prepared by Ed Rebman will be available.

Tickets will cost 50 cents in advance or $1.00 at the door. Non-senior citizens must pay $1.25.

More details of the picnic will be made available at a later date.

cluttering up every entrance, but do we want that?"

"Yes!"

There have been two other events that have taken longer to perform than the hanging of the hook for the macrame. Michelangelo took four and one-half years to paint the ceiling of the Sistine chapel and of course the Suez Canal took ten years to complete.

He spread the dropcloths, brought in extra help to assist with the measuring, cut a pattern for the hole and asked for complete silence while he drilled.

I know you'd love to hear his answer when I tell him this evening that the hook has to be moved over two feet so the plant will get full sun. So wherever you are...just raise your windows at 7 p.m.

FAITH TEACHES US TO TRUST GOD INSTEAD OF MAN

Many of us have had the unpleasant experience of depending too heavily on someone for help, with the result that the person whom we had trusted failed us at the crucial moment. Although the vast majority of people will accept a responsibility with the best intentions, they often become the victims of faulty memory, an overcrowded schedule, illness, financial or other difficulties of their own, or any number of unforeseen circumstances that prevent them from giving us the help we had counted on. In Church, you will learn to place an ever-increasing reliance on God rather than man for every kind of help, including the guidance you need in order to find your own solutions to many problems. You can depend on that.

The Ladies Fellowship met at the church Tuesday evening and heard a most interesting talk by Sandra Burry, who is a student at the Bible Baptist Church School in Lynchburg, Virginia. A group of one hundred and fifty students and several instructors spent several weeks this spring in Guatemala after one of the most disastrous earthquakes in the Western Hemisphere. Thousands died and were buried within their homes and roads were cut off to many villages. Air travel was the only way help could get to them. This student group helped in every way to care for the injured and build new homes and churches and ministered to the people so that the time will come when they will have a better understanding of the warnings given them before the devastating earthquakes. Sandra also showed the pictures she had taken when in Guatemala.

City Council Opts Out on Erber Sign

By MARSHA ROBINSON

Charlevoix City Council, convening Monday as a Zoning Board of Appeals, decided it was legally unable to grant Erber Auto Co.'s request for variance to put up a billboard sign on the corner of M-66 and U.S. 31.

It was the opinion of City Attorney Don Berlage that the sign ordinance is separate from the zoning ordinance in Charlevoix, and that the Board of Appeals may only grant varionce from the zoning ordinance.

"The only way you can give Erber relief is to amend your sign ordinance to permit 200 square foot billboards in the City of Charlevoix, on any piece of commercially zoned property," Berlage said.

In addition, the city attorney said that the language of the ordinonce tends to forbid any off-premise sign advertising.

Council took note of two existing off-premise advertising signs, one belonging to the Irish Boat Shop and the other to Grey Gables, as well as a sign at the Clark station which exceeds the 36 square foot limitation.

The ordinance committee, headed by Jeanine Wallace, will be investigating methods of enforcing the sign ordinance as well as conducting a survey of nonconforming signs in the city.

Council took the first step in bringing the city's own signs up to date by incorporating state of Michigan sign regulations into the traffic control ordinance.

The move leaves Charlevoix eligible for a matching grant from the federal and state government of $38,000 of which the city's share would be $3,800, to correct signing deficiencies.

Acting City Administrator Robert Wexstaff recommended odoption, saying that the city would eventually be forced to comply to new government regulations for standard signing, and the grant money might not be available in the future.

Council also adopted a five-year major street plan to comply with new state Highway department regulations.

The plan outlines work, such as street-widening, curbing, and changes in the parking allowed, on major streets if they are to remain major streets.

The state reimburses the city every year for street maintenance, with major streets receiving substantially more than those designated as minor.

The plan lists changes on a number of streets in town.

"Now it's up to us to prioritize," Wexstaff said.

City Council came out of executive session Monday night to approve contracts with McPhillips Flying Service and Joe McPhillips for the operation of the Charlevoix airport.

A four-year contract was approved naming McPhillips Aviation the fixed base operator of the airport, and a one-year contract approved naming Joe McPhillips its manoger.

Council hopes that with a one-year contract, it might have the leverage necessary to receive regular reports on income at the airport, said Councilman Joe Morris.

In other action at the airport, Council learned that a $3 per landing fee has come out of court-ordered negotiations to reach a settlement with Welke Aviation, Inc.

The city originally offered a $4 landing fee to begin negotiatons, and council members expressed vocal approval of the new tentative rate.

In other action, Council:

--Received a complaint concerning excess noise, lack of proper parking facilities and possible zoning violations from a neighbor of the Grey Gables restaurant, and promised to review the building permit issued for recent construction there.

--Heard Ray Wood introduce a proposal from the Airport Hangar Association for cooperative impruvements at the facility.

--Discussed the possibility of banning motorcycles from the waterfront parking lot because of the extensive damage being caused by their weight on kickstands.

--Announced Aug. 11, 7:30 p.m., for a meeting on zoning.

--Heard Mrs. Wallace request that items of discussion not formally acted upon during meetings be listed at the bottom of council's minutes as a reminder for follow-up ot the next meeting.

Slips

On several occasions I have used boat slips on Ferry Avenue beach and I had to ask children to remove themselves before I could start the motor on my boat. "No Swimming" signs should be posted for this area. I would also like to comment on the distastefulness of bare feet in restaurants. In fact, I personally feel that all restaurants and stores should have signs that say "No shoes, no shirt, no service."

Campgrouad

Charlevoix must be the pot and drug capital of the world. I camped last night ot Bell's Bay Campground. The drug activity must take place somewhere south of the campground on the road toward Fisherman's Island. All night long the traffic was unbelievable. Hundreds of cars racing up and down that road. I counted 54 going south from midnight to 1 a.m. and 52 going north from 1 a.m. to 2. I can't believe all those cars were just "riding around." Something is going on down there that does business only in the dark. Needless to say, I didn't get much rest in your otherwise fine place. I am: "a sleepless camper"

Beauty

People come to Charlevoix because of its natural beauty and facilities. Let's not clutter up the landscape with ugly signs and billboards. Barbara MacArthur

Question

This is a dumb question but, why take any given township in Charlevoix where there's several houses being built per year and the taxes on these houses range from 4 to $500 dollars per year because they are new houses, yet the taxes seem to go higher and higher. But you take this given township, the taxes from the new homes plus the taxes from the older homes would make a greater income, But, we never seem to have enough. We just wonder why? Even though there's more money coming in each year, the taxes keep going higher.

Thank God

Hello. Thank God for this beautiful Charlevoix County. I am so thankful to be living here. I enjoy the beautiful greenery and the lakes, but when you're downtown, and the resorters they sometimes treat you as second rate citizens. But, we enjoy the beauty of Charlevoix Co. Perhaps the great trucks that go on the Ellsworth Road, we do not enjoy so much, they take away because of the noise. All in all, thank God for such a beautiful place to live.

Cat

To whom it may concern. On July 27th, when I was taking out my garbage, a cat appeared at my step. I don't know whose cat it is. We want the cat, but we'd like to know how old she is. It's a female, grey with black and white tiger stripes. We don't want to have our name and number because we don't want more cats. We do want the one we have and would like to know how hold she is. If you would just answer back to the Courier Hotline, then we could start getting her shots at a certain age. Thanks to whoever dropped her off, she is very pretty and we like her very much.

Sumner Runs as Write-In

Incumbent Sheriff Philo E. Sumner has announced his intentions to seek re-election to the office he has held since June 1964 by becoming a write-in sticker candidate in the November election.

In announcing his decision, sheriff Sumner said that he had decided to become a write-in candidate after many people representing various segments of the county's population has approached him. Sumner said they urged him to make a last concerted effort to return to the office and to offer financial support for an all-out campaign to regain the office.

Sumner was one of three candidates for the office on the Republican ballot in the recent primary election and lost to George T. Lasater who won the nomination with a total of 1,472 votes to 1,281 for Sumner. Robert Neff, the third candidate, polled 1,066 votes.

In running as a write-in candidate, Sumner is hopeful of recouping the majority of the Neff vote which included 490 in the city of Charlevoix alone.

In announcing his decision, Sumner has asked county residents who are willing to support him in his efforts to re-gain the office in the General Election to meet at the community room of the First State Bank in Charlevoix at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

A spokesman for the "Re-Elect Sumner" campaign said a permanent committee would be formed and campaign strategy planned at this meeting. The spokesman said Republican supporters are urged to attend and lend their support to the campaign.

Nominee Lasater, when reached late Monday and asked to comment on the Sumner decision to run as a write-in candidate, said that he had just been told of Sumner's plans though he had been hearing rumors ever since the election. He added that he wasn't surprised, but had no comment to make at this time.

Neff, the third candidate for the office in the Primary election, was not available for comment.

It's just puppy love...

By PEG OHLE

It was almost a love fest last week when members of the board of the Charlevoix County Humane Society and several members met to hear and answer complaints from two former board members.

Lucille and Bob McKown of Boyne City reiterated the charges made earlier, over which they resigned from the board.

The charges centered around three points: neglect of animals in the shelter, overdrafts on the Society's checking account, and conflict of interest on the part of another board member.

The charges were answered one by one by members of the board to the apparent satisfaction of those present.

Feeding of the larger dogs (over which the complain was made) is up to the Animal Control officer or some other member of the Sheriff's Department.

These animals are fed and cages cleaned after six o'clock in the evening, so when Humane Society personnel go on duty the following afternoon, it is only natural that the cages are unclean and the dogs appear thirsty and hungry.

There were two over-drafts on the checking account. One was a bank error and the other a clerical error.

The conflict of interest charge was made because a member of the board is in the business of raising dogs and placed her business cards in the Humane Society office. These cards have now been removed.

County Commissioner Ralph Richardson appeared to say that the Board of Commissioners is now preparing a new working agreement between the County and the Humane Society so each group will know its duties, responsibilities and privileges.

Although board member Michael Gibbons and Society attorney had asked the McKowns to enter a motion to the board concerning their charges, none was made.

Hundreds Expected for Waterfront Art Fair

By FRAN MARTIN

Charlevoix will be host Saturday to the annual Waterfront Fair for Artists and Craftsmen which this year has reached the age of majority.

In observance of its 18th anniversary, the Waterfront Fair committee, headed by Ms. Suzi Reis, has assembled from among the more than 500 aspiring exhibitors, a select 159 entires. Among them will be paintings in all the media, ceramics, sculpture, jewelry, drawings and graphics.

Each year the Waterfront Fair features a special exhibit of an accepted art masterpiece. In recognition of this country's bicentennial, the committee asked for a painting by an American artist. The painting will be an oil done by an early 20th century artist, John Marin, entitled "Circus Forms" on loan from the Detroit Institute of Arts.

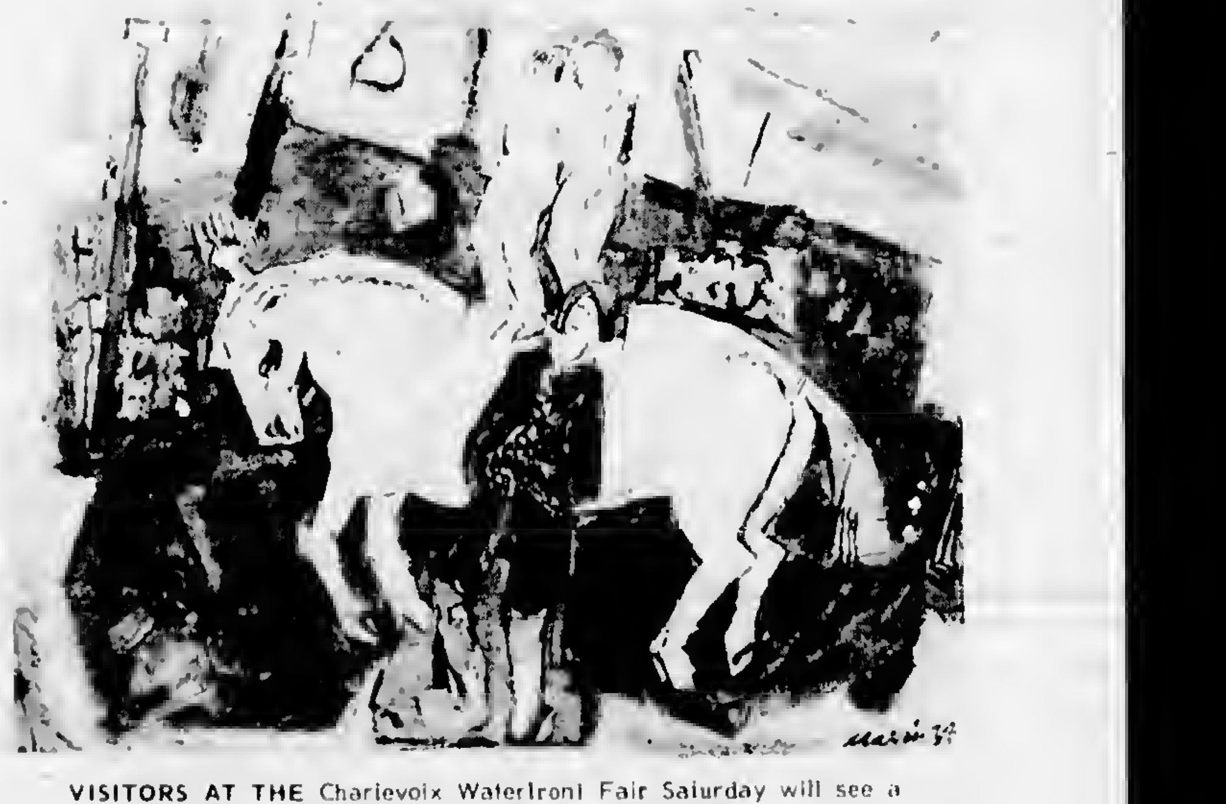
The 29" x 36¼" painting was selected for exhibit here by Dr. Frederick J. Cummings, Director, and Nancy Rivard, Curator of American Art, following the committee's request for a painting by a native artist.

Marin (1870-1953) was a native of Rutherford, N.J., who began painting landscapes in water colors at the age of 18 years. However, in the 1930's he turned to oils and to introducing figures into his paintings for the first time.

His oils are handled with the same swiftness and lightness and spontaneous movement he developed earlier in his watercolors. His images are built by using delicate touches and washes to create structures of colored planes.

A wide variety of art forms will be found at the Waterfront Fair. Among the most exciting of the new exhibitors will be Harry Greaver, Director of the Kalamazoo Institute of Art, who will be showing his watercolors.

The Waterfront Fair, sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, is headed by its own committee which receives entries, juries them and makes the final decision regarding exhibitors



VISITORS AT THE Charlevoix Waterfront Fair Saturday will see a special exhibit, "Circus Forms" an oil by a 20th century American artist, John Marin (1870-1953). The painting is on loan from the Detroit Institute of Arts.

City Administrator:

Analysis

By KEN WINTER

Charlevoix City Fathers are beginning to roll up their shirt sleeves and pour over applications for their chief executive's spot.

After some 15 months of not naming anyone permanent to the city administrator's position, city council has decided to accept the resignation of the acting administrator and find a permanent one.

The only question city fathers have to wrestle with, is what do they want the city administrator to do?

Observers close to the city political scene have expressed dissatisfaction with the office in recent years for one reason or another.

Most recently, they have said that the office has been weak in public relations both within and outside of city hall.

Department heads have complained about not being in the know and not really being allowed to plan for the growth and development of their departments.

Similarly, city councilmen have openly complained at public council meetings that they're not being kept informed or being briefed fully on subjects they have to make decisions about.

And the general public has commented on the lack of warm reception being given at the city's administrator's door step.

The question then is, what does the city council do to improve the situation. Obviously, through their actions, city fathers think one solution is replacing the personality holding the office.

Although this is possibly a pragmatic solution to the problem, the city could still find itself in the same predicament in a short time again.

City councilmen over the last few years have indicated their dissatisfaction with the office and have chosen to replace the personalites to remedy their unhappiness.

Yet in the process of making a choice, the council hasn't really provided the city administrator with a clear-cut idea of what they expect him to do.

The City of Charlevoix is somewhat comparable to a large corporation with its stockholders being the city residents, the board of directors being the city council, and the chief executive officer being the city administrator.

Although the City of Charlevoix does not have a goal of making a profit, for its stockholders, it does have an obligation to run and provide city services as efficiently as possible.

In order to accomplish this objective, the council, as the city's board of directors, needs to establish exactly how it wants this accomplished.

It is simply not enough to say they need a "professional manager," The council has to detail exactly what they envision their chief executive to be spending his time doing.

The council should list his responsibilities and explain how they expect their policies to be carried out.

If the council wants their city administrator to background items brought before the council, then this should be clearly written out.

If the council wants their top executive to be seeking out grant monies, their wishes should be explained.

Charlevoix is too large a corporation to be without direction, goals or objectives.

The city council needs to sit down and decide among themselves what they want the city administrator's role to be.

Although there is no problem in getting people to come to Charlevoix the Beautiful, it does seem useless for both the new administrator and the city if no clear maps are charted out.

Working for a political body is no easy task because there will never be full accord on most city projects. However, there must be some simple characteristics and qualifications desired in a city administrator.

Obviously, a city administrator needs to be:

–Good in public relations

–An engineer, or at least versed in the field

–A leader

–Familiar with finance

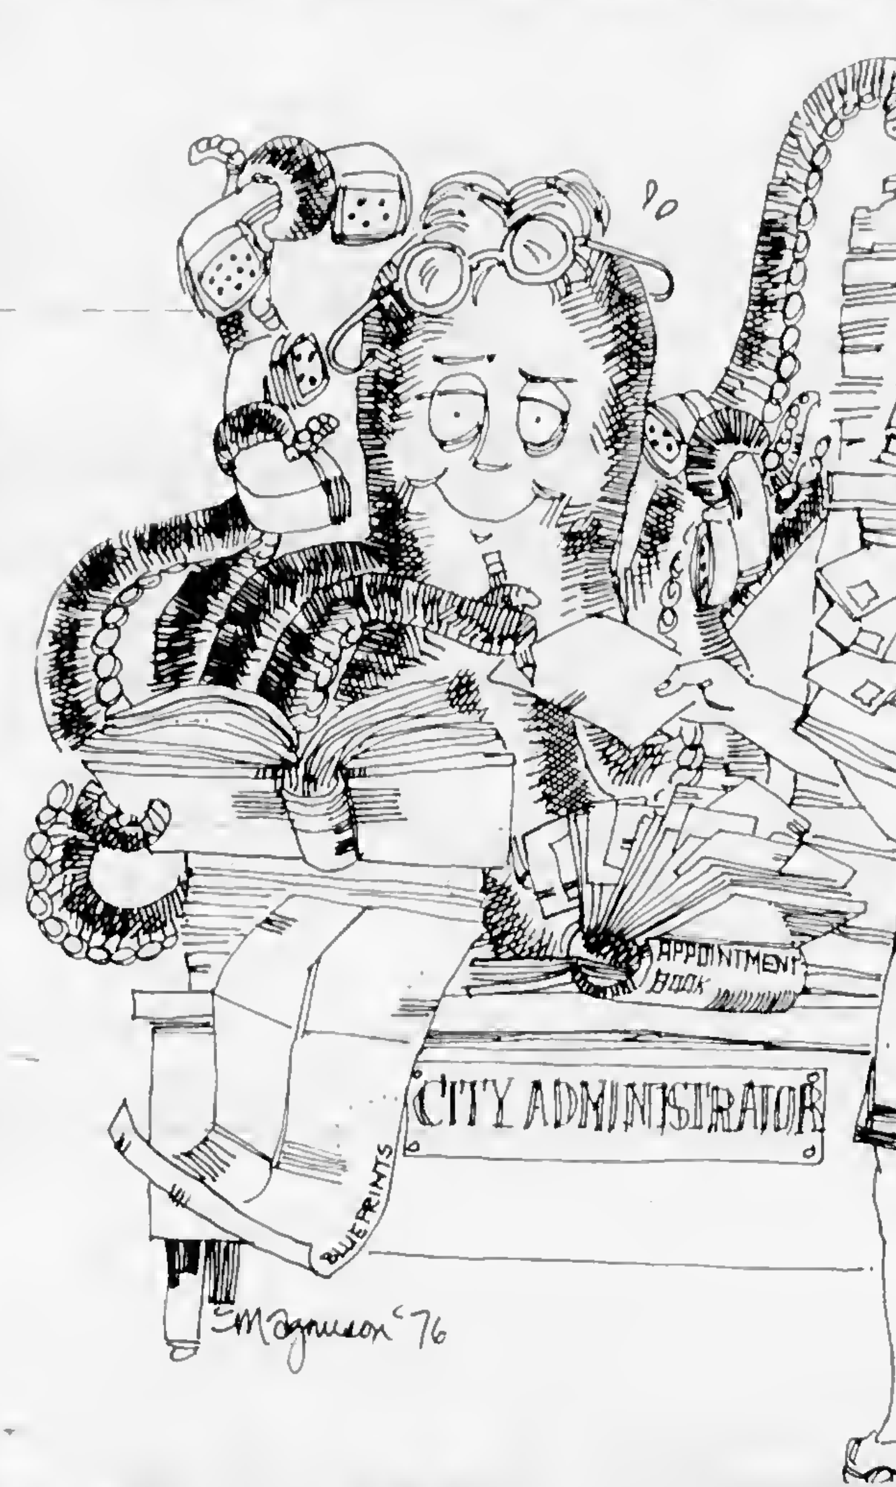
–Experienced in city government

–Knowledgable in a half dozen other areas.

And once the council has found someone with those qualifications, the applicant should in turn ask the council for a job description.

Unless the council can come up with some specifications, the applicant need not negotiate any farther because he will find himself in the same muddle his predecessors have.

City Fathers Start Search for Top Executive Replacement



DAN TOLLAS and Lori Bolt are recipients of this year's scholarships awarded by the Arts Committee of the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair.

Art Committee Awards 2 Scholarships

Lori Bolt and Dan Tollas, both of Charlevoix, were recently awarded scholarships by the Arts Committee of the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair.

The scholarships are worth $500 each and will be used for further study at the Cleveland Institute of Art, where Lori is a sophomore majoring in textiles and Dan is a junior majoring in painting.

Both Lori and Dan will have works on display at the Waterfront Arts Fair this Saturday. Lori was accepted as an exhibitor on the basis of being a new scholarship winner, and Dan was accepted by submitting slides of his work to the jury.

Mrs. Thomas Pointer is chairman of the Arts Committee which selected the scholarship winners.

Vessels Must Use White Lights

Vessels at anchor between sunset and sunrise must display the required white anchor light the U.S. Coast Guard has warned following a recent inspection which revealed that many boats, especially at Harbor Springs on Little Traverse Bay, were in violation of this requirement.

All vessels under 150 feet anchored in other than a designated anchorage, are required by Federal Law, Title 33, U.S. Cose, Section 25 (a) to carry forward, where it can be seen, but at a height no more than 20 feet above the hull, a white light constructed so as to show a clear, uniform and unbroken light all around the horizon at a distance of at least a mile. Federal law provides a $500 penalty for violation of the statute.

At Charlevoix a special anchorage has been designated in Round Lake. However, if such an anchorage is necessary a request may be made to the U.S. Department of Transportation which will conduct an investigation to determine if one is needed. At the present time there is no such designated area at Harbor Springs therefore an anchored boat not displaying the required white light between sunset and sunrise is in violation of Federal Law.

Chief R. E. Freeis, Officer in Charge of the Charlevoix Lifeboat Station, has indicated another such inspection of area anchorages will be made in the near future including the Harbor Springs area. At that time citations will be issued to those not in compliance.

Anyone having any questions relating to this or any relating to navigation may call the Charlevoix Lifeboat Station, 547-2541.

Democrats Plan Convention

The Charlevoix County Democrats will meet at the community room of the city hall in Charlevoix for their county convention Martin Paul, county chairman, has announced. The convention will open at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Purpose of the meeting will be to elect delegates to the state convention to be held in Detroit Aug. 28-29. Delegates will name candidates for the Supreme Court, State Board of Education and the boards of state universities.

Vacancies exist in all Charlevoix county precincts for the offices of precinct delegates. These offices will be filled at the convention so all Democrats are urged to attend.

The regular August meeting will follow the convention.

New Life Singers Come to Town

A concert of contemporary religious music will be presented by the New Life Singers of Harbor Beach in East Park on Tuesday, August 17 at 8 p.m.

The local appearance of the interdenominational group is being sponsored by the United Methodist church. In case of rain the concern will be moved to the church auditorium in State street.

Six years ago a group of high school students from various churches in Harbor Beach got together under the direction of Judy Scott to present a musical program of modern church music. Their program was so well received and the singers enjoyed their fellowship so much that the New Life Singers was established as a permanent group. They have toured extensively in the midwest.

Charlevoix Must Start Planning For City Growth

Just how long will this community remain Charlevoix the Beautiful? The beauty is in the eyes of Charlevoix City Council and how long that beauty lasts rests on the shoulders of the City Fathers.

Almost like a broken record during the last two years, we have sounded off about the need for a revised zoning ordinance or more recently the need for a city planning commission.

Yet, despite all the clamor and furor, we have yet to see the city come through with either.

We are very concerned about the continued threat to this community and even more worried about the city's lack of official action.

Charlevoix, like many other Northern Michigan communities, is indeed unique. It has the natural resources and friendly attitude missed by many communities for many years.

Yet, a sleepy giant lurks around this community and much of what has so long been a drawing card for Charlevoix, may end up being its demise.

Through its steadily growing year 'round population, it has become a focal point for small industry, tourist-oriented businesses and retail developments which traditionally cluster around large groups of people.

On one hand it is necessary that Charlevoix maintain those resources which make it unique. Without them, after all, the entire quality of life here would diminish. On the other hand, it is important that Charlevoix expand its retail base so that it can maintain its position as the business and commercial center of this region.

In a nutshell, Charlevoix must have development. But the development must be of high quality.

Quality can be insured to a degree through proper administration of zoning ordinance provisions.

Unfortunately, Charlevoix's existing ordinance is in desperate need of revising and modernizing.

The city held a public hearing on a proposed ordinance some time ago, yet the public has yet to see anything as the result of that meeting.

The existing ordinance is forcing the city to take the temptation of making exceptions and not sticking to its plan of growth and development.

But a zoning ordinance alone cannot always do the whole job. It provides a sound base, but amendments and changes are often required to reach out into the problem areas which accompany rapid growth.

For this reason, we again strongly urge the mayor and city council to do two things once they revise the city's existing ordinance.

First, we support any efforts they may take toward reestablishing some type of planning commission or "clearing house" to review proposed changes within the city.

For nearly two years, the city has found itself without a planning group to review the city needs and advise the city council how to react toward amendments put before them.

Ever since the joint commission made-up of township and city officials – fell apart, the city has not filled the void.

We are truly concerned with the council's ability to keep abreast of the city's needs and wonder how long it will be before they relinquish some of the responsibility to a group that could devote more of its energies toward it.

There have been too many decisions made by the council that cause us to question their decision-making ability without having the proper background and perspective of the problems involved.

Having a planning commission is an important step beyond zoning in the proper administration of quality development. Equally important is the establishment of site plan review.

Site plan review is a system under which city planners would be able to control the direction of a development once it has cleared the zoning hurdle.

It provides a legal foundation from which planners can enforce all phases of a development. It will insure, among other things, the safest possible organization of access routes to main city streets.

It guarantees that developers provide certain buffer areas and that other construction steps are taken according to the plan presented prior to a rezoning request.

Under the current ordinance, city officials are nearly powerless to force changes once zoning is approved. All they can do is hope that developers adhere to their original plans following that acquisition of proper zoning.

It is our feeling that only after these three things are accomplished--revised zoning ordinance, establishment of a city planning commission and site plan review--will Charlevoix be able to remain Charlevoix the Beautiful.

We encourage the city to take immediate action on these matters.

Skiers Say Thanks

Dear Sirs:

The Pine Lake Ski Club would like to take this opportunity to thank the Charlevoix community for their support and encouragement of the water ski show. The audience was magnificent and we were proud and pleased to perform for them.

A special thanks go to Tim and Dale of the Charlevoix Sheriff Department for patrolling the area and keeping boat wakes to a minimum, the Charlevoix Fire Department for the use of their generator, and the various members of the Charlevoix, Boyne City, and East Jordan business communities for their financial and advertising support. We would also like to thank this paper, the Petoskey News-Review, and WVOY for their advertising efforts.

As our program indicated, this was our first show and, as such, we apologize for the delays between acts. We hope to return next year with a bigger, and better program. However, we need your support and talent. Anyone wishing to join the club should contact: Steve Buttrick-536-7050, Keith Bailey-536-7431, or Laurie Lounsbury-547-4177.

Sincerely,
The Pine Lake Water Ski Club

Park or Not to Park

It's easy to see why the city doesn't enforce its "No Overnight Parking" policy on cars left in its brand new parking lot overnight. If they pulled out these cars the lot would be EMPTY, or in other words it would be devoid of cash paying customers. (I wonder why?)

Since I am fairly interested in downtown parking I have tried to follow the progress of the building of this lot, and from my point of view, which could be biased, this lot at the present parking fee does nothing for the downtown area. As a matter of fact it compounds the problem of parking congestion and as a result, forces visitors with cash in their pockets away from the very area it was intended to serve.

Who in their right minds would pay seventy five cents to park for an hour or so? I know everything costs more today, as evidenced by the increase in my property taxes, however I don't think the city should perpetuate the trend by going overboard on the price to park a car.

Three of the six cars in the lot at this writing (31 July) have been parked there continuously since the first day the new gates were put into operation (24 July). It is really a good deal for people going to Beaver Island, for a couple weeks vacation, to be able to park for seventh five cents for two weeks or so.

A bead count over the first week of operation of this lot isn't anything to write home about. Excluding Saturday 24 July, which was Venetian Day the maximum number of cars in the lot at any one time was twelve and today, Saturday 31 July, there are six cars, four of which have been in the lot continuously for a week. (Beaver Islanders?)

Now I read in the paper where the city fathers have published a new edict relative to overnight parking, but so far I haven't seen it enforced. Perhaps it is to be effective during the summer of 1977 or perhaps the edict will turn out to be a paper tiger.

Since the city fathers have now taken care of the Beaver Islanders so adequately I hope next year they will see fit to take care of some of the local taxpayers.

A Farewell to Frills

Despite pleadings by the press and from the pulpit, Detroit voters went to the polls last week and soundly defeated a request for five additional mills for school operation.

Of course, it was a foregone conclusion that the millage would fail, although voters were warned that competitive sports would go out the window without the additional money.

They also were told by the school board that 15 schools would have to close and 1,100 teachers would be turned loose upon an already glutted teacher market, but it didn't do any good. Detroiters aren't about to cough up another five mills for anything right now — even schools.

Meanwhile, sports enthusiasts around Michigan are left standing with their mouths open at the spectacle of the state's largest school system not being able to field a football team or a basketball squad.

Holy Moses! We certainly have fallen upon evil times when we can no longer afford to support our high school jocks.

Of course, the lost millage also will mean cuts in the basic educational program. You can't lop off 15 schools and 1,100 teachers without causing ripples throughout the system — ripples like crowded classrooms, shorter school days and a general reduction in the quality of education.

But parents don't go out and march and hold protest meetings when academics is threatened. Those heart-warming spectacles are reserved only for athletics, which, admittedly, plays an even more important role in Detroit than it does elsewhere in the state. Among Detroit's ghetto blacks, athletic prowess sometimes is a youngster's only ticket to a higher education and a good life in the suburbs.

But there is no way Detroiters could have come up with the needed millage without posing a severe hardship on the residents.

Sure, I've read all about how General Motors and Ford are having banner years and will probably break all existing production and sales records before Christmas.

And I know both General Motors and Ford both chalked up profits of $900 million and $400 million respectively in the second quarter. But that doesn't mean the little guys are sharing in the new prosperity.

I am convinced that the average resident in the Motor City is no better off financially than we northern Michigan hillbillies, despite the big wages in the auto plants. In the first place, not everyone in Detroit builds automobiles. In the second place, Detroit is still years away from full employment — if that elusive goal will ever again be possible.

Nationally, the unemployment rate is creeping up again (7.8 per cent in July) and some neighborhoods in Detroit are double, triple, even quadruple that—even with today's affluence.

At this juncture, most school-watchers in outstate Michigan are keeping an eye on Lansing to see if the state will move to take Detroit schools off the financial hook. I can assure you that any preferential treatment of the Motor City will raise a hue and cry around the state that will shatter the capitol dome.

Perhaps, in today's grab and gimme society, a basic education is all we can afford for our kids, with all the frills, sports and elective courses going by the board. Only time will tell.

Of all the styles the United States has to offer, it seems incongruous that "jeans' would capture the imagination of young Russians.

It has been rumored jeans are capitalistic decadence, moralistically hostile to the socialist way of life and make men and women sartorially equal.

If any of that means you can't cough in them, they're right.

A pair of jeans aren't what I would recommend as a friendly hand across the sea. You can't build a relationship for lasting peace on something that shrinks three inches around the waist, two inches in one leg, three inches in the other, fades all over the towels, and has to be washed 287 times before you can sit in them.

It's the only thing in the last 200 years the Russians don't lay claim to having invented. That should tell you something.

Frankly, my sympathy goes out to the Russian mother whose child brings home his first pair of American jeans.

"What are they?" she asks.

"They're dzhinsys, Mama."

"How much did you pay for them?"

"Fifty rubles."

"FIFTY RUBLES! That's 65 American dollars. For a pair of work overalls your father changes out of before he comes into the house!"

"But Mama, all the comrades are wearing them."

"What else do they do besides stand in the corner by themselves?"

"I'll get you a pair, Mama, and you'll see how comfortable they are."

The next afternoon, Mama is so comfortable she can barely breathe. From the crotch to the waistband, the jeans measure six inches. Mama measures twelve inches. Her blouse pops out of the jeans every time she clears her throat. When she walks, her legs sound like the German army marching into Poland.

"Sit down, Mama," suggests her son.

"I am sitting," she says. "And you say everyone in America is wearing them?"

"Yes, it makes them feel independent and free."

As her gripper pops open, Mama frowns. "Maybe we underestimate the Americans. Maybe they're tougher than we think."

If it Fitz

Anything for Tradition

For the Fitz family, it has become a tradition to return to Port Huron for the start of the famous Mackinac sailboat race.

For me, as the only son in the family, the big weekend has developed into a tradition within a tradition. That is, it is not only traditional that I be there for the race. It is also traditional that I never see the race.

My father died several years ago, so there is no one but me to pass on the family name and the varied wisdoms which he attached to it.

My oldest of four sisters, Terrible Jean, tried to horn in on my pass-on privilege by marrying a Fitzgerald, but that doesn't count. In fact, it only confused a lot of people.

Terrible Jean and I were both a long time getting married. As we approached our 30th birthdays, still single, the pressure from our mother became intense. She wanted us to get out of the house and get wed. She was afraid she'd never have grandchildren, and she was also afraid she'd never have anyone in our bedrooms who paid rent.

Terrible Jean was the first to falter. The confusion came when her engagement was announced in the local newspaper. When some of her friends read she was marrying a guy of the same name, they went into incest shock.

"Those poor kids got so sick of being nagged by their mother, they are marrying each other," someone said.

It wasn't true, of course, and I still feel guilty about not returning my half of the wedding gifts.

But I digress. I was talking about Dad and the family's Mackinac tradition. He lived by the St. Clair River and Lake Huron all of his life. Over 40 Port Huron-to-Mackinac races practically splashed him. But he never looked at one.

His explanation was simple: "I can't get excited about a race that begins here on Saturday and ends 300 miles away next Tuesday."

This is the tradition to which I was born, and to which I remain faithful. The start of the Mackinac race is a thrill for the participants, for sure. But for the audience far away on shore, there is more excitement in watching a three-legged race at a Kiwanis picnic.

It wasn't easy for me to avoid seeing the race start this year. Living in Detroit there is a crazy insurance man named Bob Adams who owns a huge tugboat. He is also a native of Port Huron and he used to belong to the neighborhood mafia which was led by Terrible Jean who was later portrayed in the movie by Marlon Brando.

Adams thinks it is great fun to pile all of his friends onto the tug and chug out into the lake where the race starts. Terrible Jean enjoys this seven-hour outing to the incredible extent of continually jumping off the third deck with a great whoop, thus splashing fish onto cars passing overhead on the Blue Water Bridge.

When I refused Adams' invitation, pleading lost barnacles, Terrible Jean was quick to call me a big sissy. This is the same thing she called me 45 years ago when we played follow the leader and I refused to follow her into the French Foreign Legion.

I'll tell you, these Mackinac family reunions can be a traumatic experience for a sensitive man who still nurses the scars of a childhood spent with four sisters, one mother, no brothers, and a father who had sense enough to be a traveling salesman. The biggest surprise of my teen years was to be drafted and learn that Adolph Hitler wasn't a woman.

So, if the race bores me, and my sisters abuse me, why do I show up in Port Huron every year at Mackinac time?

For the spectacle.

I don't mean the spectacle of white sails on blue water. I mean the spectacle of my four sisters and their various husbands at the same party, boisterously reliving old sins and falling hilariously into new ones, trying mightily to outdo each other in their efforts to embarrass me, the only gentleman in the clan.

This year's prize went to Bill, husband of Terrible Jean, who set the fashion pace at the before-race dance.

When he was ready to leave, he had trouble finding his own windbreaker. He tried on 10, while taking off none, and appeared prepared to break the biggest wind.

Someone pointed out he was wearing the layered look, currently stylish, and he began to model it by shedding it, with a drum roll for each shed, and a cymbal crash poised for skin.

But Terrible Jean descended upon him like a November squall. Ten windbreakers were Kleenex, and Bill disappeared in a magnificent swoosh, never to be seen again. He may have been the first boat into Mackinac.

There are more dangerous things than having Terrible Jean for a sister. I am certainly glad our mother frowned on incest.

Meet Charlevoix

Gary Petitis

Gary Pettis is one of the Charlevoix young people working under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program this summer. He is employed by the City in the Dockmaster's office. This week the Courier talks with him about his job and Charlevoix Harbor.

COURIER: Where are you in school?

PETTIS: I'm a senior at Charlevoix High School.

COURIER: What are you going to do when you graduate?

PETTIS: I'm going to Ferris to study pharmacy.

COURIER: Who else works here with you?

PETTIS: Two college students, Jim Ance and Patti Hogan. I can work only 28 hours a week under CETA so I work four hours a day seven days a week.

COURIER: What are your duties?

PETTIS: I check in boats, collect fees, answer questions and a lot of other things.

COURIER: How many boats can Charlevoix Harbor accomodate?

PETTIS: We have 32 slips and a sea wall on which a few more boats can be anchored.

COURIER: How large a boat can you handle?

PETTIS: Up to 75 feet.

COURIER: How long are they permitted to stay?

PETTIS: We are flexible. Right now we have four or five who are here for the summer. No matter how long they stay, they pay the daily rate.

COURIER: What are the rates?

PETTIS: During the summer they are $2.25 for boats under 20 feet, $4.50 for boats between 20 and 30 feet, $6.75 for boats 30 to 40 feet, $9.00 for boats 40 to 50 feet, $11.50 for boats 50 to 60 feet and $15.50 for boats 60 feet and over.

COURIER: Do you take docking reservations in advance?

PETTIS: No, we operate on a first-come first-served basis.

COURIER: What facilities other than docking does Charlevoix Harbor have?

PETTIS: We have gasoline and diesel fuel, water, electricity, restrooms and showers, haul-out facilities and holding tank pump-out facilities.

COURIER: When a boat registers, what kind of information do you take?

PETTIS: The name of the owner, length of boat, make of boat (power or sail), registration number (federal or state), home port, last port of call, destination, number of people aboard, departure date and time, length of stay (days) and fee paid.

COURIER: What are some of the home ports in your registration book?

COURIER: Do you ever get any foreign boats?

PETTIS: Once in a while, mostly from Canada.

COURIER: Do you have more power boats or more sail boats?

PETTIS: More power boats.

COURIER: I see you list the names of the boats and the slips they're in on your blackboard. What are some of them?

PETTIS: A few of the more interesting names are Chimera, Naked Option, Victoria V, Mahlia, Low Bidder, and Run for Your Life.

COURIER: Is the harbor always full?

PETTIS: Usually. Sometimes there are some spaces after people leave in the morning, but it fills up in a hurry.

COURIER: Do you refer people to other docking facilities if you're filled up?

COURIER: What do boaters do on a day when they can't get out because of the weather?

PETTIS: They look around town and visit back and forth.

COURIER: What are some of the problems you have on your job?

PETTIS: Well, some of the people get very unhappy when we don't have a vacant slip. Also, they keep leaving with our restroom and shower room keys, even though they pay a $5.00 deposit on them.

COURIER: Do the boaters ever invite you aboard?

PETTIS: I've been invited to visit and have a tour of a boat. I've also been invited to water ski.

August Named Ostomy Month

August has been proclaimed Ostomy Recognition Month by Executive Declaration by Rev. William G. Milliken.

The Straits Area Ostomy Association, one of 12 in Michigan, is taking this opportunity to acquaint people with the association and its purpose.

The association is composed of ostomates who voluntarily provide mutual aid, moral support and education to other ostomates and to the public. Ostomy surgery, for the benefit of those not acquainted with the expression, is required when a person has lost the normal function of the bowel or bladder due to birth defect or disease, such as cancer.

A complete rehabilitation to normal living is of prime importance to the ostomate and his or her family. It is at this point that the Ostomy Association moves into the picture at the request of the physician.

Personal contact with members at meetings has proven an invaluable experience in learning about ostomy. It offers a wide range of programs through talks by medical personnel, displays of ostomy products, newsletters, in-service training programs and panel discussions on television and radio.

Regular meetings of the association are held the third Sunday of every month at 2:00 p.m. at a designated place in the area it embraces. All interested persons, especially doctors, nurses and medical assistants as well as ostomates and their families are invited to attend. The August meeting will be held at the community room of the Gaylord State Bank at 2:00 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 15. In the Charlevoix area, further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. Dan Houser at 582-6848, Andrew Sanderson at 347-9572, Mrs. Marvin Loomer at 547-6842, Mrs. David Thurston at 547-6262, Mrs. John Clarke at 347-9173 or Rex Chapman at 732-9862.

FAITH LEADS US OUT OF THE MAZE OF SUPERSTITION

Whenever we are scheduled for a Friday the 13th, the thought of it recalls all the traditional fears, bugaboos and omens of bad luck such as black cats, broken mirrors, etc., as well as their good luck antidotes in the form of horseshoes, four leaf clovers, etc., many of little known origin, that have persisted throughout the ages. However, as people turned away from superstition and toward faith in God, the truth about their destiny began to emerge - that their good fortune did not depend on any charms or circumstances, but on God's love and guidance. You too can learn the truth about superstitions such as Friday the 13th at the Church of your choice, and Sunday the 15th would be a very good time to start.

Wednesday Relaxing

By Marsha Robinson

Anyone who has spent anytime gazing across Lake Charlevoix in the summertime is familiar with the Charlevoix Yacht Club's Wednesday night races.

It looks easy. The wind just takes those spinnakers up, the boats just glide across the water . . .

Aboard the Rascal Wednesday night, the crew joked beforehand about how Bill Kinefect would receive the Captain Bligh award at the end of the season for jumping up and down on the deck more than any other captain in the fleet.

After the race they talked of burning the big star sail that had proved so woefully inadequate and had cost them the lead they'd earned with a perfect start.

During the race, however, there was no time for chatter. Everything that had to be said was said in clipped sentences, usually shouted; about the air, the location of rival boats, future course and tactics, and while Captain Kinefect wasn't exactly jumping up and down, it was quite clear when he wanted something done, and that was now.

There are 14 boats in the fleet. Three of them in the A division, the Rascal, the Peregrine and the Marvelous, run a nip and tuck race across the waves, and that means hard sailing.

Hard, but beautiful and fun, too.

It is interesting to note that all of the 60 spaces open in the Yacht Club's sailing classes were filled in registration last weekend.

Charlevoix Swimming Program May Save Someone's Life

By PEG OHLE

Most people think that boys and girls who grow up in a lake region know how to swim.

That's not true. The availability of water does not make a swimmer. Most children need lessons to learn how to swim and all too often such lessons are not available.

However, in Charlevoix this summer some 300 boys and girls from age three to older teen-age are taking swimming lessons under the auspices of the Charlevoix Recreation Department.

Each day, Monday through Friday, there are classes at Ferry Avenue Beach for those who want (or whose parents want them) to learn the fundamentals of swimming and swimming safety.

Organized into classes by age and ability, there are beginners, advanced beginners, intermediates, swimmers, junior life savers and senior life savers. They learn the basic strokes – sidestroke, front and back crawl, back stroke and breast stroke. They take their first haltenly cautious dives from the dock and find out that swimming strokes work better with fingers together rather than with spread hands.

They also learn to respect the lake for its changeableness in depth and waves and temperature. They find out about life-saving devices from ring buoys to mouth-to-mouth resusitation.

The classes are inexpensive, too, if a price can be put on learning a potential survival skill like swimming. It costs a child living in the city of Charlevoix $3.00 for the seven-week course and an entire family only $8.00 to participate in the program.

Individual and family rates for those living outside the city are $5.00 and $13.00.

Charlevoix Recreation Director "Ike" Boss is proud of the swimming program, not only because of the number of local young people it is serving, but because it is something Charlevoix did not have when he was growing up.

"I didn't learn to swim until I went away to college," Boss says.

"I never had a swimming lesson because there weren't any."

Ferry Avenue Beach is the best in the area on which to teach swimming, Boss points out.

"It's not rocky and we have lots of sand."

There is also a wide expanse of green grass for children to play on before and after their swimming lessons.

Kim Mahoney and Kit Lieberman are teaching the swimming classes this year. In addition, Jill Washburn is giving her time to instruct some three- and four-year olds

Danish Visitor

"He's spending the summer in Charlevoix to polish his English" was how Glenn Kenney introduced the family's guest for the summer; Erik Pedersen of Ringkoebing which is located on the west coast of the story book country of Denmark.

Kenney went on to say that one might have a little trouble understanding the visitor.

He needn't have bothered for the 26-year-old Dane, a former exchange student in the United States, who is now majoring in languages with the thought of teaching English on the college level, speaks flawless English with only a slight accent.

The Kenneys' son, Richard, who is now associated with his father in business, met Pedersen when he was a guest in the Pedersen home in Denmark as an exchange student one summer while still in high school. The following year young Pedersen came to this country as an exchange student, living with a family in Iowa.

Having studied Latin, German and English in the Danish schools, he decided to become an English teacher after visiting this country and has attended prep school and the University of Aarheers from where he will receive a degree just short of a doctorate which is necessary to teach on the college level.

How does he like American slang and colloquialisms? "I don't allow myself to learn them though I have learned what most of them mean" was his answer.

Pedersen will leave Charlevoix later this month to visit his American family in Iowa before returning to his studies at the university where, he says, he must study for more years than a doctor or a lawyer in order to teach English.

Railroads Still Hold a Spark of Life

By KEN WINTER

MACKINAW CITY—Twenty-four-year-old 'Cap' Pinkerton smiles smugly when you ask him about how he got interested in railroads.

The smooth talking, Madison Avenue-dressed bachelor plans on running his own railroad someday.

Although he has no title, Charles A. Pinkerton III works for the Detroit and Mackinac Railway Company – one of Michigan's only profitable railroads. Coincidentally, the head of the company is Charles A. Pinkerton, Jr., his father.

"I've always enjoyed railroads," Pinkerton said, while sitting in one of his father's latest creations—a refurbished club car that along with a dining car is available for charter through a new D & M service.

Pinkerton sat fingering an ice-filled drink glass last Thursday and smoking a cigarette as he filled in for his father, fielding reporters' questions about the D & M.

Pinkerton and the D & M Board of Directors were hosting a special "V.I.P." luncheon aboard to show off the company's new renovated dining car and remanufactured Bicentennial locomotive. Mackinaw City was the third of four whistle stops being made through Northern Michigan.

The train also stopped at Tawas City, Alpena and Gaylord.

Besides showing off the company's new Alco 2,000-horsepower diesel engine, club and dining cars, the D&M announced its take over of the Chief Wawatam car ferry across the Straits of Mackinac.

The railway company will be operating the Chief Wawatam, a steel ferry placed into service in October 1911.

The ferry, owned by trhe Mackinac Transportation Company, will be operated between Mackinaw City and St. Ignace under a lease contract with the State of Michigan. The service had previously operated by the Soo Line and Penn Central.

Pinkerton says his company will try to maintain present service with no major changes. The ferry carries primarily wood products.

Pinkerton, a native of Tawas City, will become president of the ferry operation.

Asked why his father's short-line railroad has been so successful, Pinkerton says its partly because it is still small enough for one person to be familiar with its operations.

"We have a closely knit group of customers," he said.

"We know the people around here."

The D&M handled some 155,385,000 ton miles of freight in 1975, over the 400 miles of track it operates between Mackinaw, Gaylord, Bay City and Tawas.

The line handles everything from lumber paper products and agricultural produce to gravel and concrete products.

The D&M was the last major railroad to be built into the north country. Its name is misleading since it never reached either Detroit or mackinaw City until just recently.

Railroad historian Willis F. Dunbar says the railroad originated in the gala of narrow-gauge lumber railroads around Alpena that were consolidated as the Detroit, Bay City and Alpena Railroad in 1883.

Prominent in the early affairs of the enterprise was Hussell A. Alger, Governor of Michigan from 1885 to 1887 and later Secretary of War in President McKinley's cabinet.

After Alpena's record cut of timber came in 1889 and the Panic of 1893, the railroad went into the hands of a receiver. Its assets were then purchased by a new corporation, the Detroit and Mackinac Railroad Company, formed in 1893.

Like many railroads of its day, the D&M advertised about the attractions of the north.

In 1901, for example, it ran a special excursion train, to attract industrialists.

Obituary

Mrs. P.R. Ross

Funeral services for Mrs. P.R. (Phoebe E.) Ross, 87, former local resident who died Thursday at Mercy Hospital in Cadillac, were held Monday at the Winchester Funeral Home. The Rev. Raymond Giffin officiated. Interment was in Brookside cemetery.

Mrs. Ross had been in ill health since 1969 and because of this had lived with relatives in Central Lake and in nursing homes away from Charlevoix.

Born in Charlevoix March 18, 1889, the former Phoebe E. Smith was married to Mr. Ross in Charlevoix in 1906 and had always resided here. She managed the dining room at the Belvedere Golf Clubhouse for 31 years prior to her retirement. Mr. Ross preceded her in death in September 1968. She was a member of the First Congregational church and its Mary Brewster circle. She also was active in the Charlevoix Rebekah lodge having served in the various offices on the local and district levels.

She is survived by two sons, Lyle of Boyne City and Franklin of Brandon, Wis.; two daughters, Mrs. Mary Jane Johnston of Sanford and Mrs. David (Betty) Cole of Cadillac; 10 grandchildren; eight great grandchildren and two sisters, Mrs. Marion Clark and Mrs. Arthur Knowles of Central Lake.

Paul Woll

Committal services for a former resident, Paul L. Woll, 33, who died recently at Seattle, Wash., were held Monday at Brookside cemetery. The Rev. James Plackner of the Bethany Lutheran church officiated.

Born at Traverse City Dec. 19, 1943, Mr. Woll lived here with his parents who operated a summer resort until 1953 when the family moved away.

He is survived by his widow, Stephanie; his mother, Mrs. Paul Woll, Sr., and a sister, Mrs. Sandra Keilhauer, all of Seattle, Wash.

G. Robert Case

A memorial service for G. Robert Case, 61, former local resident who died unexpectedly at his Harbor Springs home July 30, was held at the United Methodist Church in Harbor Springs Aug. 2. Cremation was at Graceland in Grand Rapids.

Born at Lake Orion Sept. 22, 1914, Mr. Case was graduated from Rochester High School in 1932. In 1947 he came to Charlevoix and later lived in the west where he was married to the former Sally Greene at Yuma, Ariz., on May 10, 1953. They returned to northern Michigan in 1956 and had resided in the area since then, in recent years at Harbor Springs. He had been employed at the Country Hearth of Petoskey as bar manager.

He is survived by his wife, a son, Kenneth of Traverse City; two daughters, Mrs. George (Roberta) Scholey of Charlevoix and Mrs. Brad (Merrle Carol) Marthens Jr., of Grand Rapids; a step-son, Lawrence Cummings of Harbor Springs; one step-daughter, Mrs. William (Louise) Fiforek of Traverse City; nine grandchildren; three brothers, Taylor Case of Birmingham, Frank Case of Sandusky and Ross Case of Ionia and a sister, Mrs. Shirley Hallett of Birmingham.

The family suggests that anyone wishing to honor his memory do so by contributing in his name to the Emmet County Humane Society.

Mrs. Henry Weinman

Funeral services for Mrs. Henry L. (Emma M.) Weinman, 70, who died Sunday at Grandvue Medical Care Facility where she had been a patient for seven weeks, will be held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Lansing at 10 a.m. Wednesday. Interment will be in a Bluffton, Ind., cemetery.

Mrs. Weinman, mother of Mrs. Max Hosmer, had moved to Charlevoix from Lansing eight months ago to make her home.

Born in Wells county, Ind., Dec. 13, 1905, the former Emma M. Motz was married to Mr. Weinman in Ohio in 1925. They resided in Charlotte and, for the past 30 years, in Lansing. Mr. Weinman preceded her in death in 1940. She had been associated with the Michigan State Department of Agriculture and Safety Commission as a secretary and later was retired as a secretary with the Michigan Oil and Gas Association. She was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal church in Lansing and the American Business Women's Association.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. (Joyce) Hosmer of Charlevoix; two grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. Inez Mendenhall of Charlevoix and Mrs. Georgiana Captain of Great Falls, Mont. and a brother, Robert Motz of Lansing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward

Wards Celebrate 50

Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Ward, Sr., celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a family dinner party held recently at the Grey Gables Inn.

Hosting the event were their children, Mr. and Mrs. Harry (Joan) Goldberg of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Ward of Birmingham and Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Ward, Jr., of Charlevoix. Also attending were most of their eight grandchildren and one great-granddaughter.

Mr. Ward and the former Mae Oma Hall were married at Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1926, and have always resided in Charlevoix. However, in recent years they have spent the winter in Florida. This was the reason for observing the occasion at this time. Mr. Ward operated a fish market on Round Lake and more recently Ward's Charter Service which is now operated by his son, Bernie, Jr. They are members of the First Baptist church.

Mr. Ward was born at Ironton. Mrs. Ward was born at Prestonburg, Ky.

Thank you for all the support given me in the recent primary election. It was very much appreciated.

Reward

As of Monday night, City Council is offering a $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons destroying, stealing or defacing city property.

The move was prompted by vandalism in city parking lots, which has included the destruction of a number of parking meters, costing $150 apiece, as well as damage to the gate in the waterfront lot.

Council member Ivan Whitley brought with him to the meeting three parking meter heads he found smashed in the park.

The Leaning Tree

The picnic season is here. A picnic conjures up visions of warm, sunny days, green grass and wicker baskets. It may also bring to mind a succession of unwelcome guests–flies, ants, thunderstorms, and the rogue of rogues, FOOD POISONING. The chances are the other unwelcome guests were at the picnic site before you arrived but picnickers bring food poisoning with them.

The largest majority of food poisoning outbreaks can be traced to mishandling of food right in our own homes.

Food safety should always be stressed but food poisoning bacteria thrive in temperatures between 40 degrees and 120 degrees F, so summer is its prime time.

You are the best safeguard against food poisoning. Proper and careful handling is extremely important from the time you purchase foods until it is consumed.

Your food safety campaign should begin at the grocery store. Cleanliness of the store is important to all your shopping. Purchase your groceries and promptly take them home and refrigerate the perishable foods. Do those other errands before the grocery shopping.

Soap and water remain important to food safety. Wash your hands well before handling food. Don't just "give them a rinse." Use clean utensils and wash the cutting board before slicing or chopping food on it.

Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold before serving–be especially careful on picnics. If you cook a food such as fried chicken before the outing, either keep the chicken quite hot in an insulated carrier or cool it quickly in the refrigerator. Spread the pieces out on the dish or platter so all the pieces have a chance for fast cooling. Keep the chicken cold until ready to eat, or reheat well right before serving. If you are taking raw meat on your outing to cook at the site, do so only if you can keep the meat cold, perhaps starting with frozen meat. Use a well insulated cooler.

It is better to leave the actual preparation of any sandwiches until you are ready to use them. Mix salads just before use. Mayonnaise and salad dressings are particularly susceptible to bacteria. All items should be chilled well before going into the cooler.

If you do not have well insulated containers capable of keeping cold and hot foods at proper temperatures, then plan to use only nonperishable foods for your outdoor eating.

Creamed dishes, custards, and various other egg dishes, stuffings, and chopped meats and sandwich fillings are quick to be homes for the bacteria if they are not handled properly. If you do not have, or aren't sure you have proper cooling storage, then reserve these foods for "at home" eating. There are many other foods instead that make for delicious and safe eating for the picnic season ahead of you.

Reunions Held in Area

The class of 1926 invited the graduating classes of 1922 through 1930 to join them in their celebration. They enjoyed a dinner served by the women of the Ebenezer Christian School at the American Legion Hall, toured the high school and reminisced about old times.

Those attending the reunion were Cornelia Elzinga Raymer, Pearl Johnstone Sinclair, and Emily Johnstone Coward, class of 1923; Kenneth Peebles, class of 1924; Merla Springstead Trenary and Marvin Elzinga, class of 1926; Richard Doctor, Cora VanderHeide Drenth, and Henry Ruis, class of 1927; Frances Carpenter Boss, John Kooyer, Herbert Peebles, and Adam Sinclair, class of 1928; Peter John Drenth, Arthur Elzinga, Stella Louiselle DuChenry, and Benjamin Timmer, class of 1929; and Theodore Bergsma, Julius Essenberg, Marian Johnston Telgenhoff, Mae Miller Sage, Lloyd Rood, and Helen Springstead Klooster, class of 1930.

Letters were read from the following graduates who could not be present: Margaret Aardema Jolliffe, class of 1925; John Rubingh and Fern Dawson Kipps, class of 1927; and Frances Best Degener, class of 1928.

Arthur J. Reynolds, who was high school superintendent from 1928 to 1932 and who now lives in Cedar, attended the celebration, as did Marian Hall Edson, who was a teacher during the same period. M. Cushman, principal at that time could not attend but sent a letter.

Planning for the reunion was done by Mrs. Trenary, Mrs. Drenth and Mrs. Klooster.

Graduates coming the longest distances to attend the reunion were Adam Sinclair of Chicago and Lloyd Rood of Pierceton, Indiana.

The class of 1936 had their reunion dinner at Mont's Restaurant with Mrs. Zelma Wethers as hostess. She was also hostess when the class of 1936 entertained the class of 1935, in 1935.

Classmates attending the reunion were Peter James Drenth of Escandido, California; Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Shook of Ellsworth; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Parsons of Petoskey; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Drenth of East Jordan; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Russell (Henrietta Miller) of Royal Oak; and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rood (Jean Essenberg) of Stevensville.

Charlevoix's Tourist Economy Looks Bright

Charlevoix may not be having a Christmas in August, but no one is complaining about this summer's economic package.

All unofficial economic barometers indicate that this community's traditional resort season–the mainstay of Charlevoix's livelihood–is doing very well.

Charlevoix's unofficial tourist counter, Jacquie Merta of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, says she's having a record number of inquiries about vacationing in the area.

And besides the traditional queries about summer resorting, the Chamber director says Charlevoix is beginning to develop an extended season with the rise in popularity of fall color tours.

"Every year the color season has increased," she says.

"Every year it is getting better."

As an example, she cites the now annual fall color tour boat rides sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the Beaver Island Boat Company.

She says the once once-a-fall trip has mushroomed in only three years into three different trips on three different weekends.

"It's really becoming a great tradition," she continued.

"A lot more people are coming for the color."

Mrs. Merta says she already is getting inquiries about lodgings for next summer.

As far as this summer goes, the Director says Charlevoix's two biggest crowd-drawing events–the Hobbycraft Show and Venetian Festival–attracted many summer visitors.

"I had more hobbycrafters than ever before," she said.

"Tax receipts collected from the weekend indicate it was a good weekend."

Charlevoix's other large crowd-drawer–the Waterfront Art Fair–drew a record 159 artists showing their work in Charlevoix's East Park on Saturday, August 14.

"A lot of people plan their vacation around the Venetian Weekend and Art Show."

Area businessmen echo Mrs. Merta's optimism.

Charlevoix Realtor Jim Thomas says he thinks the real estate business is going very well.

He says people are buying more second home property than last year, when only primary residential property was moving on the local market.

"Basically, I think we are doing better this summer because people have more confidence in the economy," he said.

Resort owners agree and say business is up.

Jack Uhrick of The Lodge says his reservations have been full and that business is even looking good for the fall.

Downtown store owners are being a little more cautious on their optimism about this summer's economy and are reserving comment until they go through their biggest summer retail time–the month of August.

Several businesses have commented that they do not think they have been moving as many items as in previous summers, but are looking forward to part of the sluggishness being made up this month.

City officials report that the city's harbor has been busier than ever after getting a slow start in May.

"Now that the season is upon us, we are fairing pretty well," says acting city administrator Robert Wexstaff.

"We could use a lot more facilities, but everyone is experiencing that all over the lake."

Board Opposes Unemploy Benefits For Retirees

The Charlevoix Board of Education, at its regular meeting Monday night, went on record as objecting to the payment of unemployment compensation benefits to persons who have voluntarily retired from their employment and thereby qualify for retirement benefits under the Michigan Public School Employees Retirement System.

In the statement issued by the board it was stated further that whereas this payment of benefits is a direct expense to the board of education and whereas the board of education has fulfilled its obligations to fund the required payment of Michigan Public School Employees Retirement System, the board of education objects to this payment of a benefit which is beyond the program of compensation designed and implemented for the benefit of its employees.

In discussing the issue further, Max Novak, president of the board of education, said that the retiree will receive compensation through the employees retirement system upon retirement and Social Security benefits if the retiree is of an age to receive these benefits and therefore should not expect the taxpayer to continue to carry the load by paying unemployment compensation.

The tone of the discussion indicated the board would stand by its decision in this matter.

At the same meeting, the board heard from Supt. James A. McKimmy that a portable classroom had been moved from the Middle School to the High school for use in the Special Education program. The expense of moving the structure will be underwritten by the Intermediate School District since it is to be utilized in the Special Education program.

Heard that sewer and water would be extended to the building constructed earlier by the Sports Boosters. Restroom facilities, included in the structure at the time it was built, can now be utilized. Swanson Construction will do the work.

A report was given on the Kindergarten bus runs. Prior to the opening of school, the driver will visit the home of each kindergartener who will be riding the bus to school and acquaint the new student with the bus, its schedule and other pertinent information designed to make his entry into school a happy occasion. This will be done on Aug. 27.

The Co-op Nursery for preschoolers will be moved from its former location at the Costs of Business Climbs in State

The costs of doing business in Michigan are increasing more rapidly than elsewhere.

This is the conclusion of 89 percent of the small business members (less than 100 employees) of the Michigan Manufacturers Association who responded to a survey made last March to determine their attitudes toward Michigan as a state in which to do business, to measure attitudes about the responsiveness of government to the needs of business, and to determine plans for in-state and out-state industrial expansion and why.

Factors causing higher costs were listed by those surveyed as workers compensation, 81 percent; unemployment compensation, 71 percent; labor costs, 59 percent; and state taxes 45 percent.

Eighty-nine percent feel negatively about government responsiveness and believe that the fault lies with: the legislative branch, 57 percent; all branches equally, 34 percent; administrative agencies, seven percent; executive branch, one percent; and judicial branch, one percent.

Forty-five percent have plans to expand within the next five years. Of these, 54 percent will expand in Michigan only and 46 percent will make some or all of their expansion outside of Michigan.

Building Firm Selected for School

The construction management firm, Elzinga & Volkers, Inc., of Holland, has been engaged by the Charlevoix Public Schools to serve in this capacity for the proposed building project which will go to the voters on Sept. 27.

In selecting this firm, one of two which made presentations before the board of education last month, it was stated that the Holland firm was selected because of the compatibility between the school's architectural firm and the company.

Approving the selection of the firm does not mean that the school district has entered into a contract with the firm at this time.

By taking action now, the firm will assist with the compilation of brochures to present the project and with other phases of the program prior to the vote.

It was decided to engage a construction management firm to allow a larger number of contractors, especially local contractors, to bid on the proposed construction. It is estimated that a minimum of 15 percent of the over all cost will be saved by doing this.

Krabill Remains In Poor Condition

Harry Krabill, 18, Winnetka, Ill., remains in serious condition in the Intensive Care Unit at the Charlevoix Area Hospital where he is being treated for injuries received in a one-car accident on US 31 North at 11:30 p.m. Sunday.

According to Charlevoix county Sheriff's officers, Krabill is being treated for multiple injuries received when the car in which he was a passenger went out of control, crossed the highway, spun around when it hit the shoulder of the road and struck a tree.

Krabill and the driver of the car, Bruce D. McLean, 18, Wilmette, Ill., were taken by ambulance to the hospital. McLean was treated and released.

The Charlevoix Fire Department was called to the scene until Krabill, who was pinned in the car by the impact, was released and taken by the Charlevoix ambulance to the hospital.

New Counseling Center Hires First Director

Chip Counseling Service, a new non-profit Charlevoix counseling service, has hired its first director.

Ronald Moore, president and chairman of the board, says his organization has hired Oren Schroeder, presently of Washington, D.C.

Schroeder, who was selected from among more than 60 applicants, is presently with the Lutheran Social Services in Washington, a comprehensive mental health counseling service providing individual and group therapy as well as marriage and family counseling to the people of metropolitan Washington.

Schroeder, 40, who has held his present position for the past 9½ years, is well qualified for the position he is accepting, Mr. Moore said.

He has a Master of Science degree in Community Development from Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Ill., and a Master of Divinity degree from the Lutheran Theological Seminary, Columbis, Ohio.

In addition, he has had clinical pastoral education including an 18 months program in developing clinical and psychological skills at the Cleveland Psychiatric Hospital and the Anna State Hospital, Anna, Ill.

He has attended summer workshops in Adlerian Psychology and Human Sexuality and a two-year program in Group Work at the Psychiatric Institute Foundation, Washington, D.C.

He also has worked with alcoholics and served as a trainer/consultant for various client systems including colleges and companies for students and employees.

As head of the department of the Lutheran Social Services for the past six years, Schroeder has supervised a staff of eight workers; worked with two consulting psychiatrists and averaged 75-100 clients.

He has developed the department to the point that a satellite counseling center has been established in a suburban church and others are in the planning stage. He has been a resource person for approximately 100 congregations supporting the agency.

In addition, he has been minister of two congregations in Ohio and has trained clergy in applied mental health principles.

In announcing the appointment, Moore said that Schroeder has a strong Christian commitment and can relate non-judgmentally to a variety of peoples in the community.

He went on to say that it is anticipated that counseling service will begin in late September at a location to be announced.

Schroeder, his wife, Penny, and their children, Karyn, 13, and Marr, six, are expected to arrive in Charlevoix in mid-September.

Cut Out

I cannot help out with the age of the cat the people wish to adopt, and I am not a vet, but have liked cats all my life, and now have a beautiful one fourteen years old. I believe a vet could tell the approximate age of the cat right away, and whether shots are in order.

Congratulations to these people for being humane. There should be more like them.

America

To men who rent in Charlevoix. When the common man takes $120 on the average, multiply by 4 weeks and get $480. A family of 3 spends $30 a week for food, multiply this by 4 and you get $120. You have heat that can run $30 a month. The lights might be $20. In the country, it is more. This comes to $170. You add rent to this and you come up with a large amount. The people in this country that are doing this know better. They never have people doing this to them. They are going bad. People are getting greedier all the time. Whatever happened to you scratch your back and we'll scratch yours. This is getting to be a bad country. You people know you're getting the rent plus more, and you don't care, you'll still do it. This is America, it's a shame. What about children? You aren't supposed to have children. Are you supposed to kill them to have a place to rent? You have children, why can't we. It's really too bad. Mothers are supposed to be home with their children until they are 5 years old, as recommended by the State of Michigan. How can they do this and work? This is ridiculous. You people that want more than $140 or $150 a month rent is ridiculous. Other people can rent at that and they don't care, they seem to make it. But they are not out to gouge each other. This is America? Forget it! I ought to go back home.

To the Editor,

The Waterfront Art Fair Committee would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank the following people who worked for and with us, behind the scenes, to make our 1976 Fair an overwhelming success. Jackie Merta for her hours of work above and beyond the call of her office; Bill Staffel, Bill Murray, Dick Martin, Bill Cockfield, Todd Warner and Ed McNamara, our manpower: Jack Moil and Charlevoix's Finest: Barb Bump Judy Cockfield and all the wonderful Charlevoix names who served as Jr. Hosts and Hostesses; Louis Edwards and his Boy Scouts; the Kiwanis and their many helping hands; Susan McNamara and Donna Ostrum who drove to Detroit to pick up the Martin painting; the City of Charlevoix and all our merchants without who's cooperation we could never function. To all of you, many, many THANKS for making our "Coming-Of-Age-Fair" of '76 the best ever.

SBT Task Force Seeks Business Information

Business persons who have a complaint or who feel penalized by the new Single Business Tax (SBT) have a way to state their beefs – by submitting information on special forms provided by the State of Michigan and the SBT Task Force.

These forms will be provided only upon request to the Michigan Department of Commerce, Att: John Haniseki, Office of Economic Expansion, Lansing, Mich 48913.

The special forms have already been mailed to 4,000 selected businesses in 20 different categories such as retail, service, and manufacturing. However, those who were not selected may still be included in the survey by asking for, completing, and returning the forms.

The SBT Task Force, made up of business people from many different companies in the state, considers this survey to be the most important piece of research included to recommend changes in the tax.

The form has been designed to be used with the State of Michigan computer set-up. It is hoped this research will identify all the major problem areas of the SBT.

Individual firm names are kept confidential and the Task Force will see only coded output (not firm names).

Those who cannot take time to send a letter requesting the special forms may call John Hanieski in Lansing, phone (517-373-8313), asking that they be sent. However, a letter is better.

The forms will be sent on a single request basis only – no mass mailings to groups or to trade associations, etc. Requests should be made before August 23 if at all possible.

Miles Historical Books Still Available

Sales of "Bob Miles' Charlevoix – a Century in Pictures" are progressing well, according to Edward P. Beutner, president of the Charlevoix Historical Society.

The book is a compilation of over 350 pictures collected by Miles during his long career as a photographer in Charlevoix. It is printed in sepia on high quality paper and bound in natural buckram. Only 2,000 copies were printed, of which about 800 have been sold.

Proceeds from sales will go toward the building fund for a museum planned by the Historical Society.

"Bob Miles' Charlevoix" is for sale in Charlevoix at the Shop of the Gulls, Literary News Stand in The Mart, Rexall Drug Store, and Michigan Officeways. It may also be obtained direct from the Charlevoix Historical Society, Box 525, Charlevoix, with a check for $25.

Dates Back to 1940's

Harvey Rosinsky Holds a Record

By Keo Winter

It wasn't until last year that Harvey Rosinsky of Charlevoix learned that he'd been in the Guinness Book of World Records for nearly 36 years.

The Medusa Cement worker says he learned about it then when some of his friends brought the record book to work to check out how large Charlevoix's Cherry Pie would have to be to break a world's record.

Medusa Cement Company, located just south of Charlevoix, was the site for the construction of the mammoth pie last spring.

Rosinsky holds the record for having the highest human pyramid–five men standing on each others' shoulders. The 62-year-old Charlevoix resident was part of an acrobatic springboard called "The Gauchos."

At its zenith, the seven-member troupe performed with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circuses in the early forties at Madison Square Garden and did a vaudeville act with Joe E. Brown.

Like many old-time circus performers, Rosinsky got his start with "Professor William G. Schultz in Manitowoc, Wisconsin.

In the fall of 1927, the Manitowoc Boy Scouts asked Schultz to coach them in stunts for their jamboree.

The parents of the Scouts were so impressed with his ability to work with children, they urged the school board to make him athletic director of their school.

But since there were no openings, the board hired him as a janitor with special privileges to use the gym at vocational school after hours.

Schultz began training the local youngsters to do special acts and every year the kids would put on a circus.

"My brothers were in their when they were younger," Rosinsky said about how he got involved with the circus at the age of 19.

"One of my brothers wanted to change acts and Mr. Schultz wanted to know if I wanted to get in there."

Rosinsky said learning how to use a springboard was back breaking and it really took him about a year to get used to it.

"I used to go down to the school and watch them, but I never really dreamed I would get into an act like that," he continued.

The Manitowac Vocational School would hold their circus from April 24 to May 3, then in the summer the group would perform at picnics and county fairs around the area.

In less than a year, the troupe had a Chicago and New York booking agency that got them spots all across the Midwest in fairs and vaudeville shows.

"In 1939, we joined Ringling Brothers and performed with them until the war broke out in 1941."

Rosinsky said they tried to get back together, but his group lost three people, including one of his brothers, in the war.

Charlevoix Has 3 Guinness Spots

Mrs. Sylvia Boehm, a chatty New York City hometown girl, can tell you more about Guinness World's Records than anyone in the United States. Her husband is the editor.

"For the last 15 years I have been answering all the letters and calls about getting into the record book," she told the Courier in a recent telephone interview.

"I get some pretty wierd calls."

Recently, the New York-accented woman said she got a call from a guy in a nudist camp, who picks up weights. She wouldn't elaborate on how or what record the nudist was trying to get into the book.

According to Mrs. Boehm, the history behind the Guinness book is a legend of its times.

But for those, like ourselves, who didn't know how the book got started, here's a little background.

The book first was published in 1956, in a small town just outside London called Enfield, by Guinness Superlative, Ltd. In fact, the same company still prints the British and World Edition.

New York Publisher David Boehm saw a few copies appearing in the United States and wondered if there would be an American market.

So, according to his wife, Boehm began publishing an American edition in 1961, called the "Guinness Book of Superlatives."

"No one really seemed to understand what superlatives meant and were getting it confused with superfluous, so we changed it to the Guinness Book of World Records."

Mrs. Boehm says the 1976 edition is expected to be on the market in the next five or six weeks.

"It is a tremendous job," she said about compiling the world's records.

"We have to start every March working on the once-a-year publication."

To get into the book, she says a person has to have witnesses, as well as clippings from newspapers, photos and any other evidence to show they broke a record.

Atwood Has 2nd Smallest Church

Wayside Chapel

Atwood Church

Besides Max Boiser and his wife, Janet, nobody in Atwood seems to know that the village owns a spot in the Guinness Book of Records.

The tiny town–population 65 at last count–is the home of the even tinier Wayside Chapel, which, by all accounts, is the second smallest church in the world.

The miniature New England-styled chapel stands along U.S. 31 about 10 miles south of Charlevoix.

It measures 12 feet long and eight feet wide, according to Bolser, and he ought to know. He built it–with a little help from his friends.

The world's smallest church, according to Guinness, is the Union Church in Wiscasset, Maine, at seven by four and one-half feet.

"Well, that's something spectacular," beamed Mrs. Bolser, on learning that the chapel is in the record books.

"We never anticipated that."

Bolser said, "I'm surprised, but that's not why we built it."

He said the chapel was built in 1968 by the congregation of the Atwood Christian Reformed Church, of which the Bolsers are members, to provide travelers a place to pause, rest and meditate before continuing on their way.

Bolser, a long-time carpenter, did most of the woodwork on the building. Other church members pitched in to paint, panel and plant flowers around the chapel, which is open 24 hours a day.

Inside is an old, hand-carved pulpit and four oaken pews, all taken from an older church and cut down to fit the chapel.

Each pew is 30 inches wide, just long enough to hold one adult and one child.

Mrs. Bolser said that nearly 21,000 people have signed the chapel's guest register. They've come from as far away as Australia, Japan and Denmark, she said, and from all over the United States and Canada.

Cherry Pie Brings a Record

You would have thought Charlevoix residents built 10-ton cherry pies every week after watching them earn a spot in this year's Gulness Book of Records.

Some 6,000 spectators witnessed the preparation and baking of one of George Washington's favorite deserts.

The baking of the world's largest cherry pie ever–a 10-ton masterpiece, not only made a world's record, but was recognized by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration in Washington as one of the top 20 Bicentennial events of the year.

The completed pie, before it was gobbled down by curious onlookers, was 14 feet in diameter, was filled with two feet of cherries and weighed 20,000 pounds.

It was twice the size of a mince meat pie created in England in 1932 and recorded as the world's largest in the Guiness World Book of Records.

Dave Phillips, owner-operator of the Grey Gables Inn of Charlevoix, was the chairman and "engineer-baker" for the project.

The event was designed to appropriately observe the 200th anniversary of the nation's founding, kick off the annual Michigan Week observance, and set a new record for publication in the Guiness book.

The all-day event took place at the Medusa Cement Plant located four miles south of Charlevoix along Lake Michigan. Besides hosting the attraction, Medusa constructed a specially built oven that had a capability of 6,400,000 BTU per hour.

County Residents Should Look At Elected Manager

Charlevoix County residents may very well want to keep their eyes peeled on Oakland County's newly Elected County Executive.

According to Pontiac State Senator Kerry Kammer, Oakland County became the first area in Michigan to establish a unified form of county government with an Elected County Executive.

While Charlevoix County doesn't necessarily have many of the same problems the suburban Detroit County finds itself with, its case is worth exploring.

Kammer, who expressed his feelings in a recent issue of Michigan Counties, said that aside from one man-one vote for county commissioner districts, this represented the first major reform of Oakland County government in 100 years.

Public Act 139 of 1973 permitted the consolidation and reorganization of county government for the purpose of promoting greater efficiency.

The legislation provided that a county's voters could determine whether they wanted to replace their existing form of government with a single appointed or elected administrator.

In the case of Oakland County, the electors chose to abolish the three member Board of Auditors, and by a three-to-two margin, expressed a desire to have an elected official to head their government.

The decision established a relationship between the Board of Commissioners and the Elected Executive, comparable to the one already existing between the state legislature and Governor or between the Congress and President.

The Executive became the principal administrative officer in charge of coordinating the general government activities as well as the functions of all independent boards and commissions abolished by the reform. These included institutions such as the Planning Commission, Board of Health and Board of Auditors.

Also included in his powers was the ability to hire and fire the administrative heads of county departments, and to eliminate or consolidate departments with the advise and consent of the Commissioners.

In addition, Oakland's Executive was authorized to propose policies and programs, including the county's budget, for the approval of the Board of Commissioners. Finally, he was permitted to veto any ordinance passed by the Board, including a veto of line items within the budget.

Although this appears to be a great deal of power, Public Act 139 imposed several limitations.

First, the reorganization allowed for the retention of Oakland County's five other elected officials (Sheriff, Clerk, Treasurer, Drain Commissioner and Prosecutor), who are independent of the Executive.

Second, a number of policy making boards and commissions were left outside the County Executive's jurisdiction. These included such important bodies as the Election Commission Building Authority, Board of Institutions, Parks and Recreation Commission and Road Commission.

Finally, the veto power of the Executive was restricted by the ability of the Commissioners to override with a two-thirds vote of the members.

Senator Kammer said that the reform was particularly suited to Oakland County because of its metropolitan location and its rapidly growing population.

"Coping with problems produced by such significant and sustained growth is a difficult task," he wrote.

"I believe it can best be accomplished by having a full time official who is electorially accountable to the citizens every four years."

Many other areas are currently considering adopting the unified form of government.

We feel Charlevoix's Board of Commissioners should at least investigate the potential of such a position for this county.

It is our opinion that Charlevoix County is in dire need of some focal point to orient its activities around.

Too often, we see the county in a muddle because there is really not one position within the county that can effectively coordinate and in some cases, direct, various efforts to run our local government.

As a result, the county finds itself duplicating services that necessarily don't have to be duplicated. Perhaps we could save the use of hard-to-get tax dollars.

Letters to the editor

Humane Society

Mrs. William Mathews, Secretary
Charlevoix County Humane Society

Dear Mrs. Mathews:

Because I shall be unable to attend the August 4 meeting of the Society and because I want to support the board of directors (as I recognize them) I am writing this letter. I would appreciate your reading it to the membership at the meeting of August 4. Also, if the directors so desire, copies may be made and published by newspapers in the area served by the Society.

First, let me set the record straight about my resignation from the board.

Advice and counsel from others made me aware of a possible conflict of interest. I am a candidate for a seat on the County Commission. If elected, I could not have continued as president of the Humane Society because the county sanctions and supports the Society through the Sheriff's Department committee. Enough about that!

Recent publicity, (Petoskey News-Review) has come to my attention. If you and the other members of the board are feeling discouraged, disheartened, and disillusioned by this publicity, let me assure you of my unqualified support.

I would begin by stating to all present at the meeting that the Society, as represented by the directors, did not function in complete harmony. However, differences were resolved by majority opinion and by the gradual evolvement of an approved policy and a set of rules of operation governing the Animal Shelter. I would be the last to deny that from time to time certain irregularities had occurred. None, to my knowledge, were of land-mark importance and they, too were being eliminated by the development of policy and rules of operation.

When those directors who could not abide by majority rule resigned from the board, I complimented their clear thinking. I felt that if their interest in the welfare of the animals were sincere and if they realized that their presence on the board could only result in continual conflict, then their resignation would allow the remaining members of the board to function in better and more complete harmony.

I realize that Bob and Lucille had been hard working and sincere in their efforts for the Society. Perhaps they came to regard the project as their own. Whatever the case might be, their present disruptive tactics are very inconsistent with their previous efforts. Perhaps they feel that others cannot capably continue the work so well begun.

At any rate, it is my hope that reason will prevail and that smouldering resentment can be allowed to subside rationally so that continued progress can be made toward the ultimate goals of the Society.

Finally, as a past-president, I know how the board of directors was functioning and I have complete confidence in their sincerity and ability.

Sincerely,
Keith R. Annear
(sustaining member)

"Jeffs"

To Sara Gay Dammann:

The policeman in your story was Charley Jefferies, who once ran a butcher shop but later was a long time night policeman in Charlevoix. He was never known as Jeff, so I'm sure the "Jeff" did not derive its name from him. I ate many "Jeffs" in the old Fessenden Drug Store before the fire. The concoction was invented by the soda clerk after the store moved. I can't recall his name, but he was not a native of Charlevoix. I lived in Charlevoix from 1902 till 1925, when I started practicing dentistry in Grand Rapids. I enjoyed your story.

Dr. W. Claire Cartler

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

One of mankind's oldest recognized diseases – gout – is back in the news.

"Parade" magazine reported over the weekend that a new book entitled "Gout and Uric Acid Metabolism" has been written by Drs. John H. Talbott and Ts'ai-fan Yu. It attempts to dispel some of the old nonsense that has been going around since the days of King Henry VIII about gout — namely that it afflicts old men who eat too well and drink too much.

Those are some of the accusations us gout suffers have had to live with, although deep down most of us know something pretty grim causes that searing pain in the big toe, the elbow or the knee – just a few of the places gout may rear its ugly head.

Of course, gout is connected to diet. But two people could eat an identical diet for years and one would get gout and the other wouldn't. Strange.

Now Drs. Talbott and Yu claim that there is a definite hereditary link among gout patients and that gout is no respecter of the sexes, although far fewer woman than men come down with gout. Women patients constitute only 5.1 percent of gout cases.

Which isn't exactly news in our family. My grandmother was diagnosed as a gout patient when she was a fairly young woman. Today her three grandsons have it. It seems to have skipped a generation, but some diseases seem to do that.

I think one of the strangest things about gout is that most cases are diagnosed between Christmas and New Years – at least that's what my first gout doctor told me. And although I delayed visiting the doctor for about two months after the onset of symptoms, I remember that my first attack occurred during Christmas week after eating shrimp and turkey. I was building a set for a play and was busy sawing a board when the devil struck. At first I thought I had bumped my elbow against a rusty nail — but I hadn't. Furthermore, the pain came and stayed.

After two months of liniment applications and frequent doses of aspirin, I broke down and made an appointment with a doctor in Fenton. My right arm had become so weak and emaciated I could hardly hold a pencil. A blood test indicated that my uric acid was in the gouty range. The doctor gave me a lifetime prescription for colbenemid — one of the traditional remedies — and a hefty shot of cortisone in the afflicted elbow. The symptoms began slowly to subside.

About the same time I discovered I wasn't the world's only gout patient. One of my students – a slender lad of 17 — had it in his back. The mechanic at the corner garage had it in his knees. One of my fellow teachers – a woman in her 60's – had it in her toes. Once while on a world cruise she ran out of gout medicine in India and suffered untold agonies until the ship reached Greece and she was able to buy a fresh supply of colbenemid.

Gout sufferers, as you may suspect, love to compare notes among themselves and commiserate with each other. Outsiders aren't so sympathetic, thanks to the bad press gout patients have had to live with for centuries.

Several years ago, my mother-in-law passed along a copy of Dr. Jarvis' "Folk Medicine in Vermont" which suggests regular doses of vinegar and water for gout. Of course, I tried it and was surprised to find that it works – at least for me — better than prescription drugs. A little vinegar and water after the first twinge nips an attack in the bud.

Furthermore, a shot of vinegar in a glass of water enables me to eat a bowl of bean soup without suffering crippling pain in my elbow the next day. Dr. Jarvis didn't say how the vinegar affects uric acid metabolism and I wouldn't even pretend to know.

But when it comes to gout, grasping at straws is the name of the game.

In our town, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" comes on somewhere between The Star-Spangled Banner and man's tribute to flight.

Because of the nature of the material, they wanted to make sure all the parents were in bed and the kids glued to the TV set.

As I told the children the other morning, "I'm supposed to be using parental discretion, but I'm too dragged to discrete."

"It's all right, Mom," they said. "If there was anything for you to make a decision on, we'd awaken you."

"You say it's just a story of a simple, average family from Fernwood, Ohio?"

"Right," they smiled. "You're from Ohio, aren't you, mom?"

"Yes, Dayton. What bothers me is why they put it on so late."

"Who knows? There's this sweet grandfather who wears a raincoat, Mary's husband, who's your ordinary blue-collar worker, and a young girl seeking conversion."

"Converstion to what?" I asked suspiciously.

"One of your top three faiths."

"It sounds like 'The Waltons,' " I said. "Why does the grandfather wear a raincoat?"

"Grandad has a raincoat, doesn't he?" they grinned.

"Yes, of course. What does Mary do all day?"

"She's just your average stay-at-home housewife, like you. With the puffed sleeves and the dustmop."

"Sounds dull."

"It is. Some nights we can hardly keep awake."

"Then why do you?"

"We're trying to get a better understanding of your life, Mom. We never realized before what it was like to stay at home and just be a normal, average housewife."

"It has its moments."

I thought I saw them nudge one another and giggle.

"Tell me," I said, "do they ever get into the good work we housewives do, like visiting the sick in the hospital?"

"Ohyeah," said our youngest, his eyes glistening.

"It doesn't sound like any more sex and violence to me than 'Wild Kingdom,' " I said.

The children smiled in relief. "Think of it, Mom, as 'The Little House on the Prairie' – with sewers."

If it Fitz

Never eschew the grass

"Friday, in our never-ending quest for culture, we will sit on the hill," I told my wife. "But on Sunay we will eschew the grass and dine in the palace with the president."

"I don't think you chew grass; I think you smoke it," she said.

"This will be another fine opportunity for me to test the White Star Phenomenon," I said, ignoring her poor pun. She needs culture more than I do.

Anyway, we did it.

On one night we sprawled on the grass at the Meadow Brook Music Festival and listened to Maynard Ferguson defy death by hernia, wailing his trumpet to the shrillest notes this side of a dog whistle. We wore tennis shoes, ate cold chicken from a box, and avoided windburn by crawling into a Thermos bottle.

Two nights later we ate a three-fork dinner at the Sunset Terrace, the splendid home of Donald O'Dowd, president of Oakland University. The Terrace overlooks the Meadow Brook amphitheatre, so it was possible to look down on the peasants as we ate kabobs and brown tomatoes. At show time we descended to stagefront, smug in the pavilion, to enjoy a scholarly program presented by the New England Conservatory Ragtime Ensemble.

The contrast between the two evenings at Meadow Brook was extreme – which is what I was seeking. I wanted to find out if, when it comes to culture, I still take after my father. This brings us to what I always have called the "White Star Phenomenon."

The White Star stands no more. Long ago it fell to urban renewal, that gigantic bruiser of childhood memories. The White Star was once the sleaziest saloon in my hometown, Port Huron. It occupied a scruffy corner near the St. Clair River, in the Red Light district, where decent people never went.

I first went inside the White Star when I was 18. I was one of several brave soldiers home on furlough, during World War II, and we had spent the night celebrating in the ribald manner befitting young men who knew this might be their last hurrah – death could be waiting in the next foxhole. (I was a clerk-typist assigned to the chaplain's office.)

Somehow it was decided that we should climax the evening by invading forbidden territory – the White Star. All our lives our parents had instructed us to beware of that lair. We had been warned against everything from opium addiction (from drinking from unsterilized glasses) to being shanghaied by Great Lakes sailors and forced to spend the rest of our years on Lake Erie, off Cleveland.

But this was war. Into the White Star we went.

It appeared as bad as advertised. The floor was dirt, most of the customers carried their heads between their feet, and the bartender's face looked like two blocks of broken sidewalk.

In those days you had to be 21 to drink. The bartender asked me for proof and I showed him a photostat of my birth certificate. The birth date had been suitably altered but the rest of the information was legitimate.

"Hey," said the bartender, "You must be Eddie Fitzgerald's son."

I was. And my companions fell on the floor laughing, splendor in the dirt.

It turned out my father was an old and favored customer. I soon became the same thing. And when my mother found out, she explained the phenomenon succinctly: "You're just like your father. You'd rather hang around with bums than bank presidents."

This is pretty much the truth, but I've always fought it.

That's why the Meadow Brook experiment was so appealing. If I liked Sunday's plush better than Friday's slush, I could pronounce myself cured. I could phone Mother and tell her it was finally OK to eschew my old cuspidor.

But it didn't happen that way.

Sunset Terrace is a lovely place. The free parking and preferred sitting made me feel important. And President O'Dowd is an unusually gracious host, forever youthful. He could be Gov. Milliken's younger brother, another cousin of Dorian Gray. It was a charming time.

But when Maynard Ferguson blew "I Can't Get Started With You" I was flat on my back, searching the sky for yesterdays, and my favorite girl tickled my shin with her big toe. It could never have happened in row HII, seats 32 and 34. It was a moment made for sighing.

"We should never eschew the grass," I sighed, in cultured tones.

Meet Charlevoix

Sylvia Beckman

A representative group of paintings by Sylvia Uhrick Beckman is now being shown at Reis Gallery. This week the Courier talks with the artist about her work and her Charlevoix family connections.

COURIER: Most of your paintings are of flowers– water lilies, apple blossoms, poppies, Jack in the pulpits, trillium, iris and others. How does this happen?

BECKMAN: I studied both art and botany in college, at the University of Michigan and the University of Wisconsin. I'm an avid wild flower collector and have most of the flowers I've painted in my garden. A knowledge of botany helps because when you understand how something is put together, it's easier to paint.

COURIER: What else do you paint?

BECKMAN: Plants and pastorals and some portraits of members of my family.

COURIER: Your pictures are all beautifully framed. Do you make them?

BECKMAN: My husband makes them from raw walnut lumber. I gild them all. I learned to gild when we lived in Australia by being apprenticed to a gilder and working with him. It is an art form used mostly in restorations. It is expensive and time-consuming so we don't see much of it any more.

COURIER: How long will your work be on display here at Reis Gallery?

BECKMAN: Until August 25th, but I hope to have some paintings here all the time.

COURIER: What other galleries show your work?

BECKMAN: I show on a continuing basis at the Far Gallery in New York, at Oehschlaeger Galleries in Chicago, and at the Fanny Garver Gallery in Madison, Wisconsin. In September I'll be in a show at the Charles Wustum Museum in Racine, Wisconsin. In February I'll have a one-man show at Garver and one in Chicago next summer.

COURIER: How did you happen to bring your paintings to Reis Gallery?

BECKMAN: Suzi Reis and I are old friends. We renewed our acquaintance in Madison, where she met several art dealers before opening her own gallery here.

COURIER: You live in Maidson now, don't you?

BECKMAN: Yes, my husband teaches at the University of Wisconsin. His specialty is solar energy and he has written probably the most prominent book on the subject. When we leave here we are going to Winnipeg where he is speaking at the International Solar Energy Conference.

COURIER: When did you live in Charlevoix?

BECKMAN: Our family moved here in 1956, the year I graduated from high school in a Detroit suburb. My father, John Uhrick, who is now dead, used to own the Pontiac-Cadillac agency.

COURIER: What members of your family still live in Charlevoix?

BECKMAN: My brother Jack is at The Lodge, my sister Diane is married to Peter Paee, my brother Jim has a Resale Shop, and my brother Jerry runs the Golfview Motel. My mother, Florence Uhrick, still lives here, too. Our daughters, Julie and Chris, have been visiting her. It's been great for all of us to visit friends and relatives while showing my paintings in Charlevoix.

COURIER: You're too modest to mention it, so we're going to quote for our readers part of what the well-known artist Aaron Bohrod has to say about your work:

"Unlike the flamboyant old dutch copperplate flower painters with whose work she relates distantly, Sylvia Beckman's modulated, soft-edged color works possess a serene and classic nobility. She paints with a persuasively individual handwriting without eccentric dotting of i's or crazy crossing of t's. Her paintings are delicately and lovingly stroked into existence. Her obvious technical skill and her poetic qualities project a future of fine accomplishment for this young artist.

Residents Protected Well

Compared with people in many other sections of the country, residents of Charlevoix County are relatively well protected, financially, through their life insurance holdings.

Families in the local area are more amply covered than ever before, the figures indicate, despite the fact that the life insurance industry had its worst sales slump in 25 years in 1975.

They have been protecting themselves in other directions as well by maintaining their health insurance, household insurance, accident insurance and other safeguards at a high level.

Of special note, however, is the extent to which they have been adding to their life insurance in recent years. That trend has boosted the amount held by Charlevoix County residents, as of the beginning of 1975, to an estimated $131,206,000.

The facts and figures on the number of policyholders and the amount of insurance in force are given for each of the states and for the United States as a whole by the Department of Commerce and the Institute of Life Insurance.

They show that the overall holdings of life insurance in the nation are huge -- amounting to more than $2 trillion (yes, trillion).

The total in force in the State of Michigan alone is listed at $94,090 million. This compares with $37,842 million ten years earlier.

In most families, it is found, the amount of insurance a family carries is directly proportional to its income. The total held by the average family in the state is equivalent to 23.5 months of income, after taxes.

Related to Charlevoix County and to the average net income in the area, life insurance locally comes to approximately $22,850 per family.

It is about double the amount that most families had ten years before and is more than the average in many communities.

Of the total holdings of the local population as a whole, $131,206,000, the major part is in the form of ordinary life insurance. In second place is group insurance, which is chiefly job-connected.

Youngsters Prepare For County Fair

Charlevoix 4-H'ers are looking for some cattle buyers and they'll show up at the Emmet County Fair Grounds Wednesday, Aug. 25, at 7 p.m.

Next Wednesday these six youngsters will be putting their prize possessions on the auction block with the assistance of Jim Brannin, local auctioneer.

The auction culminates nearly a year's worth of work by Charlevoix youngsters working under the Charlevoix 4-H program.

Each of the kids were responsible for raising, caring and training their animals with the hopes of being able to cover the costs of the project from the sale of the animal at the fair.

Before selling the animals, fair judges will have a chance to award ribbons during a special showing on Tuesday, August 24, at 10 a.m. at the fair location.

Doug Drenth

My name is Doug Drenth. My steer, which weighs around 1,000 pounds. Is called "Rusty".

Have you ever tried to lead a 1,000 steer when you weigh 80 pounds?

I bought him from the Wieland farm. He is about 1½ years old. He eats about 15 pounds of grain a day.

We live on Black Road, five miles south of Charlevoix. The road is named after my Grandpa, Floyd Black. He used to have horses in the horse pulling contest in the Emmet County Fair.

Jeff Drenth

My name is Jeff Drenth. The name of this steer is Harry.

He's from our own herd and weighs close to 1,100 pounds. He's one of the biggest steers in the club. He weighed about 500 pounds the 1st of December and has gained 600 pounds in eight months.

We didn't cut his horns off like most people did and are trying with the use of 1½ pound horn weights to curve them down.

This is Big Red. I'm Mark Drenth, his owner. I'll be in the 9th grade in Charlevoix High School.

The reason we called him that is because when he was young he was big and was red.

I live on Black Road, Charlevoix. My Dad, Robert, is a plumber in his own business.

When I bought the steer it weighed 395 and now weighs 900. Something interesting Big Red did is Christmas night he got out and spent the night in the woods. In the morning they roped him on snowmobiles and led him back to the barn.

When I first got Herby he weighed 320 pounds. At fair time he'll weigh about 900 pounds. I walk Herby a mile every day and I practice showing him each day, too.

One thing that Herby does to show he likes you is to bunt you.

'Fiddler' Makes a Hit at Grey Gables

By KEN WINTER

As the good book says, you couldn't find a finer local theater performance than the Charlevoix Music Theatre's rendition of "Fiddler on the Roof."

Fiddler is one of three ongoing summer musicals being performed in a dinner theater at the Grey Gables by a troupe of actors from Charlevoix and Detroit.

The good book, of course, is what Jewish father Tevye (Paul Kerr) constantly makes reference to when one of his four daughters or nagging wife do something he's against and an out is needed.

Fiddler takes place in the Russian village uf Anatevko in the 1800's, when Jewish Russians were being forced into exile from their homelands.

The plot focuses around Tevye, a poor peasant farmer, and his dealings with each of his four daughters and their desire tu get married to men not necessarily favored by their father.

Tevye, a father for so many years bound by tradition, finds himself having to deal with new philosophies and ideas introduced by his daughter's suitors and never heard of in his tiny rural setting.

Intertwined throughout the entire musical are the songs mode so popular by the Broodway production and more recent film.

With regal superiority, a cast of 15 is able to demonstrate versatility not only in the art of acting, but in dance and music, in a performance that has to be one of the best offerings in Northern Michigan.

Director John Raleeh should be commended for his ability to handle what normally is very difficult to accomplish with such a well-known theater production on a semi-professional basis.

He is also able to provide his audience with an interpretation that is not a duplication ur carbon copy of the performance familiar to many theater goers.

It was hard not to be captured in the enthusiasm shown by the entire audience for the performance by the cast. The tiny theater setting offered an unusual experience for those used to a traditional picture-framed stage.

Paul Kerr, the bearded father of four, captivated the audience throughout the musical not only by handling his lines so quickly and lightly, but with excellent voice quality. Partly strong were his soliloquys to the man up above.

It was also hard to imagine that Charlene Brook, who played his wife, Golde, could be anything but a Jewish mother. Her supporting rule tied in many scenes that might have otherwise been a little sluw.

The four daughters were also cast very well. Particularly strong was Tzeitel by Jan Zallman. Her facial expressions portrayed an innocence and jubilance that was very easy to identify with. And Motel, the poor village tailor played by John Urbanati gave a fine performance.

Staging and choreography was very well thought uut und followed through. The simple set design and effective use of black-out between scenes allowed one to be more creative and imaginative that normally afforded the observer. It was refreshing.

Finally, the use of a piano as the only musical instrument in the performance came over better than one would have thought for a musical.

Costuming was also good with the exception of Tevye—he could probably have used a little more padding around the middle to look a little older and jovial.

Technically, the performance went smoothly. The only suggestion, that eventually was corrected, would be to use a front offstage speaker instead of one from the rear, for offstage voices.

The use of a strobe light during the final sequence of the Russian soldiers' visit to the Jewish hamlet was also very clever.

A fine performance coupled with an excellent dinner setting at the Grey Gables makes for a very enjoyable evening of entertainment in Charlevoix.

We wuuld highly recommend the Charlevoix Music Theatre performances. If Camelot or Man of LaMancha are half the show that Fiddler on the Roof is, a fine evening is in store for theater goers.

PAUL KERR stars as Tevye, the poor old father of four daughters.

CARLENE BROOK played Kerr's wife in "Fiddler on the Roof."

James Foster is an artisan who takes great pride in his work.

His trade is grouting rocks, a process of adhering rocks similar to bricklaying. The Courier found him last week working on a 150-ton seawall project at The Dunes.

"You start with the large rocks on the bottom and work up, mixing large and small rocks together and putting the grout between them," Foster says of the process.

And the wall stands there, not only a permanent, but artistic, structure.

Foster hails from Alabama but moved to Detroit, where he learned his trade from Ron Steffes, by whom he is now employed in Charlevoix.

"Mr. Steffes used to work with me, but he doesn't any more. It's pretty hard work, but it's good work," Foster added with a grin.

Pie

Another Charlevoix industrial plant, the Will-Flow Corporation manufactured a 14-foot-diameter stainless steel pie plate in which the two-foot-thick pie was baked.

After the crust and pie filling were in place, a 25,000-ton crane hoisted it into the kiln for nearly three hours of baking. And while the pie was baking, a variety show of professional and amateur performers entertained the crowds.

When the pie was cooled, all the hungry onlookers dug in.

Obituary

Mrs. George Toth

Funeral services for Mrs. George F. (Rose) Toth, 59, who was dead on arrival at the Charlevoix Area Hospital Sunday evening, were held at St. Mary's church on Aug. 11. The Rev. R. Dale Magoon officiated. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Toth, the former Rose Iliescu, was born in Cleveland July 20, 1917, and on May 20, 1939, was married to Mr. Toth. They always made their home in Cleveland until moving to Hayes township in January 1976. She was a member of St. Mary's church.

Surviving are her husband; a son, George F., Jr., of Elyria, Ohio; two daughters, Mrs. Jacob (Pat) Lutz of Ironton and Mrs. Joseph (Donna) Joncsik of Elyria, Ohio; 11 grandchildren and a sister, Mrs. Paul Brigodier of Parma, Ohio.

The Winchester Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

MRS. GENNETT

Funeral services for Mrs. Richard L. (Marge) Gennett, 60, who died Friday evening at her Marion township home, were held Monday at the Winchester Funeral Home. The Rev. Austin Regier officiated. Interment was in the Brookside cemetery.

The former Margaret E. Lyons was born in Chicago Aug. 19, 1915, and was married to George Schmidt. They came to Charlevoix in the early 1950's and lived in Norwood township. library to the K-5 building where the third and Kindergarten room will be utilized. Pre-schoolers in the Title 1 Program will be enrolled in the nursery school and, in addition, will have the services of a home consultant. Space in the library will be used for high school classes should it become necessary.

Supt. McKimmy reported that boilers in the three schools have been checked, a program of boiler maintenance established and that they would be in readiness for the opening of school.

The rate of compensation for substitute teachers in the Charlevoix Public Schools was set at $27.50 per day. This is up $2.50 from the amount paid for the past three years and is comparable, to that paid elsewhere in the north.

It was also reported that with the defeat of a millage issue in Rogers City, the football game with the Hurons had been cancelled and efforts are being made to find a team to fill the cancellation. The outcome of the Grayling millage vote will also determine if this school will cut its athletic program causing other cancellations. The opening date of Sept. 10 has been filled with a game with Onaway. The filling of the Rogers City date is contingent on the Cadillac millage vote which, if it fails, will allow a game with Reed City.

The board approved the family income criteria for free and reduced school lunches.

The names of five doctors were added to the list of those authorized to give school employees physical examinations. They are Dr. Dennis Joy, Dr. James Geis, Dr. Reed K. Friedinger, Dr. Merle O. Plagge and Dr. William E. Mosher. The name of Dr. Lorenzo, who is no longer practicing in Charlevoix, was removed from the list.

The bid submitted by the Maxbauer Creamery for milk during the school year and that of Oven-fresh for bread, being the lowest of those received, were accepted.

Tuition Rates Set

Tuition rates for the 1976-77 school year were set Monday by the Charlevoix Board of Education.

They will be $1,066 for elementary students and $1,226 for secondary students.

This is an increase from $274 and $350, respectively, charged last year.

The rate is set under new guidelines established by the legislature whereby a school district must charge in tuition the amount it costs the district to educate a child at a given level.

At this time, there are only two known tuition students in the school system.

"I still like to go to circuses," he continued.

Fomco Promotes Peterson, Bogart

L. W. Fochtman, President of Fochtman Motor Company, announced today the appointment of Ronald Peterson as Supervisor of six of its Northern branch stores.

Ron has been manager of the Fomco store in Charlevoix since its opening in 1960, and is well qualified for his new responsibilities. Ron and his wife Betty have seven children and are residents of Charlevoix.

Included in the announcement is the appointment of Richard Bogart as manager of the Fomco Charlevoix Store. Dick has had several years experience in the automotive parts replacement business and has been assistant manager at Charlevoix for the past year. Dick and his wife Sheilah reside at Route 1, Charlevoix.

Fochtman Motor Company owns and operates eleven stores in Northern Michigan, distributing automotive, welding, industrial and maintenance supplies and equipment.

In making these appointments, Fochtman said, "This is a continuance of our company policy to find management personnel from among Fomco employees whenever possible."

Home Ec Teach Hired for HS

FAITH HEALS THE WOUNDS OF HUMAN DISCORD

Many of us have undergone the painful experience of having a beautiful long term friendship suddenly broken off, due to a misunderstanding, or perhaps because of a minor incident that became magnified out of all proportion. Whatever the cause, we erect a barrier of wounded pride and a feeling of betrayal that would seem to rule out any possibility of reconciliation. However, the Bible tell us to love our neighbor and to see the good side of our fellow beings. So, try to remember all the good times together and the kind, thoughtful deeds of the past, and perhaps there's a chance that the severed relationship might be mended. At the Church of your choice you will learn that it's at least worth a try.

> "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."
> — Matthew 18:15

> Quarrels would not last long if the fault was only on one side.
> —Francois, Duc de la Rochefoucauld

PBB: Area Families Find Their Lives are Changed by the Michigan Cattle Crisis

Editors Note: It is almost two years since the Courier reported the first incidence of animals in the area being contaminated with poly-brominated biphenyl (PBB).

This chemical, a fire-retardant substance, was accidently mixed with animal feed and sold to farmers in a large portion of the state. The result was the poisoning of tens of thousands of cattle, hogs and chickens with crippling and other physical problems eventually followed by death in a large percentage of cases.

It took several months to determine what was causing the sicknesses and deaths. When the culprit was determined to be PBB, the Department of Agriculture started to quarantine the sick animals and bury the dead. It also set up standards for the sale of meat and milk from PBB-contaminated animals.

By PEG OHLE

Today, the whole PBB incident is a bad memory for area farmers who were affected.

Although they have received some compensation for their losses from Michigan Chemical Company (manufacturer of PBB) and Michigan Farm Bureau (distributor of the contaminated feed) their experiences have had varying effects upon their lives. Some of them are still worrying about the large quantities of contaminated meat, milk and eggs they consumed. Do they still have PBB in their bodies?

The Brittons

The Charles Brittons of Norwood Township have quit farming.

"Our losses set us back five years and we couldn't see starting over again," Mrs. Britton says.

So far, the Brittons have had no medical or physical problems which they think could be traced to PBB.

The Paul Burks of East Jordan have replaced their herd and now have 86 milking cows. They had to borrow money to free their barns and lots of PBB contamination and to start their new herd, but Michigan Chemical and Farm Bureau paid the interest on the borrowed money.

They have not noticed any effects of PBB on their bodies, either.

PBB contamination put the Alvin Graces of South Arm Township out of the retail meat business. They rebuilt their beef herd but are still having trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Grace

Paul Burk

Doug Warner

"We can't sell at retail any more. We have to sell at auction and the prices are extremely low. Others say the same thing," Mrs. Grace reports.

"Even a farmer who never had PBB can't sell. People are afraid to buy the meat."

The Graces have their house up for sale and are subdividing part of their farm.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Grace have had their bodies tested for PBB contamination by a toxicologist in Grand Rapids. Last January Mr. Grace tested seven-tenths of a part per million and Mrs. Grace three-tenths of a part per million. However, a later test showed a decrease in these levels.

The Warners

The Doug Warners of Norwood Township, who lost over 200 dairy cattle, are now in the process of rebuilding their herd.

Mrs. Warner says they are getting along "pretty well". She is expecting her first baby shortly and admits she is apprehensive about its well-being because of the PBB which has been found in her body.

Last week the Courier talked with representatives from the State Department of Public Health and the State Department of Agriculture to find out what they were doing about their on-going studies and efforts to eradicate PBB entirely.

Department of Health

Dr. John Isbister of the State Department of Health says his department is in the process of compiling data in a long-term study of the effects of PBB on humans.

Tests are being made of various body organs of persons known to have been contaminated with PBB and results of those tests tabulated. Particular attention is being paid to women who become pregnant. All physicians attending women who are known to have PBB in their bodies have been told to advise new mothers against nursing their babies because PBB is carried in breast milk.

The special medical team from the East which has been invited to study the effects of PBB on the human body will arrive in Michigan some time in October ("after the harvest is over") to start its work. It is planned to take a sample selection of persons from all over the state who are known to have been contaminated with PBB to the Kent Community Hospital in Grand Rapids for tests and observation at that time.

Department of Agriculture

Donald Islieb, Chief Deputy Director of the Michigan Department of Agriculture, reports that the Department is working in several directions on the PBB problem.

The most conspicuous activity is the survey of all farms on which PBB was found but which were never quarantined because of the low level of contamination. There are about 1,000 such farms in the state and most of them have been visited to inquire about any animal health problems that might exist. The Department is trying to identify farms where the proprietor wants assistance from someone other than his own veterinarian. Among the first 850 such farmers contacted, 95 asked for the Department's help.

"Our initiative in offering our services personally is unique," Islieb said.

"All veterinarians know this service is available but by contacting farmers ourselves we are stimulating response."

The Department of Agriculture has also been making a survey of all foods which might possibly contain PBB–milk, meat and eggs. The milk survey includes all milk producers in the state, and, according to Islieb, is confirming previous findings of the Department that milk being sold does not contain PBB.

Charlevoix Looks for Federal Funds

The Charlevoix economy may receive a boost from federal public works funds, the Charlevoix City Council learned Monday night.

Improvements to the city water system may qualify for 100 percent federal funding under the new public works bill recently passed by the U.S. Congress. Congress overrode President Ford's veto of the public works bill and made approximately $114 million available to Michigan for use in the improvement or construction of public facilities.

Carl Lehto of Gourdie, Frazier and Associates, Inc., a Traverse City engineering firm, told council members that the public works monies will be granted to municipalities on the basis of unemployment figures for the various areas and on the basis of the number of jobs that work projects will create in the community. He said Charlevoix may qualify for the funds under these two guidelines.

Lehto suggested that the council consider applying for grant monies for eight improvements to the city water system. These projects include: raising pumps above flood level at the water intake, insulating the variable speed pumps at the water intake, constructing a new elevated water tank for the north side, replacing the existing elevated tank, checking the value conditions on the water distribution system, installing a second electrical river crossing at the new water main crossing, completing the emergency power circuit to the sewage treatment plant, and extending the sanitary sewer system to the industrial park.

Lehto said the Northwest Regional Planning and Development Office expected about $2 million to be available for the public works projects in the 10 northwest counties.

"When I talked to the office today, however, they said they had already received requests for the grant monies that amounted to about $40 million," Lehto said. "But I don't know how the other communities will stack up under the guidelines set for awarding the money."

"Basically we'd be fools not to at least apply for the funds," Joe Morris said as other council members nodded in agreement.

No action was taken on the proposal, however.

"I think we should wait until next Monday's meeting of the committee as a whole before we make a decision whether or not to go ahead with this," Mayor Ed Hansen said. "I'd like to see if we can get any further indication on what our chances of getting some of this funding may be."

The city council has been considering applying for funding for the eight projects since 1974. The council had also investigated applying for a Farmers Home Association (FHA) loan.

In other action, the council discussed a request from the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners to do something about the traffic problem caused by the raising of the Charlevoix bridge. Council agreed something should be done and the seven members seemed to agree that next summer the 12 p.m., 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. openings would be eliminated. No final action was taken on the proposal.

Council also considered revising the parking ordinance to make the tow-away hours in the Clinton Street Parking Lot from 2:30 a.m. to 6 a.m. Council decided to keep the tow-away hours in the lot consistant with other parking area tow-away hours, which are from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m.

Council also paid bills and payroll amounting to $106,446.01.

Sheriff Waits for Autopsy

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department is awaiting the results of an autopsy to determine the cause of death of a Petoskey man, Thomas M. Sheltraw, 20, whose body was recovered in knee-deep water in Lake Michigan six miles south of here at Clipperview Sunday afternoon.

The autopsy was ordered by Dr. John Lignell, deputy medical examiner following the death of the young man who had been playing ball in waist-deep water when he disappeared. His friends, Jerry Winegarden and Matthew Most, both 19 of Petoskey, thought he had dived into the water and swam away, as he sometimes did, until they failed to locate him in the water or on the shore about 15 minutes later.

They returned to the Sheltraw cabin a short distance down the beach to get his father, Leo Sheltraw, and the three began a concerted search which resulted in locating the body in shallow water a short distance from where he was last seen. Artificial respiration was started at once and the Charlevoix City Ambulance was called. However, resuscitation efforts by the ambulance personnel proved futile. Because of the circumstances surrounding the death, an autopsy was ordered.

Funeral services for Sheltraw, a 1975 graduate of the Petoskey High School, were held at St. Francis Church in Petoskey Tuesday morning. Interment was in St. Francis cemetery.

He is survived by his parents and a sister, Sarajane.

Council Considers Zoning

Several zoning matters were discussed by the Charlevoix City Council Monday night.

Council learned, following a check of the Grey Gables building permit, that the new construction at the restaurant is completely within the limits of the building permit.

The council had received some complaints that the construction was too close to the property line on the east side of the property.

The council also discussed two houses on West Dixon which are becoming run down. The building code department is still attempting to reach the owners of the homes to see if they plan to make improvements on the buildings.

Under a city ordinance, decrepit homes may be ordered razed.

Fowlerville Plans Band Concert

The Fowlerville Marching Gladiators, who are attending a band camp at Camp Seagull this week, will present a program in East Park at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Their conductor, Mell Coleman, said 27 of the band's 41 instrumentalists and 14 flag, rifle and command personnel were attending the week-long camp which has a staff of five adults.

Instructors are Heather Hampton, assistant director, Gary Sutton of North Branch High School, camp director, Laura Gault of Western Michigan University, flag instructor, Roger Stevens of Michigan State, percussion instructor, and Mark Brock of Western State.

The public is invited to attend the concert and see this group in action.

Parking

It seems like the City of Charlevoix is taking everyone for a ride with this new parking lot. A campaign that's making everyone the loser. The people lose first, because they either have to park far from town or pay fifty cents to use a parking lot. The city loses too. They get played for the clown when no one uses the lot. It's silly too, when you can park your car on Bridge Street the whole day and only pay a 50 cent ticket. I certainly hope the city sees their foolishness soon and sets a reasonable price on parking.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

I suppose I should feel flattered that something I nurtured and cared for should be so admired as to be worthy of taking - but, instead I am sad. Sad because the Spider Plant you took from our porch was a gift from our daughter who also made the macrame hanger in which it was suspended. I am also sad because you found it necessary to take when I would gladly have given you slips or pots for the asking and been flattered that I had something to share. One of the delights of caring for a home and its surroundings is being able to share the fruits of our labors with passersby, but by your thoughtless act you are denying others this pleasure. Should you have a change of heart and wish to return the plant, or at least the hanger, no questions will be asked and you will restore my faith in human nature and my belief that Charlevoix (and its people) are beautiful! A Mason Street resident.

Bill

I have a light bill that says we are in arrears for $17.66, and they are going to turn our lights off on Aug. 22, if we don't pay it. I'd just like to know why the City of Charlevoix can shut my lights off for that small amount when the condo's in Charlevoix owe $2,000 and $3,000. I would just like to go to a council meeting and bring this thing up. It's kinda getting like "Tricky Dick Nixon" up here in this northern country.

Kids

I would like to make a comment to the kids that let our rabbits loose Friday night or early Saturday morning. They may have thought it was a great joke to let the rabbits out of their pen and run around the yard, but I would like them to know the outcome of this. These are two rabbits that my children got for Easter, and they are family pets. They come in the house, and this is the only time they are allowed out of their pen. We have a big German Shepherd who likes the rabbits, so the rabbits weren't afraid of dogs. We were awakened, along with three of our neighbors, at 7 o'clock Saturday morning by screaming of one of our pet rabbits. We ran out to find one rabbit apparently injured, and put it back in the cage, and then proceeded to find the other, wandering around. The outcome was that a dog did attack our rabbits, and killed one. I don't think that was much fun to let the rabbits out. Maybe the parents of the children on the north side area will read this and talk to their children and perhaps the children will think twice before they let pets loose again.

THE IRONTON FERRY, so familiar to travelers along the south side of Lake Charlevoix, has recently been listed in the State Register of Historic Sites. The ferry, which was drawn by horses when it first started operation in the 1880's, is one of more than 900 Historic Sites in Michigan. An official marker will be erected some time in the future.

2 Residents Head C/F Drive

Mrs. Thomas Bickersteth and Mrs. Thomas J. Schaperkotter, both of Charlevoix, have been named chairmen of the local 1976 Breath of Life Campaign to fight children's lung diseases.

They will lead volunteers in raising funds during September to support programs of research and care for children suffering from cystic fibrosis, severe asthma, chronic bronchitis, and related lung-damaging diseases.

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation reports that CF is the number one genetic killer of children and affects one out of every 1,500 babies born each year. It occurs when a child inherits two genes for the disease, one from each parent.

The Foundation says that some 10 million Americans and over 400,000 Michigan residents are carriers of the CF gene.

Although incurable, CF can be treated. Because of advances in treatment, more than on-half of all CF victims are now living past age 18. Fifteen years ago, most children with CF did not reach school age.

Special Bus Run Planned

Each kindergarten student residing in the rural areas of the Charlevoix School District will meet his bus driver and explore the bus he will be riding on the morning of Friday, August 27, Supt. James A. McKimmy has announced.

Charlevoix bus drivers will drive to each kindergarten child's home in the rural area of the district during the morning of Aug. 27 to meet the new student. The driver will be prepared to tell the new student what time to expect the bus to arrive when school opens and where he should wait to meet the bus.

In announcing these plans, McKimmy explained that this is being done to help each child overcome any fears he might have about riding the bus to school. Kindergarten students experience many new and exciting activities when they attend school for the first time. This introduction to the driver and the school bus should help the new student to be prepared to be comfortable on the bus.

McKimmy went on to explain that these early experiences in school contribute to the student's attitude toward school for many years. The personnel and Board of Education of the local schools are attempting to help each child have a very positive and beneficial experience during his school years.

Parents of kindergarten children who expect to ride a bus to school are encouraged to be at home the morning of Aug. 27 to meet the driver and his bus. The driver will come to each child's home to discuss with the child and the parent when and where they cah expect to meet the bus.

Parents are asked to bring their kindergartners to school on the first day, Wednesday, Sept. 8.

Special Lecture Planned At Charlevoix High School

The Christian Science Society of Charlevoix will sponsor a free lecture Tuesday evening, August 31, at 8 p.m. in the Charlevoix Elementary School.

Norman B. Holmes, of Chicago, a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church in Boston, will speak on "Finding God's Direction."

He has lectured extensively throughout the United States and Europe and in many countries in Southeast Asia and the Middle East encircling the globe twice. Everyone is welcome.

From High Above

By KEN WINTER

BAY SHORE—Air Force Major Ken Phail was leaning against the wall with his arms folded and resting against his chest when the radio chatter started squawking through the speakers.

Standing alone in the dark trailer compartment, the tall, well-built operations officer intently watched the radar screen in front of him.

The light from the screen lit up the face of the operator, who was busy adjusting knobs located around the screen.

The radio chatter was broken with a high shrill. Then there was silence.

If the situation had been real, Major Phail would have been witness to the bombing of Bay Shore.

FLIGHT RUNS are marked on maps so pilots can visualize their degree of accuracy.

But, like so many other times, the one-time B-52 pilot was watching an electronically scored bombing that really took place only on the television tube-like screen in front of him.

Almost like one continuous soap opera playing every day from 12:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., the Air Force major watches bombers swoop out of the clouds and make a run over the tiny trailers perched in the hills between Charlevoix and Petoskey. Unlike a television soapy, he watches a situation that could be very real.

Major Phail is second in command of the U.S. Air Force's First Command Evaluation Group, Detachment 6, in Bay Shore.

To those driving along scenic Lake Michigan on U.S. 31 between Charlevoix and Petoskey, the installation looks like two giant white golf balls up in the hills with several small buildings surrounding them.

For others who live around the location, the facility sometimes represents a source of irritation with low level bombers constantly flying above their homes in the afternoon and evenings.

"This is the only one around for several hundred miles," Phail said about the installation.

"In fact, it's the only one for several states."

Headquartered in Barksdale, Louisiana, the Bay Shore detachment evaluates the bombing capabilities of Air Force planes from across the United States with its sensitive electronic radar equipment.

According to Phail, the tiny installation, which is composed of a half dozen mobile trailers with permanent foundations, serves basically two purposes.

First, it serves as an electronic target area by which bombers can measure their bomb capability and accuracy without ever releasing a weapon.

Secondly, the site gives bombers a chance to practice penetrating an electronic defense area at low levels.

With the equipment at the installation, Air Force personnel can determine the exact moment a weapon would have been released as well as the plane's speed and altitude.

Established in 1963, the site not only serves air craft from the Air Force, but also the Royal Canadian Air Force, the U.S. Air National Guard and the Navy.

While Bay Shore is one of several permanent sites scattered across the United States, there are also three mobile units and three overseas locations.

The mobile sites, which are generally located in sparsely populated regions of the Midwest and West, are designed to give pilots a new environment to practice radar navigation and work with a target unfamiliar to them.

Phail says the overseas locations were set up to do the exact opposite of those here. Overseas locations practice directing bombers to targets from the ground.

"This was widely used in the war in Southeast Asia," the major said.

Michigan Judges Should Not Have To Run for Election

Michigan State Bar President George E. Bushnell recently charged that the state's current system of judges running for office is "insidious and invites judicial blackmail."

The president of the state's 15,000-member Bar called for taking politics out of the courtroom in order to keep Michigan's judiciary "strong and independent."

With only a few exceptions, we think Bushnell's contention has some merit.

In a recent release, Bushnell warned that unless Michigan changes the way judges are selected and compensated, it will lose "the competent, dedicated men and women it needs to maintain the quality of justice."

"We treat our judicial officers adominably," he continued.

"We make them campaign for judicial posts that involve no issues on which to campaign, and we force them into contests of dollars and name recognition."

Bushnell says the hard fact is that campaigns are expensive.

"In most races, the candidates' campaigns are financed by backers who stand to gain from the election of their candidate," he continued.

"In judicial races, they are financed, to a large degree, by lawyers who dare not run the risk of turning down a candidate before whom they might appear."

While we do not completely agree with Bushnell's allegation that this invites judicial blackmail, we are concerned about the precarious position in which this places both judge and lawyer.

Bushnell asserts that judges are paid well below what experienced, knowledgeable lawyers receive in private practice. Moreover, lower court judges are often at the mercy of the local political units that supplement their state salary.

"As a result, the only lawyers willing to undergo the financial sacrifice, the loss of privacy, the politicking, and the indignities of campaign fundraising are the totally dedicated--or the inexperienced, to whom the compensation is a step up rather than a step down," he said.

"The people of Michigan are entitled to a judiciary that will comprise the most qualified--not necessarily the most popular--a judiciary above the political system, a judiciary with the necessary strength and independence to protect the rights of the public."

Bushnell urges adoption of an appointive merit system--whereby the Governor submits a list to the State Bar for its comments, then makes his appointment from those recommended by the Bar as qualified, the current method used to fill vacancies, except add members of the public.

"While input from lawyers is essential in evaluating a candidate's judicial qualifications, lawyers realize full well that there are many facets to the evaluation process and that the public has a crucial stake in the process," Bushnell stated.

"That is why such a panel, involving equal public participation, has long been recommended by the Bar."

Bushnell says a number of variations are now being successfully used throughout the country.

"The appointive system works for Federal judges and it will work just as well for Michigan judges," he said.

Bushnell claims that under the elective system, there are no restrictions on the competency of those who seek judicial office.

He says that few voters are knowledgeable enough about the candidates' judicial backgrounds to know who is qualified.

Bushnell also urged readjusting judges' compensation.

He, like ourselves, believes salaries should relate more closely to private practice in the same way that other civil service occupations are now competitive.

Salaries should also be established on a state-wide basis to do away with discrepancies between one community and another, with judges automatically receiving cost-of-living increases as do other state employees.

We are concerned about the future of our judicial system in Charlevoix County. While we are presently fortunate to have a good judiciary system, we wonder just how long it will last under the present compensation judges are paid.

Appointing, rather than electing, Michigan judges may also be another way to maintain the high standards we presently have in Charlevoix County.

We were talking the other day about a strange phenomenon of Motherhood.

A woman starts thinking of a name for her baby from the minute she knows she is carrying one. She will write it out, say it aloud, try it out on friends and embroider it on little shirts. When the baby is born, she will whisper the name softly in its ear, write it on dozens of announcements and file it in the courthouse.

A few years and a few kids later, she can't remember who you are. I've heard mothers go through 10 or 12 names before they get lucky and hit the right one. (Once I wore my PJs wrong-side-out and my Mom thinking it was a name tag called me Dr. Denton for a week!)

Children seem to think there is something Freudian in the entire exercise. The old if-my-mother-really-loved-me-she'd-remember-my-name. This is hogwash. I love Marc...-Mary...Mike...Mil...Mash...Maaa...whatshisname with the same affection as I love Ret...-Bronc...Evelyn...Martha...Trish...you know who are are.

Our neighborhood psychiatrist bears me out. He said there is nothing you can generalize from mothers who can't put a name to their children right off the bat.

It used to be a good day for me when I could remember what I called them for, let alone remember who they are.

In talking with a young married the other day, it was revealed that he was one of seven children and not once when he was growing up was he ever called by his real name. "I guess it was because there were so many of us," he said, "that it confused my mother."

I hated to shoot his theory down but for a long while I was an only child and still got "Sarah...Betty...Mildred...Virginia...Edna..."

Finally, in desperation, my mother would shout, "How long do I have to call you before you answer?"

I'd yell back, "Until you get it right."

"Was I close?" she'd shout.

"Edna was somewhere in the neighborhood."

"I always liked Edna," she mused, "I should have named you that."

"Then why did you name me Erma?"

"Because it was easy to remember."

Ban on Carryouts Could Solve Teen Drinking Problem

By BOB CLOCK

You cannot put tooth paste back in the tube, or the fizz back in soda pop.

But the Michigan Legislature may soon attempt an even more difficult task: Raising the drinking age from 18 to 21.

Four years after Michigan lowered the drinking age from 21 to 18, statistics certainly seem to indicate that young people are having the devil's own time handling their liquor — particularly when they drive.

Between 1971 and 1975, alcohol-related traffic accidents involving 18 to 20 year olds increased 170 percent.

Impaired driving cases among those 21 and under were up 67 percent in 1975 compared to 1972.

These figures come to a shock to those of us who were convinced four years ago that a lowered drinking age was the way to go. Young people seemed to be maturing faster than ever before. The average 18 year old then appeared to be a lot wiser in the ways of the world than I was at 18.

It seemed silly that so many brides and bridegrooms couldn't even drink at their own wedding receptions.

Furthermore, an ungodly number of 18 year olds were laying down their lives in Vietnam. We had admitted our young people into every area of adulthood — including the right to die in foreign wars – but we still wouldn't allow them to sip anything stronger than Coca Cola until they were 21. Ridiculous.

I, for one, was convinced the drinking age should be lowered after receiving a letter from an area mother whose son had been killed in a teen-age drinking-driving accident. She felt that he would still be alive if it had been possible for him and his friends to drink in a bar like ordinary mortals under the watchful eye of the bartender.

And even after the lowered drinking age has proved so disasterous, I still think the dead boy's mom was right.

There is no restraint as effective as a good, sober bartender — one observant enough to know when his customers have had enough and one crafty enough to get the car keys away from the odd drinker who manages to slip unobtrusively into an alcoholic haze.

The problem is that young people don't frequent bars. They really don't. Visit all the bars in Charlevoix and you'll be hard-pressed to come up with six bonafide teenagers. Oh, they'll come in a bar to buy a six pack or a 12-pack to go — along with a couple of bags of pretzels — but they don't stay.

Teenagers are drinking where they have always done their imbibing — in parked cars down at Bells Bay or in the labyrinthe of byways out at North Point. The lowered drinking age hasn't brought them out of their cars and in from the sticks; it has just made it easier for them to buy what they need.

Of course, the legislature is moving in for the kill on this one, egged on by the Michigan Association of School Boards, the Michigan Parent-Teachers Association, the Michigan Association of Secondary Principals and the Detroit Chapter of the National Council on Alcoholism.

School people have gotten into the act because too many teens return to school bombed after drinking their lunches. Educators would like to see the drinking age raised at least to 19 in order to remove the problem from the public schools and they may have a valid point.

However, if I had anything to say about it, I'd draw up a bill which would permit the sale of alcoholic beverages to teenagers by the glass only at friendly neighborhood taverns. No more carryouts. No more driving out to the boonies to get drunk. No more driving home in an alcoholic fog.

I have tremendous faith that the barkeeps and bartenders of Michigan could handle the problem of teenage drinking by themselves if we'd just put the young drinkers within their reach.

Old Song and Dance

Feedback and other strange stuff... Recently I called Hubert Humphrey a fou-flusher for not paying his 1972 campaign debts. This brought me an interesting letter from George Murphy, who used to tap-dance with Shirley Temple.

Murphy was also a U.S. senator for six years, until 1971, a colleague of Sen. Humphrey. I enjoyed Murphy's movie dancing much more than his legislating. Also, I can't help feeling that Murphy's political success probably encouraged Ronald Reagan to move his pompadour out of Death Valley and into the mainstream of the Panama Canal.

So it might be possible to prove this would have been a better world if Murphy had stayed in Hollywood. But that would be a cruel answer to his friendly letter, and I don't feel like being that kind of a twirp today. Instead, let us just ponder the implications of what Murphy had to say about the offensive odor which often seeps out of campaign treasure chests.

You'll recall that Humphrey was stung when I accused him of being a welsher for not repaying more than $800,000 he borrowed to finance his hopeless attempt to gain the Democratic presidential nomination four years ago.

He insisted his hands were clean because the money had been lent to his campaign committee, not to him personally. And he added that the money came from his "personal friends who are very well to do and who are not complaining at all over the fact they received a very small settlement on their loan."

Humphrey further noted that his generous buddies knew when they lent the dough that "there was the possibility that the committee might not be able to repay."

This is what prompted ex-Sen. Murphy to enter the debate. In his letter, Murphy said he would not "lean too hard on a nice fellow like Hubert Humphrey as I am sure there have been many other campaigns which finished in the red and left unpaid bills." But Murphy did have a pointed question about the fundraising tactics used by Humphrey and many other "nice fellows" who might be crooks.

Murphy asked: "Has it been the custom for politicians to 'borrow' funds for the campaign, then at a later date announce that there are no funds available to repay the loan, and the campaign committee goes out of existence, then is it legal for the person who made the loan to write this off as an uncollectible bad debt, thereby taking a tax credit for the amount involved? I do not know whether or not this has actually been done, but I have heard rumors beginning back in the days of John L. Lewis and Franklin Roosevelt that this had become an accepted practice. If it is so, I believe this is one tax loophole which should be closed."

Murphy suggested that I should "pursue and examine" this matter and perhaps tighten that alleged loophole around some well-known necks. He must think I'm an investigative reporter rather than a lazy columnist. I don't have time to dig through perfumed garbage. I have to take my grandchildren to the zoo.

Besides, Murphy admits suspecting the fraud since the 1930s. He was a U.S. senator for six years and he is still in Washington as director of something called American Cause. George is a heavy man with access to velvet closets. Why has he never found out for himself whether a lot of his old buddies are tax cheats?

Oh well. It's probably a job for the most experienced investigators, anyway. The FBI will probably tackle it as soon as it gets a new director. I understand the appointment will go to Shirley Temple.

I really did take my three grandchildren to the Detroit Zoo. It always depresses me to see animals in cages, but my wife insists it is educational for kids. So, under marching orders, there I was last week, back at the zoo for the first time since 1966. That was the year it was agreed we'd better quit taking our own children to the zoo for fear we'd never get them back out.

The zoo has hit upon hard times, along with the rest of the city, and needs help feeding the animals. Clubs, school kids and other groups have been urged to "adopt" some bears or monkeys or whatever. If I agree to buy dinner every day for an ostrich, for instance, the zoo will reward me by hanging a sign near the ostrich, saying I am its father.

Which is fine. But it doesn't do anything for the zoo grounds which are as littered as the freeways, with scraps of paper growing on every bush. The place is 10 times dirtier than it was 10 years ago.

Somebody should adopt a groundskeeper who wouldn't mind wearing a sign saying his parents are 72 Kiwanians.

Secretary of State Richard Austin says his branch managers installed central air conditioning in his home, and put a fence around it, without him knowing a thing about it.

If Austin ever bumps into a pickpocket, he could spend the rest of his life nude and never know it.

Meet Charlevoix

Mary Feindt

Mary Feindt of Charlevoix has an interesting professional career. Here she tells the Courier about her work and how she entered a man's world.

COURIER: What is the name of your company?

FEINDT: Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering Company. It is a corporation. I'm president and my son, Lawrence R. Feindt, and my stepson, C. Fred Feindt, are also members of the corporation. My husband, G. Lawrence Feindt, works with us.

COURIER: What kind of work do you do?

FEINDT: We prepare abstracts of title and write title insurance. We also do surveying. We have a complete tract index of all deeds and mortgages. Really, our work is two-fold, in the first category, we provide abstract plans, title commitments, title policies and title searches. In the second category, we find property lines, do subdivision work, and make topographical and construction surveys. Really, we handle any problems pertaining to land.

COURIER: You're also Charlevoix County Surveyor. What does that entail.

FEINDT: I'm responsible for all county survey records. We would also make surveys for the County if they needed them.

COURIER: What is your salary for this job?

FEINDT: I'm unsalaried. I do it because I want to serve the community and because I have pride in the records. I enjoy my profession and like to do what I can.

COURIER: How and why does a woman enter a profession like yours?

FEINDT: I did because I didn't want to teach school. I graduated from Albion College with an A.B. degree but I always liked math and wanted to find a way to use it. This seemed a good way. I went to the University of Michigan and studied Geodesy and Surveying and later received a Master's degree in Civil Engineering there. When I first decided I wanted to be a surveyor, my father sent me out in the field with a man surveyor, hoping that would change my mind, but it didn't.

COURIER: How long have you been in Charlevoix?

FEINDT: I came here in 1938, three days after graduating from college, to work for R. F. Sloan, who owned the then Charlevoix Engineering Company. I planned to stay for two months. I bought the company from Mr. Sloan in 1944.

COURIER: Are there other women surveyors in Michigan?

FEINDT: I'm the only woman Registered Surveyor in Michigan but there are, probably others in the country. The only other one I have ever met was from Canada. I don't know why women can't take it. The field work is rough but interesting.

COURIER: How has your business changed since you started in it?

FEINDT: The pieces of land were bigger then and changed hands less frequently. With all the sales now, titles and property lines constantly get mixed up. Now we have computers and measure electronically.

COURIER: There's a lot of history recorded in your office, isn't there?

FEINDT: Yes, the chain of titles starts in the 1840's and 1850's. We also have old survey records from the 1840's. We even have some records dating back to when Beaver Island was part of Manitou County.

COURIER: How do you keep track of all those records?

FEINDT: Everything is filed geographically in folders. We can find the description of property by a client giving us a general idea of its location.

To can or not to can may be the question of the season! There was a time when homemakers took great pride in winning blue ribbons for canned goods at County Fairs. Pantry shelves stocked from floor to ceiling glistened with jars packed full of colorful bounty from the orchard, field and garden. A well stocked pantry was a source of admiration from family and friends.

Canning was more than a source of pride and accomplishment. It was hard work and a matter of economies. All that has changed. Or has it.

Fewer families are canning now than two or three generations ago. But inflation, ecology and nostalgia have led many modern homemakers to re-consider the question. Is home canning cheaper today than buying canned goods?

Many homemakers still think so. Some food scientists say "no" or "maybe". Depending on what you preserve, where you get it and how you preserve it, home food processing may actually be more expensive than buying fresh or commercially processed foods.

Family food preferences are a big influence on what you preserve. There's no point in canning green beans, for instance, if your family won't eat them.

Family favorites that are available only during certain season of the year should probably be a top priority. Foods like strawberries and peaches, broccoli and cauliflower vary widely in availability and price. Other foods – carrots and potatoes, for instance – are available at reasonable prices all year long. Preserving these foods at home would not be economical unless the alternative were to lose large quantities of them to spoilage.

The cost of the food you put up is often the biggest factor in the total cost of preserving food at home. The cost very often depends on the source of the food.

Gifts of food from friends with overproducing gardens reduce the costs of preserving foods immensely. Growing your own produce – vegetables and small fruits – is probably the next most economical way to get food for processing. Buying from a pick-your-own operation, a farmer's market or a roaside produce stand during the height of the season is another fairly low-cost option.

Because of the initial cost of a home freezer and the expense of operating it, home freezing is usually more expensive than home canning. Homemakers often prefer freezing to canning, however, because freezing is easier and it preserves more of the fresh-from-the-garden taste.

If the main aim of home food preservation is to save money, canning is the way to go. A study done at Cornell University showed that foods frozen at home cost anywhere from 19 to 53 cents more per pound than comparable foods bought at the supermarket. This was true even if the freezer were energy-efficient, if it were used to full capacity

JULIE WIMMER is pictured here with her three French 'pen pals' with whom she has been corresponding for nearly three years. The trio came earlier this month for a visit. Pictured with her (l to r) Bruno Ollivier, Michel Guyot and Patrick Brun.

Foreign Pen Pals Make A Visit To Charlevoix to See Their 'Friend'

By FRAN MARTIN

Most everyone has a pen pal at one time or another but few ever get to meet such pals, especially when the distance between them spans an ocean.

This, however, was not the case with Julie Wimmer, daughter of the Richard Wimmers, who began with one pen pal when she was a freshman at the Charlevoix High School and ended up with three....all of whom arrived from Lyon, France, earlier this month for a visit.

Julie had 'met' her pen pal when found Bruno Ollivier's name in a French student publication the French class received as part of its course. Later, he introduced her to two of his friends, Michel Guyot and Patrick Brun, who, like Bruno, exchanged letters as a means of bettering their understanding of English.

While pen pals usually dream of meeting some day, Julie was, indeed, surprised when her three letter friends wrote that they planned to visit the United States to see her.

The trio arrived via air in New York early in August and rented a car which they drove to Gaylord where Julie met them and brought them to the home of her parents.

All three spoke English but it was Guyot who had the best command of the language and who served as interpreter when problems arose. Even with him, conversations often turned into a game of charades as the Frenchmen tried to communicate with their English-speaking friends.

All three are 19-years-old, have completed what would comparable to high school plus two years in a junior college in this country and plan to continue their education to become headmasters in an elementary school. However, their education will be interrupted by a year's service in the French Army which is mandatory. They must complete two years in a normal school or teacher's college in order to become teachers.

Ollivier's father is an accountant, Guyot's in the import-export business and Brun's associated with a firm that deals in American-made heavy equipment.

While they were here for 10 days, Julie took them to various points of interest in the area including Mackinac Island, which, at once time, was held by their countrymen. They also toured the Upper Peninsula with Julie and her parents. In addition, she introduced them to American softball and took them swimming, boating and picnicking among other things.

How did they find life here? Much as at home, they said, though they did mention the matter of eating meals. "Here, when you eat, you put all the food on the table...soup, meat, potatoes, vegetables, salad, bread, etc. At home we eat one course at a time...soup, then meat, followed by the other foods but only one at a time." They said their foods were much the same as American fare but that pork was one of their main meats.

They had their own ideas about American corporations that do business abroad. They mentioned the lack of business ethics and, the always-present mention of money and financial gain with no thought of the individual. They mentioned particularly the Lockheed scandal, adding that Americans will do anything to sell their products.

However, they added that the Americans they had met here were not like that, that life in a small town like Charlevoix moved at a slower pace than in the business world and that they liked the people they had met here.

What did they think of American tourists? Almost in unison they described them as "fudgies", the name northern Michigan residents give to transient summer visitors.

Kids Have Good Time at Special Camp Session

YOUNGSTERS FROM both Charlevoix and Emmet Counties are at a special camping experience at Camp Daggett as a result of a program started by the Char-Em Intermediate District.

Forty brave Charlevoix and Emmet County youngsters 'took a big step forward last week.

For many of the 11 to 15-year-olds, it was the first time they had ever been away from home.

And, except for an occasional sniffle or two and a fleeting moment of homesickness, all made it through their first week of summer camp with flying colors.

The youngsters were participating in a special session of summer camp sponsored by the Char-Em Intermediate School District at Walloon Lake's Camp Daggett.

Camp Director Carol VanWoerkom says the camp is designed to provide youngsters with learning disabilities and outdoor experience they might not otherwise have.

Students come to the session upon the recommendation of their teachers, who think the program could be of some benefit.

"In the last three years, the program has grown considerably," Mrs. VanWoerkom said. This year the camp expanded into two weeks.

According to the one-time Petoskey physical education instructor, the camp program places emphasis on growing and living together.

"It tries to help kids have a good self-concept," she added.

"We're trying to get kids to learn how to have a good time and to get along with each other."

Unlike the earlier summer sessions at Camp Daggett, the special session increases the number of counselors to nearly one for every three campers. Most of those working at the camp are students from Central Michigan University.

Program Director Chip Hages, a recent CMU graduate, says he thinks the camp helps kids become better socially adjusted, as well as getting them physically and mentally prepared.

He said the biggest thing they need is encouragement.

"Once we get them involved, they forget themselves and have a good time."

Those attending the session find themselves with a busy schedule that includes everything from learning how to swim, boat, and canoe to learning different crafts and nature skills.

One of the highlights of the week was special Olympics, where youngsters did everything from participating in a balloon bust to running relays, and visiting the Charlevoix Music Theater.

The program was offered at no cost to the children. Some 51 youngsters are attending the session this week.

Susan Potter Exchanges Vows With Richard Miller at Community Reformed

Mr. and Mrs. Miller

Arrangements of gladioli and lighted candelabra formed a setting for the wedding of Susan M. Potter and Richard L. Miller of Brighton on August 14.

The double ring service was solemnized at the Community Reformed Church in the presence of more than 150 guests. The Rev Warren Burgess of the Faith Reformed Church of Traverse City officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. John L. Boss, at the organ, played a program of traditional music, the wedding march and accompanied Susan Boss who sang "If", "Annie's Song" and "The Lord's Prayer".

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Miller of Brighton.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of white sata sole with Cluny and Venise lace trim for her wedding. Fashioned with a stand-up collar and long sleeves, the gown featured a full skirt with a lace trimmed flounce at the hembne and a chapel train. Her fingertip veil was trimmed with matching lace. She carried a bridal bouquet of peach roses, miniature carnations and stephanotis.

The bride's five sisters, wearing gowns of peach organza styled with high necklines, long sleeves, flounced flared skirts with shirred cummerbunds and Chantilace trim, were her attendants. Mrs. Eric Cherry of Petoskey was matron of honor and Judy, Christie, Paula and Amy were bridesmaids. They carried clusters of peach carnations and greens.

Ronald Nightengale of Kalamazoo was his cousin's best man and Stephen Lorenz of Grand Rapids, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Joseph Vogelheim of Lansing, Robert Porter of Lapeer and Wilson Boss were groomsmen.

Mrs. Potter selected a mint green knit gown with a lace overlay bodice and pleated skirt for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Miller, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of pink chiffon with an ivory lace bodice.

Immediately following the service, punch was served at the church Fellowship Hall by Darcy McCandless and Mrs. Harry Potter, aunt of the bride. An evening reception hosted by the bride's parents was held at the Holiday Inn in Petoskey where Mr. Marvin Lautner and Nancy Lautner of Traverse City, aunt and cousin of the bride, respectively, served the wedding cake and Mrs. Lorenz, of Grand Rapids, sister of the bridegroom, attended the guest book. Mr. Cherry sang at the reception and was master-of-ceremonies.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Spring Arbor College and is a Physical Education teacher. The bride attended Spring Arbor and North Central Michigan Colleges.

Wedding guests were present from several Michigan cities.

A rehearsal dinner was held at Leutheuser's Friday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Miller hosted the event.

Grandvue Expansion Starts

By PEG OHLE

The possibility of securing funds under the new Public Works Employment Act for the proposed supervised residential care unit at Grandvue Medical Care Facility has prompted the County Board of Commissioners to proceed with engineering plans for the unit.

The Board has authorized an expenditure of $32,640 for the plans, which must accompany any request for funds from the Economic Development Administration. Total cost of the addition is estimated at $525,000. The project has been held up for over two years while the County sought funds from various federal grants.

If the request for funds is approved by the Economic Development Administration, construction of the building must start 90 days thereafter. However, severe weather conditions could permit a 30 day delay.

Richard Tillen of the Department of Social Services says residential care is a step between nursing home care and an adult foster home or home for the aged. It is for persons who need some medical attention and care but not on a regular supervised basis.

The unit would include four four-bed and five two-bed rooms, to bring the total capacity of Grandvue up to 99 patients. The need for such a unit has been recognized for a long time since Grandvue usually has a waiting list of patients being released from local hospitals because they no longer need acute hospital care, but do need nursing supervision. Residential care is less expensive than regular nursing home care, according to Tillen, and volunteers could be used to provide many of the services.

If funds are not received under the Public Works Employment Act, the County will now have complete engineering plans available at a moment's notice to submit in seeking any other available funds, whether it be by grants, sinking funds, or a bond issue.

4-H Horse Show Underway at MSU

The 1976 Michigan Horse Show, to be held August 24 at Michigan State University, will showcase the best of Michigan's 17,000 4-H Horse club members, says Bob Bellairs, 4-H Program Assistant.

"The Show is open to all Michigan 4-H members with the participants being chosen by their own county," explains Bellairs.

Charlevoix County representatives include: Cinda Crozier, Boyne City; Jackie Alspaugh, Charlevoix; Karen McFall, Horton Valley; Sarah McFall, Horton Valley; Tim Clute, Boyne City.

Areas of competiton include registered horses shown primarily under western equipment, grade horses shown primarily under western equipment, quarter horses, a saddle seat division, a hunt seat division, two rings of ponies and a dressage division.

"This year a special Bicentennial costume class will be conducted in each section of the show. Participants will be required to ride or lead at least one horse, and will be judged on the authenticity of the costume," says Dr. Richard Dunn, MSU Extension Specialist.

The objectives of the 4-H horse show are to promote the learning of horsemanship, to develop leadership and sportsmanship, to increase knowledge of safety precautions, to assist learning about training horses, and to provide an opportunity for statewide competition and sharing of ideas among 4-H members, their leaders and families.

The show begins at 9 a.m. with admission free to the public. All competitions take place in rings at the corner of Mt. Hope Road and Farm Lane. Plenty of free seats are available at the rings.

In addition, an afternoon openhouse for the MSU Veterinary Clinic will be available to all interested persons. The open house will begin in the main auditorium (Room 100) of the clinic at 4 p.m.

For more information, contact Bob Bellairs, County Extension Office, Boyne City, 582-6232.

Families Needed For Students

Families in Charlevoix can have an unusual international experience in their very own homes this year.

"We are inviting people in this part of Michigan to share the spirit of '76 with high school students from abroad," said Sue Brown, area representative of Youth for Understanding, a multinational student exchange program.

Alexander Correa, of Colombia will be coming to the Charlevoix area for the coming school year.

He is part of a larger group of 2560 students from Europe, South America, Africa and Asia who were chosen to travel to and live in American communities for a yyear.

The young people come from diverse backgrounds and lifestyles but they all have a common dream.

Mrs. Brown said that Youth for Understanding needs more host families for the arriving students. Also that 1976 is of particular interest for young people from other continents to observe life in America.

Families who want to participate in the program and care to contribute in this individual way to better understanding and friendship among peoples of our world should contact: Mrs. David Brown, Rt. 2, Box 574, Cheboygan, MI 49721. 616-627-9680.

Bay Shore

Phail added that Bay Shore is presently the only group in the world capable of mobilizing and doing that.

Those operating the Bay Shore installation are in the upper percentile of Air Force candidates, having been schooled extensively on not only how to operate radar, but how to maintain electronic equipment, according to Phail.

Most of those working in Bay Shore are in their early twenties.

"It's really hard for them," Phail said about the disadvantage of not being close to a base with military housing and having to contend with the area's high cost of living.

"If they're married there is really a hardship."

Many confuse the Bay Shore station with early warning radar sites seen elsewhere in Michigan, but Phail says his detachment has the ability only of tracking an area 50 miles wide on a narrow pencil beam width.

The bomb test scoring is usually one of several activities performed by an Air Force air craft when out on a mission that can last from between eight and 10 hours.

The planes, usually B-52's and FB-111's, come from all over the United States, air refuel from a tanker, and travel between 500 to 600 miles an hour.

Leaning Tree

and if electricty rates were low. A poorly operating freezer, inefficient use of freezer space or high electrical rates would push the cost per pound still higher.

Aside from the produce, the main costs involved in home canning are a water bath canner or a pressure canner for low-acid vegetables, jars and lids. Only lids have to be replaced each year so the fixed costs of canning are quite low.

The studies that have been done on home preservation seem to say that you are most likely to save money if you can fruits and vegetables that you get as gifts or raise yourself. Costs rise as you have to buy jars and equipment or produce.

Whether the money saved is worth your time and effort is a decision that only you can make for yourself. Other factors to consider are your know-how and skill and the availability of storage space for canned produce.

Be sure to consider alternatives to canning and freezing. Many vegetables, particularly the root crops, can be stored in buried garbage cans or in pits under mounds of sand. Some — like Jerusalem artichoke and salsify, can be left in the garden, mulched and dug up as you need them through the winter. Other — winter squash, for instance — will store for months in a cool, well ventilated basement store room.

Drying fruits and vegetables is not recommended for Michigan because the state usually doesn't get enough sunshine to make outdoor drying possible. Oven drying requires large amounts of energy and quickly gets to be unreasonably expensive.

In the final analysis the answer to the economics of home food preservation is—"It depends".

If you are interested in doing some of your own computing, as for Extension bulletin E-936—Home Gardening & Canning vs. Buying Canned Goods. For answers to any other questions related to home canning and freezing call the Cooperative Extension Service in your county.

PBB

The surveillance of chicken flocks has shown a great elimination of chickens showing any signs of contamination.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) has been assisting the State Department of Agriculture in collecting and testing random samples of carcasses at slaughterhouses. Testing on hogs was discontinued late last year because the USDA concluded there was no further likelihood of PBB being found in pork.

The USDA also discontinued testing beef cattle carcasses early this year for the same reason.

However, testing on dairy animals has continued because PBB was originally mixed with dairy rations. Surveys during the months of March, April and May showed almost no contamination but those in July and August indicated a small amount of low level contamination. The USDA tries to sample 100 carcasses a month.

The Michigan Department of Agriculture also tests 100 carcasses from slaughterhouses a month as well as 50 cuts of meat taken from meat counters at random in various parts of the state. The purpose of the tests, Islieb says, is two-fold—first, to insure high quality and, second, to share the results with the public.

"I believe it would be difficult to find any food in Michigan with a level of PBB coming anywhere near the guidelines put forth by the USDA," he added.

Those guidelines are three-tenths parts per million in fat in meat and milk and five-hundredths parts per million in whole eggs. PBB in milk can be tested down to one part per billion.

A month ago there were still 45 farms in Michigan quarantined because one or more animal or bird was known to have excessive amounts of PBB. By working with the proprietors of these farms, contamination has been removed from 15 of them, and it is hoped all of them will be cleaned up in the near future.

Islieb points out that his department has no power to require a farmer to remove PBB-contaminated animals or birds from his property but must rely upon voluntary cooperation.

Smokey's friends don't play with matches.

Similar Schedule as Last Year

Charlevoix School Doors Open September 8

Charlevoix Public School doors will open Wednesday, September 8, Supt. James A McKinmy has announced.

School will be scheduled for a full day on opening day, buses will follow their regular routes and cafeterias will be serving meals.

The schedule for the opening of the schools will be the same as in the past with elementary students (K-5) reporting at their building at 9:00 a.m.; middle school students at the middle school (6-8) at 9:00 a.m. and high school students at the high school at 8:00 a.m.

School buses will pick up students on their usual routes and transport students from the designated pick-up points in town. Parents of kindergarten students have been requested to transport their students to school on the first day.

Each elementary school student has been sent a card indicating his room assignment for the coming year. Children new to the system or who did not receive notification should report to the principal's office for assignment.

All students at the middle school should plan to go to 'homebase upon entering school. Homebase assignments for sixth grade students will be posted outside the 6th grade rooms; homebase assignments for the 7th grade will be posted outside the principal's office.

High school student (9-12) are to report to the gymnasium for an assembly and directions at 8:00 a.m.

Type A. lunches will be served in all three schools on opening day and every day. Elementary students will be charged 45 cents per day or $2.00 per week for lunches; middle school students 55 cents per day or $2.50 per week and high school students 65 cents per day or $3.00 per week. ala carte lunches will also be served at the high school cafeteria.

New students in the community who are not registered should register at the building they will attend between Aug 23 and Sept 3. The offices will be open for registration between 8:30 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Early registration will assist school personnel with the transmittal of records from the school the student previously attended. Principals and or counselors will be available at these locations to assist with the selection of classes and other questions about enrollment procedures.

The hours for the Charlevoix Public Schools will remain the same as they were last year. High school students will attend classes from 8:00 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. Students in the 1st through the 8th grades will attend classes from 9:00 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. Kindergarten classes will be held from 9:00 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. for students living in the country and from 12:45 to 3:30 p.m. for students in town.

These schedules have been adopted by the board of education in an attempt to improve the academic and extra curricular opportunities for students. This arrangement provides savings to the board of education in the costs of transportation. Students are able to participate in vocational classes at Petoskey Voc-Ed Center without arriving late at the Center. Extra curricular activities are completed at an earlier hour in the afternoon. A limited number of students are able to remain at the high school for clubs, forensics and other activities and have transportation home on the elementary buses. The age groups riding buses are also more compatible, thus assisting with the security of students on buses enroute to and from school.

For more information concerning the opening of school call the Superintendent's office: 547-6573; high school office: 547-6491; middle school office: 547-4407 and the elementary school office: 547-6583.

College Costs Climb

The bad news, for Charlevoix County parents who have offspring headed for college this Fall, is that the cost has gone up considerably since last year.

According to the various surveys that have been taken, covering some 2,400 colleges and universities across the country, the cost will be 6 to 8 percent higher, on average.

Tuition rates have risen appreciably in most institutions. Room, board, books and miscellaneous equipment and supplies have soared as well.

The bill that is facing Charlevoix County families this year, based upon the number of local students involved, is estimated at $2,675,000. That covers all needs, including transportation and fees.

The overall cost picture emerges from data compiled by the College Entrance Examination Board, the Department of Commerce, the National Center for Education Statistics and others.

The College Board finds that the average outlay at a private four-year college will be $4,568 this year, up 6 percent from last year. Public four-year colleges will average $2,700, up 8 percent.

Private two-year colleges will go to $3,907, a 7 percent hike, and public ones, $2,454, up 8 percent. For commuting students the costs will be considerably less.

The least expensive institutions are the community colleges, attended primarily by commuting students.

Warm Weather Creates Havoc Within County

By PEG OHLE

It has been a hot, dry summer, and the countryside reflects it.

In town, lawns that have not been watered are as brown as November. Flowers are wilting and shrubs and trees are beginning to lose their leaves. Vegetable gardens are a sad reminder that not much canning will be done this year – this year, of all years, when there are plenty of canning jars and lids.

Rainfall for the month of July was only 1.86 inches (measured by the Charlevoix Sewage Disposal Plant) and through last Friday the August total was only .82 inches. This is about a third of last year's rainfall during the two months.

Temperatures recorded at the Coast Guard Station last week showed the lows ranging in the high 60's all week until Friday, when 70 degrees was the low for the day. High temperatures were all in the 80's, with Friday being the hottest day, 88 degrees. And this is on the waterfront. Inland there were many individual readings in the 90's.

Charlevoix and adjoining Antrim and Emmet County farmers have been hard hit by the drouth and it is expected the three-county area will be declared a "disaster area", which would enable qualified farmers to apply for low-interest loans to keep them in business.

These loans now replace outright grants which were previously available in drouth-stricken areas.

Feed crops such as corn and alfalfa have been severely affected, according to Ed Rebman, Charlevoix County Extension Director. So have pasture lands, especially in the lower areas, which means that some beef farmers may have to start supplemental feeding.

Antrim County Extension Director Burton Stanley reports that the drouth, on top of last spring's severe late frost, could cause serious trouble for orchardists.

The frost cut down the size of the cherry crop and the drouth will probably prevent later fruit such as apples from maturing to normal size. The drouth could also affect future production from the trees and harm young trees.

Vegetable growers, even those who can water their gardens, are suffering from the drouth.

Mrs. Pearl Rowe, who with her husband, John, operates Rowe's Gardens in Charlevoix, says,

"Our corn is dried up, our beans dried up before they were half picked, the carrots are gone, and we stopped digging potatoes a month ago."

Constant watering has kept some of the Rowe's other crops alive -- tomatoes, cucumbers, zucchini, and beets. "But the water just keeps things alive, it doesn't promote growth," Mrs. Rowe adds.

The Forest Fire Division of the Department of Natural Resources in Boyne City reports that there have been no forest fires in the area this summer but there have been several grass fires.

"Hardwood areas like we have here are not as susceptible to forest fires as areas where there is a lot of jack and red pine," the DNR explains.

However, all persons desiring to burn rubbish outdoors at this time must obtain a permit from the DNR to do so.

With it all, we are lucky in this area. A forest fire covering over 100 square miles raged through the pine forests of the Upper Peninsula last week. The smoke was carried by a Northwest wind into the Charlevoix area and mixed with the humid air to form a low-hanging smog last Thursday.

Cruelty

I would like to know if there is some kind of law against the cruelty of dumb animals and damage to private property. For instance, all winter I have put up with people's dogs in my yard and no matter how many times I call the dog catcher, he never showed up. And then somebody turned in my dog for running loose and when it was checked out it showed it was not true, that my dog was chained. I was a bit upset. All winter when I called nothing was done, but the minute my dog was reported, they were here in a second. And the other thing is that we have this dog that has been abused by neighborhood children. He's always been confined to a chain or a pen. He's been stoned, he's been teased terribly. He is now confined in a pen in my yard and I have the only key to the pen. This neighbor boy, a junior in high school, has been bragging to his brothers how he shot my dog in the pen. This has been going on quite a bit out here on Shrigley Road. The latest cruelty was just today when I watched two boys dragging a raccoon behind them, tied by it's hind legs. They road down the road past the houses and the trailers to the end of the road, turned around and threw the animal in the woods, then turned around and left the body there.

My children went and got the animal, and when the boys were confronted by my neighbor, who also was upset by the incident, they said the animal had been dead for 24 to 48 hours. We checked the animal and there was no stiffness in the body whatsoever and one of the deputies from Charlevoix checked it. It had not been run over or shot, the only marks on it were that it had been dragged. Now, I believe that animals should be cared for properly and respect the rights of others. My dog doesn't run in other people's yards, and it has just gone from bad to worse out here on this animal thing. The boys think that it's cute to kill and shoot dumb animals. And when you say something to a couple of the parents, you get remarks like "so what". You have to have a watch dog, because you find things missing from your yard. They say if they catch your dog loose, even on the road, they're going to kill it. It just seems to be an all one-sided affair. I'm concerned and I wonder just how far its got to go before something drastic really happens. I have several problems, a delinquent boy that runs the area and the incidents concerning the dog and this thing about the wildlife. They say you can't keep wildlife, its against the law, and you can't do that with wildlife and so many laws about wildlife, isn't there any penalty for what these boys have done? Won't or can't somebody do something? These people have got to be mentally sick to enjoy this. Today its cruelty to animals, tomorrow it could be cruelty to people.

Thanks

To Editors of Hotline: I am grateful of your weekly column. On two occasions when you have published my "gripe", corrections have been made. Possibly, my complaint wasn't always this good result, but I am glad that somebody else felt it worthwhile to improve the situation. Thanks for the good your column is doing. Local Home Improvement Boom Experienced Charlevoix County residents are going in for home improvements in a big way these days.

They are putting a record amount of money into alterations, additions and general revamping of their properties, a government survey shows.

In the past year, it is estimated, local home owners spent some $2,281,000 on such improvements, considerably more than in 1974.

The findings are based upon a nationwide sampling survey of residential properties, conducted by the Department of Commerce.

In Charlevoix County's regional area, the average expenditure for upkeep and improvement came to $386 per housing unit, according to the figures. It compares with $352 the year before and with $459 throughout the country as a whole. These outlays are exclusive of the normal expenses for home operations.

Some families spent much more than the local average and some spent much less. For those who went in for major improvements, the outlay was considerably greater. Others, who may have done a big renovating job a year or two before, spent smaller amounts in the past year.

The extent to which the modernization trend has boomed in the last few years is indicated by the national figures, which show that $25.2 billion was so-spent in the past year, as against $21.1 billion in 1974 and $18.5 billion in 1973.

In part, the rise was due to the increased cost of labor and materials. To a greater degree, however, it reflects the frustration of homeowners who have been in the market for new homes for a long time but have been unable to find suitable houses at prices they can afford.

The next best thing, they decided, was to fix up the places they have. Many are putting on storm doors and windows and are adding to their wall and attic insulation to cut down on their heating and cooling bills.

Of the $2,281,000 outlay in Charlevoix County for home improvements, the general breakdown indicates that about 44 percent of it was for additions and alterations, 39 percent for maintenance and repairs and 17 percent for major replacements.

Rayders Get Ready

With their opening game with Onaway less than two weeks away, more than 40 Charlevoix Rayders have been on the practice field twice daily. Early practice sessions have been devoted to conditioning followed by fundamentals as Coach Don Carey and his corps of assistants assess their candidates for Varsity assignment.

After losing 15 well-seasoned veterans by graduation, Carey is looking for replacements for all but a few positions on both offense and defense.

Scott Boss is the only returning back on offense with Tom Jones, a tackle and Ed Bourke, a guard, the only other returnees on offense.

Defensive players who are experienced are Matt Doan, senior end, Kip Cinnamon, Brian Williams, Barry Potter, Gary Probert, Ed Mann, Bud

Social Services Plans Move

The Department of Social Services is awaiting the signing of leases and final building plans for new quarters on Highway M-66 across from the Kit Carson Lumber Company.

Richard Tillen of Social Services says that Robert Ouderkirk will construct the new 5,400 square foot building and lease it to the State.

Last January 1 the State assumed responsibility for housing Social Services offices. Previously the County had that responsibility and the offices of Social Services have been in the Charlevoix County Building since it was built in 1957.

"We have been operating with half the space we need," Tillen says, "and are looking forward to the move."

The vacating of Social Services space will make it possible for other county offices now operating in cramped areas to expand.

Because of this need for more space by local county departments, the County Board of Supervisors served the Department of Social Services with an eviction notice last spring.

Joint Commission For Recreation Being Considered

The possibility of creating a joint City-Township Recreation Commission between the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township was the chief topic discussed at a recent meeting of the Charlevoix Recreation Commission held at the city hall.

Present at the meeting were Max Novak who served as chairman, George Lusk, Laurie Lesser, Dwight Boss, city recreation director, Joseph Morris, third ward councilman, and Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix township supervisor.

The idea has been proposed because of the geography of areas involved and the mutual use of existing facilities.

Novak, who chaired the meeting, called it an extremely practical proposal. He went on to say that this would eliminate activities cards and separate fees for the two areas for the use of recreational facilities.

It was felt that each area has certain assets and ideas to lend to the joint proposal. The commission urges public feed back on the idea.

New ball fields and additional tennis courts were listed as priority projects at the present time.

The public is urged to attend meetings of the recreation commission which are held at the recreation office in the city hall at 7 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month.

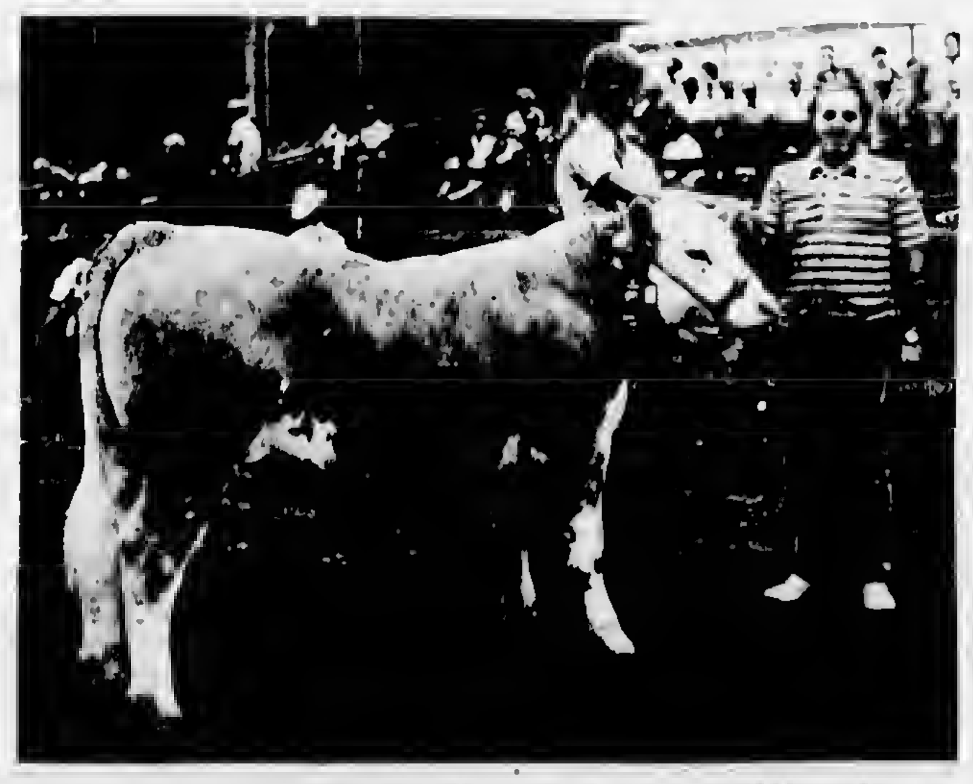
'Herby' Wins At Fair

Fifteen-year-old David Elzinga's steer, "Herby", won the Junior Class Showmanship award at the Emmet County Fair last week.

"Herby" weighed 320 pounds when David bought him last fall. After being fed about five tons of feed, he weighed 910 pounds when sold last week.

The Northwest State Bank paid $1,001, or $1.10 a pound, for "Herby".

David paid his father, Charles Elzinga the original cost of the steer and cost of feed by doing chores around the farm, so the $1,001 is all his.



JIM STOWE of Charlevoix had the Grand Champion Budweiser at last week's Emmet County Fair that went for $1.05 a pound at the 4-H auction. The 1100 pound steer was purchased by Northern Plumbing and Heating, represented here by Lawrence Buday. See page 3 for other local winners.

82-Year-Old Resident Rides Bicycles and Builds Organs

Clyde Folmsbee couldn't buy the organ he wanted, so he's decided to build his own.

Although constructing one's own organ might seem like a feat af its own, there's even something more unique about Clyde. He's 82-years-old.

And besides building an organ, the retired engineer still rides a bicycle around town in the summer and skis in the winter.

Neatly tucked away in the back of his Park Avenue home are the parts and pieces af what Clyde eventually hopes will be his new electric organ.

"I've liked the organ for a long time," the Charlevoix resident said while looking over the wood pieces he's been so carefully working for the last several months.

"I've been playing the organ for churches and clubs since 1912."

When completed, the musical instrument will measure 59" long, 51" high and 33" deep.

Unlike most organs, the one Clyde is building will have some special features not found in commercial products. He designed his own arrangement of stops and console.

"The organs on the market contain a lot of gadgets that don't really do anything," he continued.

"So I decided to do something that was better suited."

For example, Clyde says the notes in his organ will have a separate generator where most commercial organs have only 12 generators for the entire board.

He says that most commercial organs don't have enough couplers, so they don't have the ability of switching from one stop to another.

In addition to these changes, Clyde says he is using switches that operate by merely placing a finger against them instead of having to push a lever.

The Charlevoix man says that his three-keyboard manual organ will also have an electronic memory capability that retains stop positions from one week to three months.

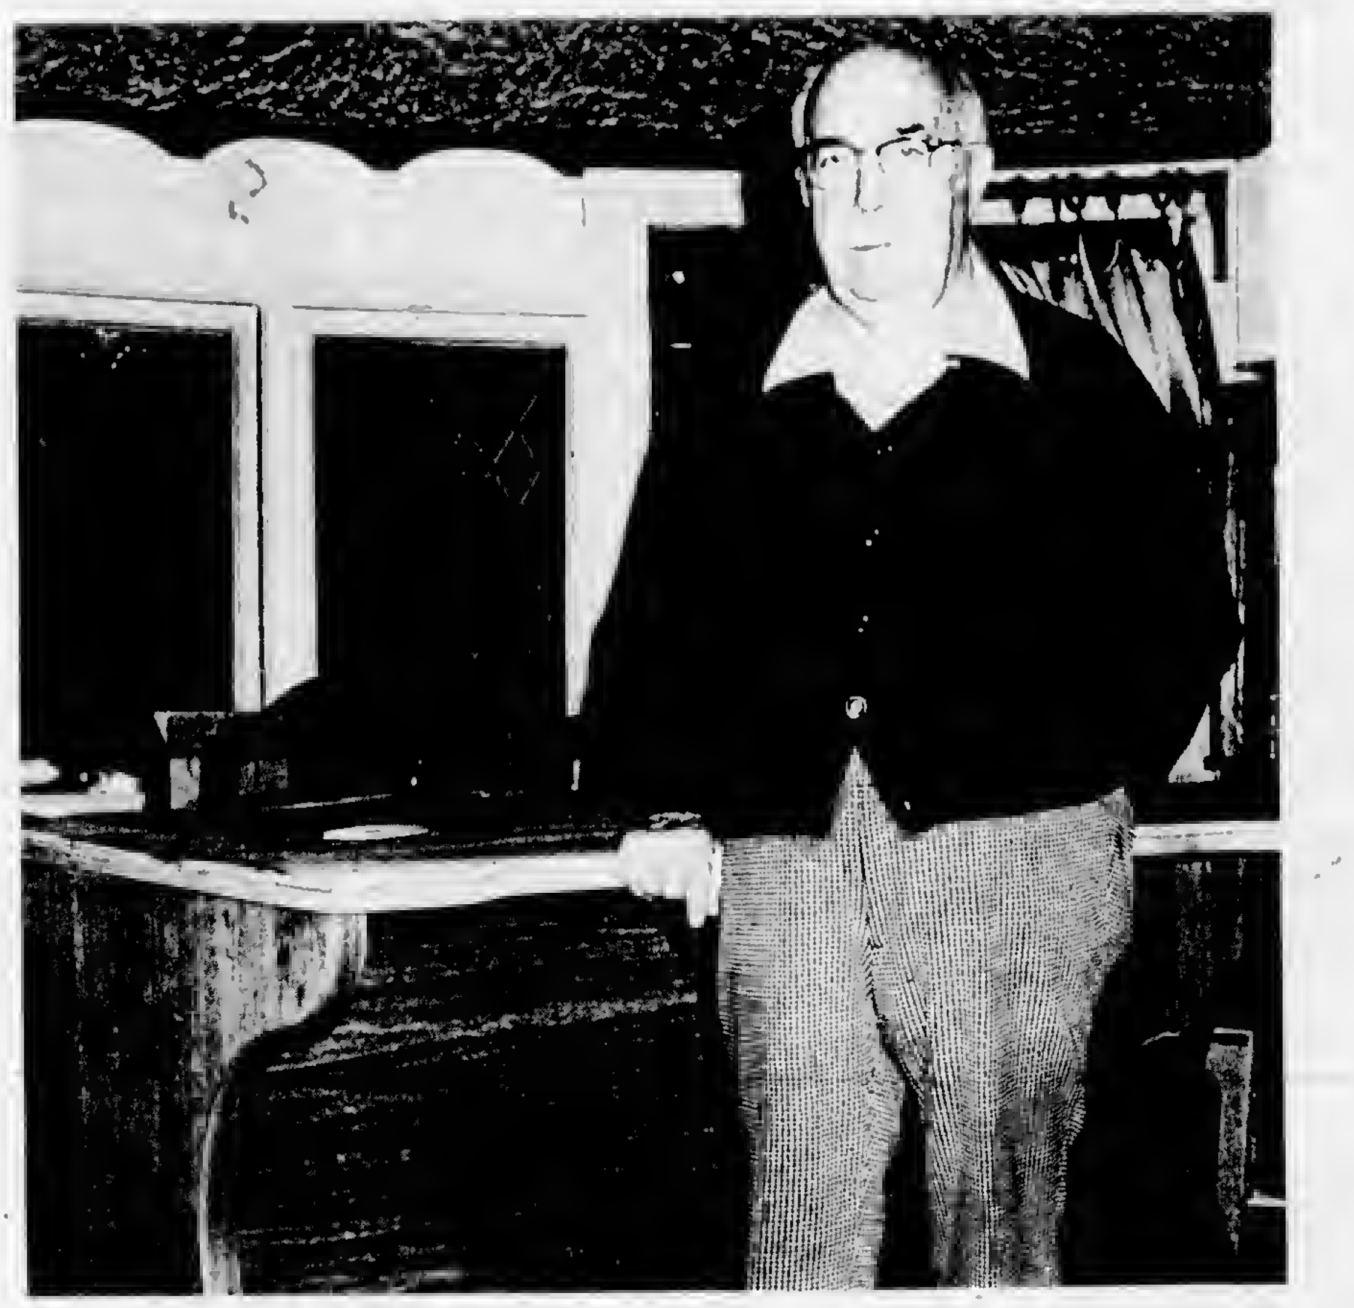
Unable to buy the wood locally, Clyde said he has had to have the walnut shipped from New York, while ordering the electronic parts from the west coast.

Before retiring, Clyde was the chief engineer for the Union Tank Car Company in Chicaga, the largest rail tank car company in the world with a fleet of over 65,000 cars.

Ten years prior to that, he was an engineer for the American Car Foundry in New York and Pennyslvania for 30 years.

Even though he is retired, Clyde says he still does consulting work and holds over 100 patents on various valve designs used by petroleum companies.

The retiree said that the electronic organ part supplier is so interested in his work, they want ta know if he would like to consult for them.



CLYDE FOLMSBEE stands with the new organ he is constructing in his Charlevoix home. The 82-year-old resident decided to build the instrument after he couldn't buy what he wanted.

County 4-H'ers Prepare for Achievement Day on Labor Day

Charlevaix County doesn't have it's own county fair. But the closest thing to a county fair will take place at the Whiting Park Pavilion on Labor Day-Monday, September 6. This is the date and location of the Charlevoix County 4-H Achievement Day.

Achievement Day brings together all of the 4-H members in Charlevoix County who are enrolled in summer project groups. While the fall show is on a somewhat smaller scole than the spring achievement day, it does promise to be a very rewarding day of much needed recognition for these very able young people.

The sampling of exhibits will be quite varied, with something to interest just about anyone. Included will be exhibits in the following: foods, clothing, crafts, flowers & garden vegetables, canning, bowling, conservation, poultry, rabbits, dairy, sheep and goat, pigs, camping and hiking. Volunteer judges with still more to be chosen are: Canning and Clothing-Julia Beard, East Jordan; Bowling-Fred Spears, Boyne City Lanes; Conservation-Bill Grimm, District Conservationist Soil Conservation Service Office; Poultry and Rabbits-Ray Fisher, East Jordan; Flowers-Marlene McLeod, Boyne Avenue Greenhouse.

"Our volunteer judges and leaders are really the backbone of our whole 4-H program." Anyone who likes young people and is fairly knowledgable in a particular area can judge in that area. Bellairs goes on to state, "We are still trying to locate judges for foods, crafts, camping and hiking and pigs."

The Pavilion will open at 8:00 a.m. with judging at 10:00 a.m. Judging should take about 1 hour, and visitors will not be allowed in during this time.

A potluck lunch will take place in the early afternoon. This will be open to anyone. Those interested are asked to bring a dish to pass, plus your own table service.

Anyone who desires more information about achievement day or is interested in judging, should call Bob Bellairs, at the Cooperative Extension Office, 582-6232.

Rec Director Reviews Season

A record number of men, women, and children participated in the Charlevoix Summer Recreation Program, which wound up last week.

Director Ike Boss reports the following number of participants in the various events:

Men's Fast Pitch--90.
Men's Slo-Pitch--144
Women's Slo-Pitch--108
Boys' and Girls T-Ball (ages 6-9)--90
Peanut League (boys 10-12)--48
Pony Tail League (girls 11-14)--48
Swimming lessons program--269
Mt. McSauba day camp--61
Shuffleboard (as of three weeks ago)--2,740
Tennis (as of three weeks ago)--approximately 6,000
Tennis lessons--81
Three tennis tourneys--171
City golf tourney--40
Judo lessons--8
Track and field meet (boys and girls)--110

The Recreation Department is now signing up boys for the flag football program, which will start as soon as school opens.

Later on in the season there will be three volley ball leagues, for men, women, and mixed. There will also be an Independent men's basketball league and an ice hockey program for different ages through adult.

The Recreation Department is trying to secure the gym at the Middle School one night a week for use by men and women who do not want to participate in organized volleyball or basketball.

This winter, for the first time, the Mt. McSauba ski area will be under the jurisdiction of the Recreation Department. There will be a full skiing program there as well as an ice rink for hockey and skating. The rink at the Middle School will probably also be kept open.

Boss, who teaches in Ellsworth during the school year, is hired by the Recreation Department on a part-time basis while school is in session. He says it works out very well because "everything is done after school, anyhow."

There were 26 instructors and counselors under Boss' direction in the Recreation Program this year. Six of these were employed under the Manpower Program and all were either high school or college students.

Ski & Shore Joins Realtor Network

Ski & Shore Charlevoix, Inc. has recently become associated with Inter-Community Relocation, Inc. (ICR), a national network of leading Realtors who cooperate with one another to help transferring individuals find a home in a new city as easily as possible.

Members of ICR are carefully selected and are equipped to give the best and most complete real estate service in their area. Through their membership they can offer relocation assistance all over the United States without charge to the individual who is moving.

Richard Georgi, Relocation Director, coordinates the program in this area and deals directly with the Relocation Director in the corresponding city. Referrals are generally made by telephone and the pertinent information given. Therefore, a relocating family is working with a broker who knows in advance what sort of residence the family is seeking.

County Expands Parking

There will soon be more parking space for persons working in and doing business in the Charlevoix County Buildings.

The County is asking for bids to raze the two houses it now owns, at 204 and 206 Mason Street, to enlarge the present parking lots.

The County bought the buildings two years ago with the idea of using the property to expand parking facilities but has been renting them out since that time.

The new area will provide parking space for approximately 45 automobiles.

HERBY, a 910-pound charollas bred steer brought in the highest price with $1.10 a pound. The steer owned by Dave Elzinga was purchased by Northwestern State Bank in East Jordan, represented here by Elvin W. Pals.

Editorials/Opinions

Labor Day, 1976 -- A Time to Remember

"Not the least in the values of the American individual enterprise system is the fact that it best enables men to produce in part of their time enough so that they may have leisure to draw aside from necessitous labor and develop their awareness of the less tangible but more fundamental values in life, combining the material, cultural, and spiritual."

This almost prophetic statement made 30 years ago by Ira Mosher, former chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers is well worth considering as we celebrate Labor Day.

Average weekly hours for production workers have dropped in those 30 years from 40.3 to 35.9 hours, recorded in March of this year. Average weekly earnings have jumped from $43.32 in 1946 to $170.17 during that period.

True, inflation and the cost of living have moderated, but not obliterated, the value of the higher wage levels.

However, the almost four-hours-shorter work week multiplied by 52 equals almost a month of extra eight-hour labor day holidays a year that we have for the "pursuit of happiness."

Although the national picture may not completely reflect the local picture in Charlevoix, there is some commonality.

As indicated in a recent story appearing in the Courier, Charlevoix's economy is looking brighter.

For years, the entire Northern Michigan area had a seasonal economy that meant trying to make enough money in the summer to last the entire year.

More recently, Charlevoix's economic picture has been looking brighter on a year-round basis.

One portion of Charlevoix income-tourist revenue--appears to be continually growing with the rising popularity of both the color tour season and winter recreation.

But, besides the resort economy, Charlevoix is finding itself with a growing business and industrial base.

Last week's groundbreaking ceremonies for Charlevoix Federal Credit Union has to be a positive sign that area business is doing better.

We have also been witness to the development of a new downtown shopping mall within the last year, as well as the establishment of several new businesses and expansion of others.

Within the last two years, we have seen the development of several new manufacturing businesses in our community with Midwest North and now the expansion of Lexalite.

We can't help but feel that these are all positive indicators that Charlevoix is indeed developing a more stable year round economy to support its residents.

Charlevoix is now more than just the summer resort community it once was and we are looking forward to the benefits the change brings.

Fortunately for those living here, this improved economic picture means the availability of more jobs and services.

With the continued cooperation of industry, labor and government, Charlevoix has even greater promise in the years ahead.

Hopefully, some of this success will also allow more people more time to enjoy some of the characteristics that have drawn people to live here.

Camping?

Salem, Indiana

To The Editor:

On Aug. 1, of this year, we were camping at Bells Bay and our son tried to reach us through friends in Charlevoix, not being able to reach them, he called your sheriff's department, he told the officer who took the call, who he was, also our name, make of truck, color and license number and where we were camped, he also told him what the call was about and that it was an emergency he get in contact with us. He was told that they would try to reach us.

Well, I guess they didn't think that a call about an accident was important as they never contacted us.

Thanks to some good friends of ours, who our son did reach we received word of the call. The call was about a bad wreck and death of a relative of ours.

I am sorry the sheriff department showed such lack of concern for an out of state call, because to us it was very important. I hope they treat the local people better.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Jon F. Gilstrap

Dear Member:

The Charlevoix County Humane Society has received most adverse publicity recently. It was raised by two dissident members, the McKowns, who are unable to resolve their personal differences with the society. All their allegations were aired at a recent public meeting, held August 4, 1976, at the Charlevoix City Hall. Their charges were proven to be untrue.

Mr. and Mrs. McKown's charges were also the subject of an unsigned postcard given general circulation. It should be pointed out that any correspondence or notices from the Charlevoix County Humane Society are signed by a Board Member, as provided for in its charter. Any others should be disregarded.

The shelter is open daily and all Humane Society records, minutes and the recent audit are open to public inspection. If you have any questions, the society can be reached at 547-9711.

Your continued support is needed and appreciated. The next board of director's meeting is August 25, 1976, at Top O' Michigan, Boyne City.

This weekend, Judy and I had the good fortune to spend considerable time with a fellow who is considering moving to Charlevoix with his family. I hope we gave him an honest picture of what Charlevoix is all about, but I'm not sure. Judy and I are sold on the product and sometimes the urge to over sell is impossible to resist.

It helps when talking about the old home town if you will just stick to the facts. For example, it should be sufficient to say that Charlevoix has three supervised bathing beaches during the summer without going into detailed biographies of the lifeguards.

Of course, our friend has two teen-aged daughters and to them lifeguards are infinitely more interesting than beaches.

It is easier to talk about Charlevoix Area Hospital and the new Intensive Care Unit and how everybody on the hospital staff is so friendly we don't even mind getting sick. Our friend is from Chicago where intensive care units are a dime a dozen. But he seemed to like the idea that the nurses, doctors and orderlies at Charlevoix Hospital are such a congenial lot.

Judy and I also did a fine job on Charlevoix's Elementary School, but we were embarrassed at how little we actually know about the high school curriculum. We told him about the emphasis on reading in the lower grades and how the Elementary School is virtually ungraded when it comes to basic skills. We could have bored him for hours talking about our favorite teachers. Thanks to Katie, we also were able to tell him something about the Middle School program.

But I couldn't for the life of me remember if Charlevoix High still teaches Latin or what foreign languages are offered. It seems like there is a Spanish Club, so there must be a Spanish Class. And didn't the French students put on some kind of soiree this spring?

Our friend found it interesting that Charlevoix's population fluctuates so widely between winter and summer. He also was surprised to learn that Charlevoix has been catering to resorters for well over a century.

He asked about local industry and I rattled off the names of our local plants with approximate employment figures. He did some mental arithmetic, added a number of service related jobs in the downtown sector and reported that we must have a quite a number of retirees. Of course, he was right. Charlevoix probably has more than its share of retires, both home grown and imported.

In time, our friend asked the inevitable question: What do you do in the winter?

Naturally, there are a lot of smart aleck answers to that one, but there also are the right answers. The tempo of life, if anything, picks up after the tourists leave when all the townspeople get re-acquainted. Of course there are football and basketball games on Friday nights, public forums of one kind or another elections, snowmobiling, skating, cutting wood, keeping warm. Oh, there's enough to do in the winter all right.

"What about cultural advantages?"

This could be a ticklish one, but it isn't. I think our kids have more events of a cultural nature available to them than I had as a kid in Detroit. There's the Waterfront Art Fair, for example. When I was in school, they used to truck me down to the Detroit Institute of Arts every couple of years hoping that the glitter of the old masters would rub off. I saw a lot of art, but I never met an artist. Our kids have.

Since this summer, live theater is available at Grey Gables and Castle Farms.

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra played at Bay View two weeks ago.

A fellow could pick up a fine classical education if he watched nothing but Public Service Television, now available in northern Michigan.

I hope Judy and I didn't oversell Charlevoix. But it's hard not to do, when you're sold on the product yourself.

Erma Bombeck

The world is full of thrill seekers.

There are the people who endure the isolation and physical discomforts to climb mountains. There are the people who challenge the rapids in small rubber boats. There are those courageous men and women who jump over cars on bikes, and canyons in human rockets.

Me? I ride in taxicabs.

I've been doing it for more than 30 years and have had more than my share of adventure. Do I have a death wish? Of course not. So, why do I do it? Because they're there.

I rode my first cab in Chicago back in 1943. As a teenager, I had won a summer scholarship to Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern. I climbed into a cab at the depot and as it lurched away from the curb, the force threw my suitcase into my kidney, causing me great pain. During my entire trip, my feet never once hit the floor. I knew then I would never have to question or prove my courage again.

The odd thing about people who ride in cabs is they are never given the honor that other heroes are afforded. No one appreciates the fact that you are only mortal. You bleed. You perspire. You experience fear. You have a will to live.

Looking back, I have had some memorable moments in taxicabs. There was the time a driver in Philadelphia was tailgating the car ahead of us at 55 mph while reading his resume to me hoping I could get him a job in advertising somewhere. (I'm rather proud of that one because when the car in front of us slowed down and my glasses landed on the dashboard, not once did I cry out.)

There was a cab ride in Los Angeles I shared with a business man whom I had never met before. We were helplessly tossed together so intimately in the back seat, we discussed our china pattern.

I have also endured the Grand Prix of taxi riding: a ride from the center of New York to Kennedy Airport--in 20 minutes.

In Chicago recently, I climbed into a cab and immediately my throat closed up and I couldn't breathe for coughing. When I tapped the glass, the driver informed me the battery was leaking acid.

Actually, it was a more humane way to travel in a cab...but I missed the adventure.

I'd Rather Skip It

Psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers has written a book called "Better Than Ever," about middle age.

As she approached age 50, Dr. Brothers started skipping rope regularly. As a result, she said, her husband turned into a madly exciting lover.

Today, Dr. Brothers is well known as the newspaper columnist with a paralyzed upper lip whose knees are riveted together for all appearances on TV talk shows.

But I can remember long ago when Dr. Brothers first gained fame. It was in the 1950s, on a TV quiz show. She answered questions about prizefighting and won enough money to go to psychology school and buy a skip rope.

Dr. Brothers drew a lot of attention because no one could understand how a dainty little blonde lady could know so much about the rugged sport of boxing. Later it was revealed that the quiz show was rigged and many of the contestants had been reading their answers off the quiz master's forehead.

There was an immediate suspicion that perhaps Dr. Brothers had not got her numb lip in the fight ring. But the investigators never laid a glove on her and to this day her reputation remains as pure as her posture.

Which is why I don't hesitate to accept her advice. Everyone knows that prizefighters train by skipping rope. Now Dr. Brothers has revealed it is good training for more than boxing.

Last week I mourned by 50th birthday. I wasn't going to say a word about it, partly to make a liar out of a fellow columnist who recently became 40. He said columnists love to reach such milestones so they can write the ultimate truths about cold peas and hot flashes.

This is not necessarily so. When I reached 40, I didn't write a word about it for fear the news might reflect badly on my column photo which then featured a crew haircut received at Fort Knox in 1944.

For a better reason, I was also determined to remain non-public about attaining Number 50. When I was born, my mother was 28 years older than I was. Today the gap has narrowed to about 10 and it is getting embarrassing for both of us.

But then I arrived home from work on my birthday to discover silence was futile. My oldest daughter had painted me a birthday card on a bedsheet and hung it from our carport. The "50" could be read from the next county. The photographer from the local weekly was taking a picture of the giant card, to publish opposite the obituary page.

Later there was a party at the home of Terrible Jean, my sister who is older than our mother. The birthday decorations featured Terrible Jean's drawing of a huge goat chewing on newsprint. The face on the goat was mine. The message, in block letters, was "Happy 50th, You Old Goat."

So it's no use, Mother. Your son is 50 and the whole world knows you honeymooned in kindergarten. And I might as well deal publicly with the terrible trauma of becoming half a century old.

I know it's a terrible trauma because I read Dr. Brothers and the other menopause experts who are continually quoted in the newspapers, usually on the same page as Ann Landers.

They say a man my age has reached a crisis. I should look back at what I have accomplished in 50 years, and own up realistically to the fact that I'll probably never play second base for the Tigers.

Also, I must decide what I am going to do with my remaining years. As a headline on the Women's Page said last week: "Middle Age: Change or Die...Grow or Stagnate."

Younger men are eager to take my place and I must learn to adjust gracefully to the inevitable truth that some day someone else will change the ribbon on this typewriter.

To help him accept middle age, a man needs the help of an understanding woman. Possibly his wife. In their book, "Making It from 40 to 50 (Random House, $8.95), experts Joel and Lois Davitz say the husband needs "her reassurance, her flattery, her total acceptance and encouragement." She must treat him as a "strong, sensitive and powerful man."

Yeah.

I was going to buy the Davitz book for my wife, but then I read a succinct review of Dr. Brothers' "Better Than Ever" (Simon and Schuster, $7.95).

And instead I bought his-and-her skip ropes (K mart, $2.02).

Meet Charlevoix

Ralph Hamilton

Ralph Hamilton

Ralph Hamilton says he's retired but this still-busy man keeps up his long interest in Charlevoix. Here's a little past and present bout him.

COURIER: Are you a native of Charlevoix?

HAMILTON: Yes, I was born here in 1904 near where Meadow Lane now is. It was a racetrack then.

COURIER: Did you go to Charlevoix High School?

HAMILTON: I did but I quit in the 11th grade to go to business school in Grand Rapids.

COURIER: What was your first business venture?

HAMILTON: I had a pop stand on Belvedere Avenue near the Grey Gables. It was half way between the Belvedere Club and downtown so I got the kids coming and going from the Belvedere Club. With their parents' permission they'd sign charge slips and I'd collect at the end of the summer. I made enough money to pay my tuition at business college and I fry-cooked at the old Hermitage Hotel for board and room.

COURIER: Then what did you do?

HAMILTON: I came back to Charlevoix and worked with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for a while. I also navigated a private boat for a millionaire and spent a winter in Oklahoma with him. Then I worked at the Brown and Wallace gas station at the corner of Bridge and Belvedere. It was the first real gas station north of Traverse City. The others were just gas pumps along the sidewalk. I worked there 18 years. Then I went to the County Road Commission as a clerk for 24 years until I retired in 1969. During that time I was chairman for the dedication of the new bridge. I was also on the City Council for eight years.

COURIER: What do you do now?

HAMILTON: I'm still very active in the Kiwanis Club. I just returned from the Kiwanis convention where I was elected head of the Forney W. Clement Foundation, which is supported by Kiwanians. The Foundation has an annual budget of about $80,000 and helps hospitalized children. I've been secretary of the local club for umpteen years, was president once, and State Chairman and Lieutenant Governor of Division 20 (Northern Michigan.)

COURIER: What about the Historical Society?

HAMILTON: I'm treasurer of the Historical Society and have served as president. I helped re-activate the old society a few years ago. Right now we're busy selling Bob Miles' picture history of Charlevoix to raise funds for a museum. We've sold enough books to pay the printing costs so everything we take in from now on can go into the building fund.

COURIER: Do you still have an accounting business?

HAMILTON: I still have a few old accounts but I'm not taking any new ones. I made out my first income tax for a client in 1933.

COURIER: Do you have any hobbies?

HAMILTON: Stamp collecting.

COURIER: What about your early days in Charlevoix?

HAMILTON: My father, Sam Hamilton, started the Hamilton & Sons Boat Company. He was also the first one to turn the railroad bridge over Round Lake. He came here from near Hamilton, Ontario as a child. He started the business with 20 rowboats and built Mackinaw sailing vessels and took parties out. My brothers and I rented out the row boats. My mother came from Kalamazoo as a young woman and worked as a waitress at the Belvedere Club, where Dad met her.

COURIER: What do you remember most about your childhood?

HAMILTON: One of my first impressions is a barefoot kid in a year of the seven-year locusts--their crunching under my feet. I couldn't get home fast enough to put on shoes.

COURIER: You and Mrs. Hamilton recently celebrated your fiftieth wedding anniversary. Were you married in Charlevoix?

HAMILTON: No, Margit and I were married in a little Indian church near Good Hart on August 16, 1926. I had an Indian as best man and a missionary performed the ceremony. It took from 8 o'clock to 11 o'clock because it was High Mass and the Indians sing slowly. We had our wedding breakfast about noon at the Old Trail Tavern near Cross Village. We came back to Charlevoix that night and she went to Cincinnati to work and I went to Grand Rapids. We didn't see each other again until November. She originally came from St. George, Austria-Hungary.

COURIER: Were your children all here for your wedding anniversary?

HAMILTON: Yes, we have three sons and seven grandchildren and they were all here.

COURIER: What do your sons do?

HAMILTON: The oldest, David A., is a professor at Northern Illinois University. His field is Library Science. Nicholas owns the Multi-Copy Service in Traverse City. He worked for the Courier for some time as a printer and Linotype operator. Ralph is retired from the Air Force, where he taught Meteorology, and is now personnal director for Sears, Roebuck in Champaign, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Tillotson

Sue Smith Marries Thomas Tillotson

Sue Ann Smith and Thomas M. Tillotson were married August 21 in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church of Dearborn.

The bride, a teacher in the Charlevoix Schools, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Smith of Inkster. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Tillotson of Ellsworth and works as an orchardist and diesel mechanic.

Dr. John K. Mitchell performed the double-ring ceremony in which the bride was given in marriage by her father. Joyce Chellis served as maid of honor and Bruce Chellis as best man. Charles Bergmann was the usher.

The bride's gown was of white Qiana knit, accented with lace and with a chapel-length train. Her bouquet was of miniature carnations, sonya roses, stephonitus and baby's breath. The maid of honor wore a gown of light blue floral pint nylon accented with ivory lace and a garden hat accented with ivory ribbon.

The bride's mother wore a jade green jacketed knit gown and the groom's mother wore a sea green print gown. Both had orchid corsages.

Music for the ceremony was provided by organ and bagpipes, with the bride being bagpiped down the aisle.

A reception at the Chambertin Restaurant in Dearborn, hosted by the bride's parents, followed the wedding ceremony. The rehearsal dinner was given by the groom at the Topper Club.

Following a wedding trip through Eastern Canada, the newlyweds will be at home in Charlevoix.

Karen Carter Marries Douglas Hull

Karen Lea Carter and Douglas Charles Hull chose the garden at the home of her parents as the setting for their recent wedding.

The Rev. Austin Regier of the United Methodist church officiated at the single ring service in the presence of more than 100 guests on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 21. Arrangments of gladioli in a rainbow of colors and zinnias formed a background for the ceremony. Mrs. Edward Swanson at the organ played a program of traditional music. Heidi Dove, accompanying herself on the guitar, sang "Sans" and "I Will Love You".

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. H. Wayne Carter of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Hull of Walloon Lake.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of polyester organza lined with taffeta and trimmed with cotton lace for her wedding. The gown was fashioned with an empire waist, sculptured neckline, long full sleeves and an A-line skirt with a chapel train. A Dior bow secured her fingertip veil. Her bridal bouquet was of white daisies.

Norman L. Harbison assisted the bridegroom as best man. David W. Carter, brother of the bride, seated the guests.

Mrs. Carter chose a yellow polyester street length gown and white accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Hull, mother of the bridegroom, wore a black and white print floor length gown.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents with Mrs. Valera Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thorp and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bergmann assisting.

The couple will make their home at Wojan Apartments on Stover Rd. The bride will be a Senior at the Charlevoix High School. The bridegroom is employed at the Wharf-side Market.

Wedding guests were present from several Michigan cities.

The Leaning Tree

Pickle packing problems do have solutions. If you have had problems with your pickles shriveling don't feel alone. Shriveling has been a common problem in making pickles this year Part of the reason is the result of a dry growing season this summer

Shriveling in sweet pickles or gerkins can be caused by too concentrated a sugar syrup. It is a good idea to start with a light syrup and build up. If you don't have a recipe such as this in your files you can get one by writing:

Consumer Marketing Information,
836 Fuller N.E.
Grand Rapids, MI 49503

Veteran food scientists also suggest that you use pickles that are very small (one or two inches long) to avoid shriveling. If pickles are larger, cut them into chunks and this will allow the syrup to penetrate the center of the pickle.

If salt is responsible for the shriveling it will happen in the initial soak. It is suggested that you use no more than five or six percent salt solution for the first soak. A five percent salt solution is three fourths cup of salt per gallon of water. If the recipe you are thinking of using has a higher concentrate of salt, look for another one.

Pickles that require soaking call for large containers that are not as readily available as they may have been years ago. This has prompted many people to inquire about using plastic containers. Plastic containers should be of food grade quality, such as are available at wine-making supply stores. Plastic pails, trash cans or other non-food grade plastic containers may contain toxic compounds that could migrate into the brine.

Food scientists are recommending that both fermented and fresh pack pickles be processed in a simmering water bath. In the simmering water bath, the processing time is counted as soon as the filled jars are placed in the actively boiling water. This prevents the development of a cooked flavor and a loss of crispness.

If all this sounds like too much hot work, but you still want some homemade pickles, make freezer pickles. The Extension office has two recipes that are excellent and easy. One requires no salt and is one of the few pickle recipes persons on a low-sodium diet can eat. Contact us at the Cooperative Extension office.

ALLENDALE–The historic cobblestone streets of Melk, Austria form the background for Cindy Funk of Charlevoix. Ms. Funk was a participant this summer in Grand Valley State Colleges' study program in Austria and Italy.

Three weeks of her summer experience, sponsored by GVSC's International Studies Institute, was spent in study of contemporary European history, art and music appreciation in Vienna, Austria. Her visit to Melk was part of a two week study tour following Vienna to other cities of Austria and Italy, including Melk, Venice, Ravenna, Florence, Siena, the small hill towns of Tuscandy, and Pisa. Rome was an optional trip for the students.

The GVSC summer program in Austria and Italy was guided by Dr. Frank Schwartz of Grand Valley's International Studies Institute. The group stayed with local families in Vienna and in small hotels in Italy.

Ms. Funk and more than 85 other enrollees in the GVSC Institute summer programs are now returning from studies in Austria, Austria-and-Italy, France, Spain and Yugoslavia.

Northwest Territory Opened 200 Years Ago

EDITOR'S NOTE: Two hundred years after it happened, the Courier is carrying a story about an important event in American history. The story was supplied by the State Bicentennial Committee.

MACKINAC ISLAND, September 1, 1796–The hoisting of the stars and bars over Fort Mackinac today makes it official–the Northwest Territory is now indisputably a part of the U.S.

Major Henry Brubeck, dispatched with a force of 110 men from Detroit on Aug. 13 by General Anthony Wayne, took control of the fort from the British garrison commanded by Lieutenant Andrew Foster.

Accompanied by the roll of drums, the transfer of power took place with the formal lowering of the Union Jack and the raising of the U.S. flag. After the brief ceremony, the British troops departed for their next command.

The modesty of the ceremony today masked its far-reaching significance. Today, 13 years after the Treaty of Paris which formally ended the Revolutionary War and gained U.S. independence from Great Britain, is the first day that the U.S. actually controls the national territory set forth in the treaty.

The Treaty of Paris recognized the U.S. as a sovereign nation and established the Mississippi River as the western boundary. Delays in implementation were ascribed to weaknesses of the fledgling new nation compared with Great Britain.

The Treaty called for British troops to leave U.S. soil "with all convenient speed." Britain, however, maintained its troops and forts in the West, despite protests from the U.S. government.

Control of the forts had maintained British protection for its lucrative fur trade in Montreal and points West. The problems of organizing a new government in the U.S. had, up to now, ruled out any armed challenge to control of the forts.

Each year since the Treaty, however, has seen our national governmental unity becoming more effectively forged. This unity has spurred westward expansion into Ohio--and resulted in confrontations with American Indians. Settlers, eager to claim the rich and abundant land, have moved beyond areas authorized by treaties. This encroachment has flared into undeclared and escalating warfare between the Indians and the settlers.

Supported by British agents at Detroit who gave them arms and ammunition, the Indians have effectively fought the swarming settlers. President Washington, angered at the resistance and reports of massacres, ordered an armed force to move against the Indians in 1790 and in 1791. The first campaign proved indecisive, and the second ended in a military disaster for our colonial troops.

Infuriated by the defeat, President Washington placed the western army under the command of General "Mad Anthony" Wayne, nicknamed for his reckless fighting during the Revolutionary War. Marching westward from Pittsburg, Penna. with raw troops, General Wayne moved cautiously and slowly.

Literally whipping and moulding his green force into a disciplined fighting army, General Wayne moved into Ohio and built Fort Greenville as his 1793 winter quarters to prepare for decisive battle.

In August of 1794, at the Maumee River near the British–held Fort Miamis; General Wayne defeated a coalition of seven Indian tribes and 50 British volunteers from the Detroit area. He then moved down the Maumee to set up Fort Wayne instead of attacking Fort Miamis.

Returning the next year to Fort Greenville, General Wayne negotiated a treaty with the Indians which ceded virtually all of Ohio to the U.S., ending warfare in the Ohio Valley.

Britain, again at war with France, now realized that the U.S. could no longer be denied, and finally agreed to give up all of its forts in the West.

Today's ceremony is the culmination of these developments. With the flag over Mackinac Island, the U.S. is now in complete control of its rightful territory.

Coast Guard Cutter Sundew Protects Area Boaters

By FRAN MARTIN

Since the 1920's U.S. Coast Guard Cutters have been visiting Charlevoix, crossing from Wisconsin ports to maintain aids to navigation that mark the waters of northern Lake Michigan.

However, it was not until June, 1958, that Charlevoix was designated as the homeport of one of these ships, the USCGC Sundew and the city became home to its six officers and 41 enlisted men and their families.

At that time, the ship's area of operation was expanded to include Lake Michigan from Saugatuck north to and including the Straits of Mackinac, northern Lake Huron and the St. Mary's river.

The duties of the Sundew, which has earned the reputation of being the workship of the Great Lakes, are many far it is a buoy tender, icebreaker, logistics vessel and search and rescue ship.

Primarily, the 180-foot ship was designed to supply and maintain a complex of sophisticated aids to navigation in the area of some of the most dangerous water in this country's inland seas where reef and shoals abound.

Some 35 lighted buoys, which mark the treacherous areas, must be set every spring and withdrawn in November and December before winter storms take their toll. Another 50 or so unlighted buoys remain on station throughout the year but must be inspected regularly to assure they are ready for another season.

Also in the area of the Sundew's operation are six unmanned light stations and two manned stations, Greys Reef and Manitou Passage stations. These navigational aids are maintained and serviced the year-round by the Sundew. The ship not only transports supplies and fuel to the manned stations but also Coast Guard Personnel and equipment to these important facilities.

Another mission of the Sundew is search and rescue (SAR). During the ship's in-port periods it is assigned to SAR stand-by and must be ready within two to six hours in the event of a ship or airplane disaster.

The newest and most rugged of the ship's assignments has been icebreaking. Until the winter of 1972-73 shipping continued until mid or late December when carriers headed for winter quarters where they remained until mid-March when a concentrated effort was made to free shipping lanes of the winter's ice.

However, beginning with the 1972-73 season efforts were made to keep navigation open from Lake Superior ports at Duluth and Marquette to the steel mills of Gary as late as possible. The route between these points includes Whitefish Bay in Lake Superior, the St. Mary's river and the Straits of Mackinac where ice tends to form and where the Sundew, because of its re-enforced hull, finds itself in the midst of ice operations.

During the first season, navigation remained open until late January and the following year until well into February. During the 1974-75 and 1975-76 season, the lanes remained open throughout the entire year for the first times in the history of Great Lakes shipping.

Because it is stationed in an area where ice is always prevalent, the Sundew, on occasion, has been a 'guinea pig' for various types of experimental equipment. However, the method for which the ship was originally designed for ice breaking, i.e., utilizing the bow and stern to force the ice downward and away from the ship, has proven the most successful. From the time ice begins to form until late spring, the ship spends little time at its homeport as it goes about the business of clearing shipping lanes.

And when not serving as a buoy tender, icebreaker, logistics vessel or search and rescue vessel, the Department of Transportation, under which it operates, calls on the ship and its crew to participate in oceanography surveys, pollution control and a host of other, often one-time, missions.

Built at Duluth, Minn., in 1944, the ship is 180 feet in length with a 37 foot beam and a mean draft of 12 feet. It is powered by a diesel-electric 1800 h.p. engine which drives the ship along at nearly 15 m.p.h. engine which drives the ship along at nearly 15 m.p.h.

Local Rescue Station Has Long History Dating Back to 1898

The United States Coast Guard celebrated its 186th anniversary recently, so the Courier went to the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station to learn about its history and how it operates.

Back in 1898, the United States government purchased a piece of land on the Pine River channel and Lake Michigan where the present DNR station now is located, for $2,000. It was to be used for a lighthouse depot with the primary function of outfitting and providing mooring for six lightships--two for Beaver Island, one for Gray's Reef, one for White Shoals, one for Lansing Shoals, and one for North Manitou.

The original structure was repaired and remodeled through the years, with the biggest improvement being the replacement of the old wooden dock with one made of steel.

Then, in 1960, the present modern station was built on Round Lake just off the foot of Dixon Avenue.

Today there are 19 men at the Charlevoix Station under Chief Ronald E. Freels, officer in charge. Their tour of duty is usually three years.

The Charlevoix Coast Guard Station has three boats: a 44-foot life boat, a 40-foot utility boat and a 14-foot skiff for shallow water work. The boats are on duty 24 hours a day with crews aboard.

The duties of the Coast Guard are three-fold: search and rescue, aids to navigation, and enforcement of federal boating regulations. In the latter category, they are federal boarding officers, with authority to look for proper life saving equipment, communication devices, registration numbers, and other required items.

To fulfill these duties, the Coast Guard provides many services. It provides radio weather reports every six hours, it answers requests for specific weather information from boats, it issues severe weather warnings, it maintains a 24-hour communications watch and listens to all calls in Northern Lake Michigan, responding with help when necessary, it maintains the hoists at the pierheads to the entrance to Charlevoix harbor, among other sundry services.

Search and rescue is the primary duty of the Coast Guard. When it receives a call for help, or a report that a boat is in trouble, it immediately gathers all possible information about the situation, including a description of the boat, location, kind of distress, number of people aboard, etc. Upon receiving this information, a boat crew is dispatched to assist the boater and the Coast Guard Station keeps gathering as much further information as possible. If the situation calls for it, another boat, and sometimes an aircraft from Traverse City, is dispatched to help.

The primary area covered by the Charlevoix Coast Guard Station runs from North Manitou to Hog Island to Cross Village and Little Traverse Bay. It is one of 605 similar stations located on oceans, lakes and rivers.

The increase in the number of the boaters during the last few years has increased the possibility of accidents and, therefore, the work of the Coast Guard.

"Our business is saving lives and property, that's what we're here for", says local Coast Guardsman Steve Neal.

"Our boat crews are well trained and do their best. They also know all first aid procedures.

"We like to stress safety–that's why we enforce boating regulations."

The Charlevoix Coast Guard Station has no direct connection with the Cutter Sundew although Neal and three other men now assigned to the Station previously served on the Sundew.

PROPOSALS WANTED

Charlevoix County is seeking proposals to remove two structures located at 204 Mason and 206 Mason. Such proposals should include the removal of both structures, termination of water, sewer, gas, and electrical connections, obtaining necessary permits, filling of holes left by said removal, and gravel cover suitable for parking. All salvage rights to the structures and contents will be included with contract to raze.

Proposals must be submitted by noon, September 22, 1976, to County Planning Department, in care of Don Meggison, Chairman, Building and Grounds Committee, County Building, Charlevoix, Michigan, 49720.

YOUR CHILDREN NEED MORE THAN SCHOOL ALONE

As the approaching school season appears on the horizon, it's time to realize that the school, for all its importance in teaching your children the basic skills of life, is actually the second stage of their education. The first is in the home, where they should learn manners, unselfishness, the difference between right and wrong, and respect for authority and the rights of others, before they take even the first step out of the house because the outside world begins right on your doorstep. Moreover, the character they develop during these years will remain with them all through life, so this early training should also include an education in faith, in the Sunday school at the Church of your choice.

> "And all thy children shall > be taught of the Lord, and > great shall be the peace > of thy children."
> — Isaiah 54.13

Charlevoix Hospital Auxiliary Launches New Season

By PEG OHLE

"The Charlevoix Area Hospital is your hospital and the function of its Guild is to serve the hospital in any way it can."

With this statement of purpose, the Hospital Guild is starting another year of service with a Membership Coffee September 15, 10 to 12 noon, at the home of Mrs. Robert Neff, 507 East Dixon Street.

Everyone, both men and women, is invited to join the group and do whatever he or she can to help the hospital serve the community.

Service may be of many kinds, but the two main day-to-day activities engaged in by volunteers are direct work with patients and "manning" the Showcase, a gift shop operated in the hospital lobby by the Guild.

Those working with patients serve meals, deliver mail and are available to the nursing staff for help whenever needed. These may seem like small tasks but they must be done and anybody can do them, either on a regular or substitute basis.

The Showcase is open afternoons and early evenings seven days a week and needs both regular and substitute help. The hours are short and the work interesting, selling a variety of items priced from 39 cents to $10. These include basis necessities for patients and gifts for patients and the public – such things as toys, baby clothes, jewelry, stationery, and cosmetic needs.

Merchandise for the Showcase is bought every month of the year. Each November it features a big two-day pre-Christmas sale to enable local people to shop early and the Showcase to restock before Christmas.

Another project of the Hospital Guild is the annual Thrift Sale, to be held this year October 15 and 16. They gather items for this sale all year long and are still in need of items for this year's sale.

Persons having clothing in good, clean condition, household items, furniture and other saleable goods to donate are requested to call Mrs. Robert Neff at 547-6428 or Mrs. Clifford Biddick at 547-6236 for pickup.

Funds derived from the Showcase and Thrift Sales go toward supporting many good causes. During the past two years, the Guild has donated $2,500 toward the fetal monitor fund at the hospital, bought chairs for the dining room and a set of stackable chairs, and has provided four new nursing scholarships and supported five continuing scholarships, for a total of over $4,000.

In addition, the Guild is now in the process of buying 12 new television sets, wall-mounted with pillow speakers, for patients' use. Previously, the Guild had bought six television sets.

The Guild also pays for and sponsors the pre-natal childbirth clinic at the hospital.

Monthly meetings of the Guild, are held the second Monday at 8 p.m. at the hospital, and this year it is planned to make them real working sessions, making tray favors for the holiday season, puppets for child patients, layettes for needy mothers, and whatever else is needed to carry on the Guild's service activities.

"Meetings are what people make of them," says a longtime Guild member, "and this year we hope our members will turn out for them."

Guild officers for the coming year are Mrs. William Squire, Boyne City, president and head of the patient service group; Mrs. Reed Freidinger, vice-president and membership chairman; Miss Frances Milner, secretary; and Mrs. Eleonore Schultz, treasurer.

The Guild invites all interested persons to attend the Membership Coffee on September 15 and to fill in the coupon below and return it to Mrs. Freidinger, Sequonota Road, Route No. 2, Charlevoix.

Bond Issue, Curriculum Studies, Accreditation

Busy Year Forecast for School District

By PAULA HOLMES

A busy and exciting 1976-77 school year has been forecast for the Charlevoix Public School District by Superintendent James A. McKimmy.

Besides the usual academic and sports activities the students and faculty will be involved in throughout the year, the teachers and administrators are also going to be active in three major projects—a bond issue, a curriculum study and a visitation by the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges accreditation team.

The bond issue will be the first project undertaken by the school district. Voters will go to the polls to decide on the bond proposal, Monday, Sept. 27. The school district residents will have a chance to vote on two proposals.

The first proposal calls for a bond issue of $3.1 million for the remodeling and partial re-equipping of the high school and middle school, and for the erection, furnishing and equipping of classroom additions to the high school and middle school.

A second proposal seeks $525,000 for the erection, furnishing and equipping of an auditorium as an addition to the high school.

"Contrary to reports of other school districts around the state, our enrollment is continuing to climb," McKimmy said explaining the need for the remodeling and additions to the high school and middle school.

"The other districts are reporting a drop in enrollment due to the declining birth rate," the superintendent said. "But our enrollment is less affected by the birth rate than by the migration of families into this area.

"The people that are moving here seem to be families that have children in school," he said.

McKimmy noted that on one day last week, 29 new students were enrolled in the upper grades of the school district.

"We had kindergarten enrollment that week and the mothers new to this area brought in their older children for enrollment, too," he said.

The eighth grade has had the largest single increase in enrollment of any grade this year.

"But we are not building classrooms based on a growth in enrollment," McKimmy explained. "We are seeking funds in this bond issue to construct classrooms to accommodate the students we already have.

"We feel this is a good compromise," he continued. "We are seeking funds to replace obsolete facilities, to update the existing middle school and high school and to make them contemporary in function."

The second project the faculty and administration will tackle during the 1976-77 school year is a curriculum study. McKimmy explained that every faculty member will be involved in the study. Each teacher will serve on a committee dealing with his or her basic academic area and he or she may also choose to serve on another committee in another academic area.

The chairman of each committee, the principals and members of the administration will form a curriculum council to review the suggestions of each committee.

"It will take a lot of voluntary time and a lot of cooperation," McKimmy said. "But I think the results will be worth it."

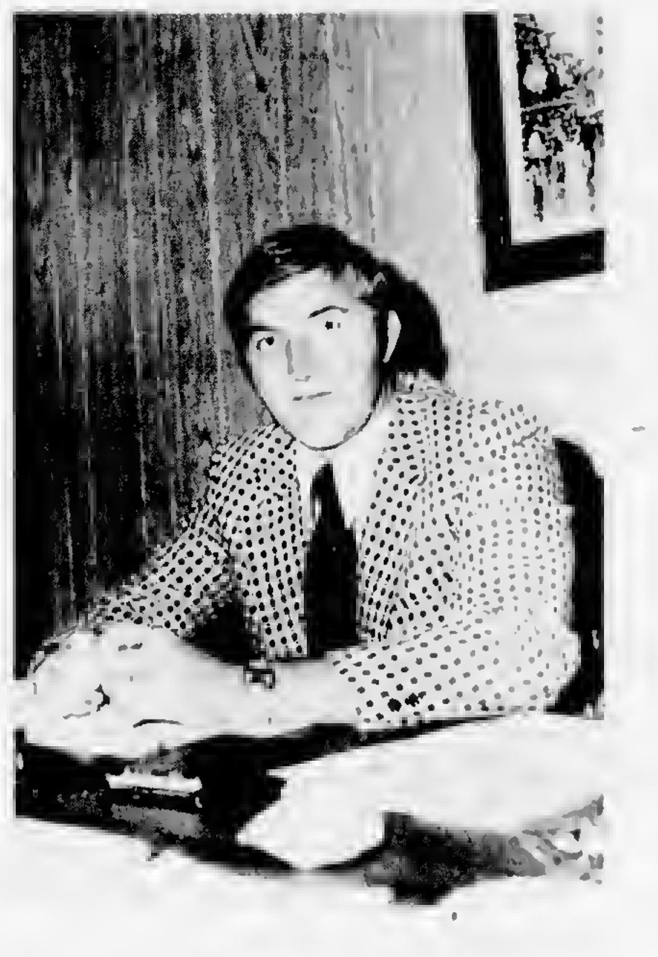
The superintendent said the new approach to curriculum studies is the outgrowth of three years of work in the area by faculty and administration.

The third major project the school district will undertake is preparing for the visit of the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges accreditation team. A team of 16-20 administrators, principals and teachers from North Central accredited schools throughout Michigan, will visit the high school later in the year. The team will evaluate all phases of the school and present a report to the faculty and to the North Central Association.

Before the visitation team arrives, however, the faculty must complete a self-evaluation of the strengths and weaknesses of the high school program. The team will receive copies of the self-evaluation and compare it with what is actually happening in the high school.

"I feel the most important part of the accreditation process is the self-evaluation that is required," Superintendent McKimmy said. "It gives the faculty and administration a chance to really look at the programs and to determine what needs to be improved."

McKimmy said accreditation is valuable to a school because it requires the school to maintain a quality program that measures up to commonly accepted academic standards.



JAMES A. McKIMMY, Superintendent.

City Council Reviews Plans For New Credit Union Building

The granting of a building permit for the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union was expected to be considered at the Charlevoix City Council meeting Tuesday night.

City council reviewed a second set of plans submitted with the application for a building permit for the construction of a new credit union building on the corner of Petoskey Avenue and Burns Street on Monday, Aug. 30, during a committee of the whole meeting.

Because of what the council members termed major changes in the development of the lot and the size of the proposed building, council decided to hold up the issuance of a building permit until it had a chance to discuss the changes with credit union officials.

Several council members also felt the changes in the new plan violated agreements the council and the credit union had made when the credit union had applied for the rezoning of the lot on Petoskey and Burns streets.

Credit union officials were invited to Tuesday's meeting to discuss the changes.

A Courier review of the two sets of plans did find them to be substantially different. The major differences were in the location of parking and entrances and exits and the size of the building.

The original plans pictured a building with a large green belt area fronting on Petoskey Avenue and with all of the parking placed behind the building. In the second set of plans, the green belt is virtually eliminated and parking circles the entire building.

The second set of plans call for an ingress and egress from the credit union parking lot on Petoskey Avenue. In the first set of plans, only an egress was designed to empty onto one of Charlevoix's busiest streets.

In the second set of plans, a larger, taller structures has been designed than the compact structure originolly designed for the credit union.,

"I didn't think the changes in the plans were that big," Clem Wagner, president of the credit union, said commenting on council's decision to hold up the building permit. "The second set of plans are pretty close to the original plans."

"We wanted to save some trees in the center of the lot and the only way we could do that was to move the parking around to the front of the building," he explained. "We feel that this building will be an improvement to Petoskey Avenue."

CITY COUNCIL and Charlevoix Federal Credit Union officials will discuss the new plans for the proposed building on this site at Petoskey Avenue and Burns Street.

CIS

I would like to see a very thorough discussion in the Charlevoix Courier and other county newspapers on this tax cut proposal the Citizen's Information Service is backing. I don't understand how the property tax can be cut by three mills without cutting out a lot of services somewhere. The county will probably pass the cut on to the schools and that certainly isn't what's needed. The CIS is scheduling meetings but they will probably be slanted toward the proposal and I'd like to hear the other side of the story so please help the electorate to be well informed. Thank you.

I feel that the people of Charlevoix should take just a little more interest in how things are run at City Hall. One thing that should be noted and should be the concern of the public is salary increases for the city employees and the elected officials. It seems that two of the elected officials have been passed up for a salary increase for this year, that means they will go for a two year period with not even as much as a cost of living increase, this is not right.

Salary increases have been approved and made retroactive to April 1, 1976 for everyone from the City administrator to the men on the street department, the Mayor and City Council members even received a very, very large increase, yet the two most important officers in our city government were over looked this year. The office of the City Clerk and the City Treasurer are the backbone of the City of Charlevoix, and I feel that our citizens of this town should do something to see to it that these people are compensated for the fine job they are doing. Remember, these two officials are elected by you and I and if they were good enough to put into the office then they should receive this increase.

Signed: One concerned citizen.

ENTOMOLOGY—bugs—is a hobby for Mark Hand, 13. And he must be pretty good at it because Mark won a sweepstakes ribbon for his collection during the 4-H Achievement Day in Whiting Park Monday.

While City Council Pores Over Resumes

Chuck Pease Holds Down City Administrator's Office

By PAULA HOLMES

Charlevoix has been operating without a city administrator for about two weeks now. But residents probably haven't noticed any difference in city operations. Everything seems to be running as smoothly as before.

To find out who is holding the city together in the position of "Acting" Acting City Administrator, the Courier made a phone call to the city offices which produced the following conversation:

"Hello, City Administrator's Office."

"May I speak with the City Administrator."

"Just one moment, I'll connect you."

"Hello, this is Chuck Pease."

Charles Pease, who says his title is administrative assistant has been holding down the fort since Aug. 23, the last day Robert Wexstaff, acting city administrator, was in office. Wexstaff had presented a letter of resignation from the office of acting city administrator more than a year ago. However, it was not until early this summer that the city council accepted the resignation.

Pease said he received the dubious distinction of becoming acting acting city administrator because he knew the ropes of the job.

"I guess I know as many of the ropes as anybody around here," Pease said. "So I got the job."

The acting acting city administrator said his short tenure in office has been a hectic one.

"It's been a busy summer," Pease explained. "And it didn't slow down any when I took over as city administrator.

"It's been a migraine headache a day," he said with a grin.

Pease said he has handled everything from complaints about various city operations to requests for building permits and water taps.

"But about 50 percent of the things I've handled have been basically public relations types of calls and have had nothing to do with actually running the city," he said. "They've kept me busy."

In his former position, Pease assisted Wexstaff with the assessing. Wexstaff stepped up to the city administrator's job from the position of city assessor three years ago.

"Who knows," Pease said speculating on the next city administrator, "maybe I'll be named city administrator, too."

But that's not too likely, according to George Plumm, third ward alderman, who is handling the search for an administrator.

"We've received about 80 resumes (Pease's was not among them) and we've narrowed it down to about 10 men," Plumm said.

"I've had telephone interviews with all of them and I think now we will narrow it down to about four men for the personal interviews," he said.

The alderman predicted that a final applicant would be selected within the next two weeks. But he couldn't say when the new administrator would take over his duties. He estimated it might take as long as two months before Charlevoix had a city administrator again.

In addition to conducting a search for a new administrator, Plumm and the other members of the city council have also been developing a job description for the new city administrator. The council will be using the guidelines provided in the city's city manager ordinance and it will be studying the ordinances and descriptions of other nearby cities such as Petoskey and Traverse City.

"And we will want to go over the description with the new city administrator and see if he has any suggestions," Plumm said.

CHARLES PEASE, "Acting" Acting City Administrator.

Talent Shines on 4-H Achievement Day

It was perfect weather Monday for the annual Charlevoix County Fall 4-H Achievement Day. The sun shined almost as brightly as the talent exhibited at what is the closest thing to a county fair in Charlevoix County.

And visitors to the Achievement Day display were not disappointed. More than 130 entries filled the Whiting Park Pavilion display areas with several exhibits surrounding the building, too. Samples of Charlevoix County talent were displayed in almost every area imaginable. Entries included exhibits in: foods, clothing, crafts, flowers and garden vegetables, canning, bowling, conservation, poultry, rabbits, dairy animals, sheep and goats, pigs, camping and hiking.

"We had some excellent entries," Bob Bellairs, Charlevoix County 4-H program assistant, said. "The number of entries was down a little, but that didn't take away from the quality of the exhibits presented.

"And we're still growing," Bellairs continued. "I'm sure we will have more exhibits next year."

Bellairs said the Achievement Days are held in the spring and fall to give Charlevoix County 4-H'ers a chance to show off their winter and summer activities.

Students participating in the Achievement Day celebration from Charlevoix included: Joy Chapman, Barb Hand, Mark Hand, David Milke, and Charlene Tripp.

Other students participating in the Achievement Day activities from Charlevoix were: Duane Tripp, George Chapman, Tim Milke, and Cheryl Milke.

Judges for the displays were: Julia Beard, retired home economist, foods; Bill Grimm, soil district conservationist, conservation; Clayton Smith, vegetables, Verna Helms, crafts; Jack and Marlene McLeod, flowers, Ray Fisher, rabbits, ducks and chickens; and Bob Bellairs, camping and hiking, photography, knitting, dairy cows, goats and sheep.

Looze Memorial Fund Enriches U-M Library

The library at the University of Michigan Biological Station is richer by a number of significant reference works in the areas of ornithology, ichthyology and terrestrial ecology made possible through the Frederick K. Looze Memorial Fund.

At the time of his death in August 1974, friends and neighbors had made contributions to a memorial fund which was subsequently given to the University of Michigan Biological Station at Douglas Lake. The staff at the station chose to use this fund to purchase the reference books as a memorial to Looze, a sportsman and conservationist who was virtually interested in keeping Northern Michigan's environment of high quality.

A native of Charlevoix county, Looze had enlisted in the U.S. Coast Guard in September, 1927, and had resided here following his retirement in June 1953. He had served at various stations along Lake Michigan and elsewhere, among them at South Manitou Island and Charlevoix where he had opportunity to see the changes in this area of Northern Michigan and to try to do something about it.

His widow, the former Helen Martin, lives in the family home here. Their daughter, Mrs. William (Beverly) Southern resides in Hinckley, Ill., where her husband is a professor at Northern Illinois University. The Southern family spends the summer at the University of Michigan Biological Station where Sr. Southern teaches ornithology.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM SOUTHERN and student, Mary Ann Jacobs, examine one of the many books purchased through the Frederick J. Looze Memorial Fund. The books are at the University of Michigan Biological Station Library.

State Labor Department to Hold Hearing on Farm Safety Rules

EAST LANSING–Michigan farmers may be shelling out $31 million if proposed new safety standards on tractors and farm equipment guarding are implemented by the Michigan Department of Labor (MDL).

MDL is holding hearings on the proposal Sept. 13, beginning at 10 a.m. in the Michigan Department of health, Room 1B, Baker Olin West Building, 3423 North Logan, Lansing.

"The requirements are similar to, but more detailed than, the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) standards on tractor rollover protection and farm machinery guarding, going into effect Oct. 25, 1978," says Dr. Richard G. Pfister, Michigan State University Extension safety engineer.

These new standards will be enforced by MDL through on-site inspections farms employing nonfamily labor. MDL's standard includes OSHA regulations and additional requirements such as:

–Guarding of all field and farmstead equipment (not just that purchased after Oct. 25, 1977). This is the most important addition and will require additional guarding on current farm machinery.

–Different hazard warning signs and decals on farm equipment.

–Additional tractor operating rules, such as, requiring the employer to be responsible for the employe checking brakes and controls before each day's use. The employe must "...report defects to the supervisor..." if they are found.

–Additional guards and equipment. This would include "...guarding of any hot surface..." and "...guarding of any projections that are likely to cause injury on contact...," and a way to lock out the "energy source" on field and farm equipment.

Copies of the proposed rules can be obtained from: Director, Department of Labor, State Secondary Complex, 7150 Harris Drive, Lansing, MI 48816.

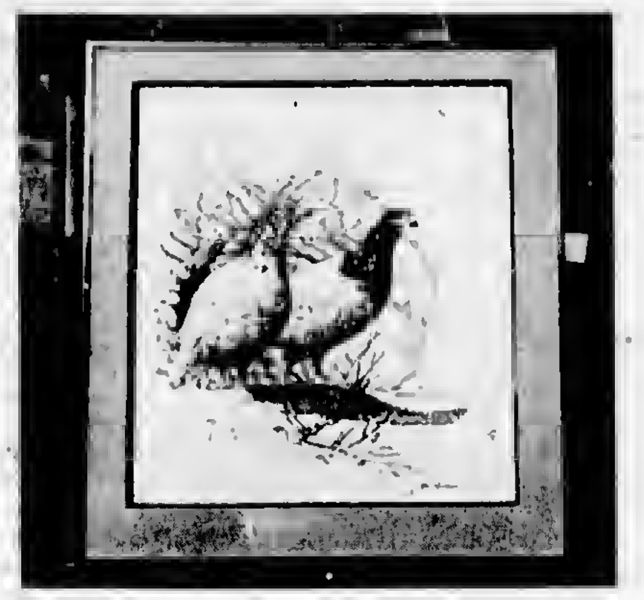
Local Artist's Works Capture Alaskan Life

By FRAN MARTIN

From the frozen tundra of Alaska to the warm sands of Florida and via art galleries in Seattle and Albequerque, N.M., Jack VanHoesen, a native of Horton Bay who now lives in Haines, Alaska, is being described as one of the top wildlife artists in the U.S.

For anyone who might be in Seattle in November his works will be on exhibit at the Louise Matzke Gallery and for residents of his northern Michigan, a one-man show of his Alaskan and Northwestern Michigan paintings is in the plans for 1977.



THIS PENCIL DRAWING of the Willow Ptarmigan, the state bird of Alaska, is an example of VanHoesen's wildlife studies.

Primarily a wildlife artist, VanHoesen works in oils, acrylics and ink with artwork ranging from simple sketches and commercial illustration to fine art canvases.

Art, however, has not always been the forte of VanHoesen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth VanHoesen of Horton Bay. After graduating from high school, he attended Central Michigan University, earning a B.S. degree in Biology. After taking R.O.T.C., he received a commission in the U.S. Army and had a tour of duty in Okinawa before returning to earn an M.S. degree in zoology. However, during all this time there was art as a hobby.

By this time it was 1969 and the area where he's grown up was no longer the rural Michigan he had known as a boy when the woods were rich with game and the lakes and streams were filled with fish inviting one to drop a hook.

So it was off to Alaska with the hopes of finding what had been lost in Northern Michigan. His intent had been to obtain a job with the Alaska Department of Fish and Game but when this did not materialize, he turned to teaching in the Anchorage School System, first as a Physical Education instructor and later as head of the Science Department.

But always there was art, which until now had been a hobby but which was to become a means of financing his writing-sketching tours through Alaska during the summer months. After one more year as a teacher, he embarked on still another career, that of wholesaling stationery, placemats, postcards and prints featuring his own art work. It was 1971 by then and he established a summer studio and shop at Haines.

Until then, oils were predominate in his work but with time to expand his abilities he turned to ink sketches that seemed a natural for Alaska. Then came acrylics and canvases that brought together the knowledge of the zoologist and the skill of the artist. While wildlife remained his first choice of subject material, anatomical studies were numerous and themes on the man-animal-nature level were explored.

Then art suddenly became more than a hobby. It became a means of expression. He expanded his techniques, grew more proficient in his chosen mediums, refined his ideas and, before he realized it, art became a livelihood. The shop at Haines with its sale of placemats bearing Alaskan scenes and other commercial items in summer, became a means of financing a winter of painting, a school period to allow improvement of techniques and eventually to turn out what he considered worthwhile works. And as suddenly he 'arrived', his work began to gain recognition and the public was paying premium prices for these "worthwhile works".

Of this turn of events, VanHoesen said "Now when I create a work combining by experiences, philosophies and creative spirit to achieve a painting that is understood and appreciated, I'm happy. When others see what I do and understand it as a valid interpretation of life, then my struggle seems worthwhile.

Life is change, motion, movement through time and space. I attempt to capture enough of it on canvas so that we may all see some reality in it".

The reality apparently is there, for it has resulted in showings in and out of Alaska and his art is being marketed throughout the nation. The Alaska Division of Tourism has turned one of his Chilkoot Dancer paintings into a poster that is exhibited around the world. This fall the Alaska Northwest Publishing Co. is utilizing VanHoesen artwork as plates for a guide to Alaska mushrooms written by the noted authority, Ben Guild. His work is on display at better galleries throughout Alaska and several one-man shows are scheduled for the coming year.

VanHoesen's background in the sciences that deal with bone, muscle and form bring out his deep feelings for the animals and birds of the north country. Acrylics predominate when it comes to the large canvas–the Bald Eagle picking at spawned-out salmon along the Chilkoot River, the majestic moose that retains it aristocratic air while pausing to level one last regal look at an intruder before fleeing to safety, the herd of caribou as they make their way across the land in search of life-sustaining lichen. For the first time people are beginning to appear in VanHoesen's major works with natives of Southeast Alaska his prime subjects.

After years of struggling, art is now life for this artist who has chosen the world of the far north...its wildlife, its harsh terrain and recently its people to depict his talents.

THE ARTIST Jack VanHoesen poses at Port Chilkoot, Alaska, waterfront near his summer studio.

Charlevoix Economy on Upswing, Overall Income Increasing

NEW YORK – Charlevoix County's economy moved into higher gear in the past year, according to a national survey of business activity, just released.

The added momentum was powered, principally, by heavier spending on the part of local consumers, most of whom had more money at their command than the year before and less hesitancy about using it.

The facts and figures on income and spending in the area, with comparable data for communities in other parts of the country, are contained in a copyrighted study made by Sales and Marketing Management. It is called "Survey of Buying Power."

It shows that the overall income of Charlevoix County residents was at a high level. Net earnings, after payment of personal taxes, amounted to $65,925,000 topping the previous year's total of $59,103,000.

Just what this was equivalent to, in terms of the individual family, is indicated by the median income per household, which marks the midpoint on the local income scale. It came to $10,030 per household. The year before it was $9,146 per household.

As for the total income, it rose 11.5 percent, as against .97 percent in the United States and 7.4 percent in the East North Central States.

The various surveys and economic studies that have been made recently seem to agree, almost without exception, that the business outlook is bright for the near future.

They expect that, with incomes rising faster than the cost of living, which has been the case lately, with unemployment declining somewhat and with inflation staying within bounds, the confidence of consumers will improve and they will return to their freer spending habits.

Their ability to do so is enhanced by the fact that most of them have more savings than usual salted away, due to their cutback in spending during the recession.

And, the reasoning goes, since consumer spending is the backbone of our economy, once it gets into full swing again, industrial production will increase to meet the demand, opening up job opportunities for more people.

In Charlevoix County, the improvement is already under way, the figures show. In the past year local retail stores recorded gross sales of $41,043,000, as against the prior year's total of $39,209,000.

Geer Starts Drain Chief Sticker Campaign

Bonald G. Geer, incumbent Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner who lost the Republican nomination in the Primary Election by 78 votes, has announced that he will become a 'sticker' candidate in the November 2 General Election.

Geer, who is completing a four-year term in the office and who was deputy commissioner for 3½ years, lost the nomination to Clayton Healey by 78 votes or an average of three votes per precinct. In announcing his decision to seek election via the "sticker" route, Geer said that 78 votes can hardly be called a mandate so he had decided to give it another try.

Geer polled 1541 votes to 1619 for Healey on the Republican ballot. David Nachazel received 628 on the Democratic ticket.

Geer became the second Republican candidate to seek election as a sticker candidate. Earlier, incumbent sheriff, Philo E. Sumner had announced his intention to go this route.

Sumner Gets Stickers, Organizes Townships

Sheriff Philo Sumner, who was defeated in a three-way race on the Republican ticket in the August primaries, is busy working an a sticker and write-in campaign for the General Election.

His campaign committee reports that over half of the 23 precincts in the County have been organized and that the rest will be by September 15. The committee has prepared an instruction sheet informing voters how to vote with stickers or by write-in. Copies will be distributed throughout the County in the next few weeks.

Sumner has received the support of several organizations, including the Citizens Information Service, and says that with the group of hard workers now campaigning for him he will win in November.

In fact, last week a group of supporters met to organize their forces prior to launching an all out campaign before the general election.

Bert Hazel was named chairman; Mrs. Robert Russell, secretary; Mrs. Robert Timms, treasurer; Oscar Stroud, finance chairman and Willis (Bill) Peters, publicity chairman of the Re-elect Philo Sumner for Sheriff committee.

Anyone wishing to donate or work for Sheriff Sumner may call Hazel at 547-9423 or Sumner at 547-4461.

The next organizational meeting of the campaign committee will be held September 9 at 8 p.m. at Chester's Boat Livery in Ironton.

Bloodmobile Sept. 16

Charlevoix will host its second Red Cross Bloodmobile in two months on Thursday, Sept. 16, Mrs. David Fowler and Mrs. Robert Tollas, co-chairmen of the event, have announced.

The Bloodmobile will be set up at the American Legion post home on Garfield ave. and will be open from 1 until 7 p.m.

A quota of 150 units has been set for the Charlevoix area.

Anyone wishing to donate may call 547-0314 for an appointment or 547-9479 to obtain additional information.

Mrs. Don Kelly will head the telephone committee, calling all former donors on the list which was increased by 140 at the emergency Bloodmobile on July 19 when that many first-time donors joined the ranks of donors.

Kappa Sigma and Xi Epsilon Gamma sorority members will again be in charge of the canteen.

On July 19 there was an Emergency Bloodmobile for Peggy Carey. Three [illegible] turned out resulting in 205 units of blood after 48 persons were deferred for various reasons.

Mary Hardy to Start League Chapter

Although the League of Women Voters has been in existence for over 55 years, it is rising to greater prominence this fall by sponsoring a series of debates between President Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Now, a local woman Mary N. Hardy, is attempting to organize a local branch of the League.

A leaflet Ms. Hardy left with the Courier states the purpose of the League as follows:

"We encourage people to take part in government. We inform citizens on issues. We enable citizens to influence what happens. We also do some influencing ourselves."

The answer to the question, "Is the League political?" is yes.

"When we're encouraging, informing, enabling, we're helping people to be politically effective, participating citizens. When we're working for our point of view on an issue, we're being politically effective, participating citizens," the League states.

"We think both roles are essential to a democratic society."

Further information about the League may be obtained from Ms. Hardy at 547-2149.

Make Resolutions Now For New School Year

There's something about the autumn of the year that invigorates the soul and makes one think it is the beginning of a new year instead of the beginning of the end. Perhaps that's because fall brings a new school year and a new beginning for us all.

Think back to when you were a child. Do you remember how it felt when the Labor Day weekend rolled around?

It was a special feeling, unlike all other holiday feelings. A unique mingling of excitement, anticipation, hope and just plain nerves filled your head because on Tuesday you were going back to school.

A child's life runs rapidly from week to week. It is only much later as adults that we develop our hectic year-by-year outlook. The beginning of a new school year is to a child an event as momentous as the first landing on the moon, the first trip to the North Pole or the discovery of penicillin--and it is much closer to home.

Every school year a child becomes a new person. He or she has grown and aged and on the day after Labor Day in most Michigan communities, he or she will enter a new life as a member of a new class. A child that is now a sixth grader, has attained a status far exalted in his or her eyes above the status of that fifth grader he or she was so long (three months) ago.

And so Labor Day becomes a type of New Year's Day for a child. It is the beginning of a new time, a chance to start over, an opportunity to accomplish things dreamed and undreamed of during other bygone school years.

And Labor Day is a time of renewed beginning for parents, too.

During this week, make a few New School Year's resolutions of your own. Promise to give your child more encouragement and assistance than ever.

Resolve to take a more active role in school affairs. If you have a few spare hours each week, volunteer to help in the elementary school volunteer tutor program. A whole new world will open up to you as you help a child accomplish a goal he or she may have thought they could never attain.

If you can't give a few hours every week, try to do something on a monthly basis. Perhaps the band boosters, the athletic boosters or a parent-teacher organization could use your talent or ideas.

Learn about the bond issue which will be considered at the polls on Monday, Sept. 27. Find out why the board of education and the administration has proposed the remodeling and additions to the middle school and high school. And then do something about your findings. Talk with your neighbors and be sure to vote..

Concerned about the ever increasing costs of running a school district? Don't wear out your lungs complaining about taxes. Learn all you can about the funding of the school district, then after your studies, perhaps you will want to become active on a committee to revise the property tax laws.

Or perhaps you have some expertise you can offer to the school district (free of charge, of course) to aid them in their budgeting or purchasing procedures.

Schools are an important part of the community and they are only as good as you make them. Be supportive. Volunteer your services, offer constructive criticism with feasible solutions, become concerned.

This week you have a new chance to join with your children's teachers to make better schools a reality in this community.

Start League

I belong to the League of Women Voters of the U.S. There are 45 leagues in Michigan. It is a non-partisan organization which grew out of women suffrage in 1920. This year it is sponsoring the debate between President Ford and Mr. J. Carter.

It operates effectively in promoting a better life through Government. As a member I find many women interested and would like to help start a group here in Charlevoix to study and discuss the issues and become informed so that we can inform citizens and enable them to influence what happens. Thus we are being effective participating citizens in a democratic society.

We meet together in homes to talk about governmental problems that affect us. It is a nice way to spend some time together during the lazy winter months and accomplish something, too.

If you would like me to help you get a league started here in Charlevoix, call Mary N. Hardy, 547-2149.

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

When I was a kid, the Sunday Supplements used to carry wonderful tongue-in-cheek stories about how some day man would fly to the moon and what he would find there. Another favorite topic was the push-button world of tomorrow when most of the earth's drugery would be performed by machinery.

Of the two impossibilities, I think my friends and I were more excited about push-buttons than we were about moon flights.

"Just think, you'll wake up in the morning and push a button and presto! You won't even have to get up. You're work will be done for the day. They'll pay you just the same and you con just stay in bed. Hey, man! What a life."

By the late 1950's, Sunday Supplement stories about space travel had left the realm of tongue-in-cheek. And in 1969 we actually landed our first men on the moon. Since then we have sent million dollar space laboratories to such distant points as Planet Mars.

But what has happened to that push-button world we used to dream of? Will it ever become a reality?

I am afraid, my friends, that it has and that old dream is rapidly becoming a nightmare.

These were some of the thoughts that occurred to me the other night while discussing changes that have taken place in auto parts supply business locally with one of our auto dealers.

Did you know there is a teletype machine in Charlevoix that is tied into a computer in Atlanta, Ga., which knows where hundreds of thousands of auto parts are located? This machine can pick out the source closest to Charlevoix, arrange to have the part shipped and notify the dispatcher in Charlevoix when to expect his order—all within an hour? The part usually arrives within two days, although some many take a little longer.

Truly, it is a marvelous system, absolutely mind-boggling in its complexities. But it is also one of the reasons why the political goal of so-called "full employment" may remain forever beyond our grasp.

In the late 1950's I worked for Ford Motor Co. in Dearborn and it was an exciting time in the auto industry. Automation was a new toy and new applications of automatic transfer machines and other devices were being put to use daily.

When I started with Ford in 1955, for example, thousands of men and women worked elbow to elbow at the Dearborn Stamping Plant feeding the gigantic presses that turned out all manner of body parts. Three years later – after automation — the plant still turned out just as much work, but you could walk for literally blocks within the plant without seeing another human being. Machinery was doing the work.

Some of us worried about the impact of automation on employment, but we were assured that new technology would find new jobs for workers no longer needed at the stamping plant. There might be a little lag, but new jobs were on the horizon.

Twenty years later, the new jobs — the type of jobs persons with few skills can perform — haven't materialized. To be sure, there are more jobs demanding a good deal of technical competence, but the simple repetitive operations that once kept so many of us employed have evaporated.

Industry, of course, is not alone. Automation also has come to the farm and the home, with push-button machinery taking over most of the bone wearying tasks that once provided a livelihood for millions of farm hands and housemaids.

I tell you, it's a wonderful new push-button world we're living in.

The only problem is that the folks who used to do the work aren't the ones who are pushing the buttons. They are standing in unemployment lines or cooling their heels in welfare offices.

There is a frightening possibility that some of them may never again find jobs to support themselves and their families.

We suspect that politicians who carp about full employment really don't know what they are talking about—unless they plan to turn back the clock. It appears from here that high unemployment is a fact of life we are going to have to learn to live with — and provide for—in the foreseeable future.

For the unemployed, the push-button world certainly has meant a life of idleness. But it is an idleness they would rather do without.

Your Turn

For years you've watched everyone else do it.

The children who sat on the curb eating their lunches waiting for the bus.

The husband you put through school who drank coffee standing up and who slept with his hand on the alarm.

And you envied them and said, "Maybe next year I'll go back to school." And the years went by and this morning you looked into the mirror and said, "You blew it. You're too old to pick it up and start a new career."

This column is for you.

Margaret Mitchell won her first Pulitzer Prize for "Gone with the Wind" in 1937. She was 37 years old at the time.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith was elected to the Senate for the first time in 1948 at the age of 49.

Ruth Gordon picked up her first Oscar in 1968 for "Rosemary's Baby." She was 72 years old.

Billie Jean King took the battle of women's worth to a tennis court in Houston's astrodome to outplay Bobby Riggs. She was 31 years of age.

Grandma Moses began a painting career at the age of 76.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh followed in the shadow of her husband until she began to question the meaning of existence for individual women. She published her thoughts in "Gifts from the Sea" in 1955 in her 49th year.

Shirley Temple Black was named Ambassador to Ghana at the age of 47.

Golda Meir in 1969 was elected prime minister of Israel. She had just passed her 71st birthday.

This summer, Barbara Jurdan was given official duties as a speaker at the Democratic National Convention. She is 36 years old.

You can tell yourself these people started out as exceptional. You can tell yourself they had influence before they started. You can tell yourself the conditions under which they achieved are different than yours.

Or you can be like a woman I knew who sat at her kitchen window year after year and watched everyone else do it and then said to herself, "It's my turn."

I was 37 years old at the time.

Nefarious Gambling

I wasn't arrested but I was present, sharing the guilt, when the State of Michigan snuffed out a nefarious gambling operation last Thursday.

After 25 years in the newspaper business, it's the first time I've used the word "nefarious." Somehow it seems just right for this occasion. Webster says "nefarious" means extremely wicked."

Certainly this particular crime was a wicked challenge to the peace of the state. And some extremely adept police work was required to uncover the gambling game and bring the miscreants to justice.

Michigan taxpayers should be proud of Eugene Hoppenworth and Leroy Vander-Esch. They are state liquor inspectors and they are not afraid to do their job, no matter what the danger.

In this case, they faced the grave danger always present when state employees are forced to work many miles from their Lansing headquarters. If they should run out of stupid pills, a fresh supply is not readily available.

Eugene and Leroy were making a routine call at the Lapeer County Club. Somehow they discovered the club was having a raffle. Perhaps they got a clue from the large sign behind the bar which said "Raffle Tickets $1."

Club members, all crooks, were trying to raise some money to buy some badly needed furniture.

With so many people wearing golf shoes, it is dangerous sitting on the floor. Have you ever tried to blow a cleated nose?

When 200 tickets are sold, $100 went into the furniture fund, and $100 went to some lucky member whose name was drawn out of a box. And so on, every 200 tickets.

The winners' names were posted on the bulletin board to make it easy for their friends to embarrass them into donating their winnings to the furniture fund.

The liquor inspectors said the raffle was against the law. They confiscated the raffle sign and $35 currently in the furniture fund.

Eugene and Leroy also confiscated the list of winners, perhaps so Internal Revenue can make sure a tax is paid on the illegal winnings. Bureaucrats stick together, the same as birds of a feather and thieves.

I do not pretend to know what the State of Michigan will do with the club's $35. Perhaps buy state lottery tickets. It's really not important.

The important thing is that the nefarious furniture raffle has been stopped before it got out of hand. Left unchecked, county club members might have bought so much furniture it would have overflowed onto the freeway, thus creating a traffic hazard for motorists on their way to the Detroit Race Course to bet on the horses.

Incidentally, it really isn't fair that two obscure liquor inspectors should be the main recipients of all this sterling sarcasm. They are only following orders, albeit with courage and determination beyond the ordinary call of hypocrisy.

The largest share of glory should go to the State of Michigan and to the high-up officials who make such splendid hypocrisy possible.

But Michigan residents should be careful where they brag. They do not have an exclusive franchise on institutional hypocrisy. Other states have also shown magnificent ability to free north while running south.

For instance, in New York's historic Yankee Stadium a few years ago, I saw three marvelous signs that really said it all. I almost cried for the sheer joy of it.

The first sign extolled the virtues of OTB — Off Track Betting. In New York, you don't have to go to the racetrack to patronize the corner bookie and get a bet down. You can risk your dollars at Grand Central Station, or dozens of other public places.

The second sign urged everyone to buy a ticket on the New York State Lottery. Just as in Michigan, the tickets are sold at every cigar counter and in every church vestibule.

The third sign said: "No Gambling Allowed."

I haven't been so delighted since I saw a "No Eating" sign in a restaurant. But back to Michigan ...

What will happen if my country club is found guilty in the case of the nefarious furniture raffle? I don't know.

But I have a suggestion for a penalty to match the crime. The club's liquor license could be suspended for 60 days, next January and February.

When Eugene and Leroy come checking in their mukluks, they will discover the club closes every winter anyway because it's too cold to sit on the floor.

Tammy Wojan

Four-year-old Tammy Wojan is entering kindergarten in Charlevoix this year. To find out how she and her mother, Diane, felt about this big step, the Courier interviewed both of them. But it turned out that Tammy did most of the talking.

COURIER: How old are you, Tammy?

TAMMY: Four.

COURIER: When is your birthday?

TAMMY: October 14.

COURIER: Did the school bus driver come to visit you?

TAMMY: Yes.

COURIER: What did he tell you?

TAMMY: He didn't. He talked to my mother.

DIANE: He told us to look when you crossed the street, didn't he? And to sit down quickly in the back of your seat. And that his name was Larry.

COURIER: What are you going to do in kindergarten, Tammy?

TAMMY: I don't know–play.

COURIER: Are you going to miss your mommy and little sister Kimberly when you go to school?

TAMMY: I'll miss mommy and Kimberly will miss me, but I won't miss her.

COURIER: Who's your teacher going to be?

TAMMY: Mrs. Smith. She lives near us and that's where we buy our Christmas tree, too.

COURIER: Who else is going to kindergarten?

TAMMY: My friends from nursery school like Johnny O'Brien and my friends from Sunday School like Scott Truman. Maybe Karen, too. And Christa Martin.

DIANE: I think she's going to enjoy kindergarten because she enjoyed nursery school. But it's a big step for her. I'll miss her but we'll have mornings together.

COURIER (TO DIANE): Did you go to kindergarten in Charlevoix?

DIANE: Yes, I went all the way through Charlevoix schools from kindergarten to high school. I had Mrs. McRae for a teacher. There was only one kindergarten class then. I think she has taught most of Charlevoix.

COURIER: Do you remember starting kindergarten?

DIANE: Yes, I remember being frightened a little bit on the first day. I rode the bus, too. I also remember the fish pond and play house. I don't think they have them naw.

COURIER: Have you ever been in the kindergarten room, Tammy?

TAMMY: Yes, the nursery school teacher took the kids there on a bus. I liked going. Mrs. Smith was there.

COURIER: Can you tie your shoes?

TAMMY: Yes, even my tennis shoes.

COURIER: Can you button your coat, use your zipper and put on your boots?

TAMMY: Yes, but my boots will probably be too small.

COURIER: How high can you count?

TAMMY: To 16. That's higher than a tree.

COURIER: Can you say the ABC's?

TAMMY: My mommy taught me to sing them. I know some other songs, too, from Bible School.

COURIER: Can you read?

TAMMY: Mommy reads to me but I can't read. I like fairy tales.

COURIER: Do you like to draw?

TAMMY: I like to draw cats. We have two at home, named Mittens and Morris.

COURIER: What did you do this summer?

TAMMY: I have a bike with training wheels and I learned how to ride it.

COURIER: Did you go swimming?

TAMMY: I haven't had any swimming lessons but I can swim under water, anyway.

COURIER (TO DIANE): What does her father think about Tammy going to kindergarten?

TOMMY WOJAN and mother, Diane.

Architect Picked for Grandvue

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has asked architect, S. T. Gerganoff of Ypsilanti, to proceed with plans for a 27-bed Supervised Residential Care addition to Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

The county has submitted a request for a grant for the project under the Public Works Employment Act of 1976. The board approved an appropriation not to exceed $1,000 for soil borings and site survey necessary before work on the plans can continue.

The board, by a 9-4 vote, authorized the Bureau of Social Services to join with Emmet county in applying for a Juvenile Justice Service grant of $30,000 to be shared by the two county area in an effort to keep young people out of the courts. The board then approved the proposed program for expenditure of the funds by a 7-6 vote with one member absent and one abstaining.

Ronald Geer, Drain Commissioner, reported on the establishment of a special drainage district and that Boss Engineering of Charlevoix had submitted a bid of $1400 for the work. The only other bid was submitted by Granger Engineering of Cadillac for $3600.

Ralph Richardson reported that one of the Sheriff's Department's vehicle had been wrecked in a one-car accident recently and that the department would have to pay $1500, the trade-in price in lieu of trade-in.

A PENN-CENTRAL ENGINE pulled up alongside the cars it's supposed to pick up behind Michigan Maple Block, and a man was ready to step off and man the switches.

The bridge at right crosses the Bear River, and that's what Wallin came out to look at. The track and right of way belongs to Michigan Northern, based in Cadillac, now.

HOWARD FINEOUT, engineer, track foreman and all-around maintenance man for the world's shortest rail line, the Boyne City Railroad, is pictured here in the shop where all of the railroad equipment was once manufactured. BCRR, formerly owned by Hollis Baker of Grand Rapids, went to the auction block but enough of it was saved through the efforts of local businessmen to keep the line from Boyne Falls to Boyne City alive.

THE PRESIDENT'S CAR, formerly a part of the Boyne City Railroad, is destined now for a museum. It was purchased at auction by Charles Pinkerton of the Detroit and Mackinaw City Railroad for $26,000. Austin Severner, a friend of the Boyne City Railroad, sat on velvet upholstery in this picture, and that's genuine wood paneling behind him.

Northward Migration Creates A Strange New Land for All

By PEG OHLE

If you have been wondering why people are migrating to Northern Michigan from the southern part of the state and other metropolitan areas and what effect that migration can have on the life-style of the area, an article in the June, 1976 issue of "Small Town" magazine will be of interest.

Titled "rural Ruination or Rural Renaissance; the Choices and the Chances", the article was written by Silas B. Weeks, Extension Economist with the University of New Hampshire, and he discusses both positive and negative aspects of population shifts.

Who are the people moving back to rural areas, and why are they doing it?

Weeks mentions jobs as a key. He notes that many industries find rural labor forces more productive than urban, and also cheaper and non-unionized. They find their employees prefer rural to urban living.

Another factor is the spread of university branches, community colleges and state technical and vocational schools which encourages both younger families and older retired people to re-evaluate some of the former disadvantages of living outside metropolitan areas.

It is also believed, Weeks says, that middle-class young people, finding that the materialism of their parents fails to produce happiness, and disillusioned by Vietnam and Watergate, have perceived rural living as a desirable lifestyle change.

Finally, many urban dwellers of all ages foresee a mounting crisis in city living and view "back to the land" as survival insurance.

Problems created in rural areas by this in-migration fall into four categories, according to Weeks: cultural, economic, political and environmental.

First, cultural. The back-to-the-land movement, loosely defined by its participants as homesteading, especially represents a very new population element in rural areas, not only in outward terms of age, dress, family arrangements including communes and education, but more particularly in values, in regard to environment, marriage, religion, and material possessions.

Second, economic. The in-migration of middle-class families and retired persons brings with it an interest in expanded municipal services, including schools, trash, fire, police and health. Their numbers are frequently significant enough to force increased local expenditures. Where such expenditures are largely financed by local government, increased property tax burdens occur. This in turn results in many communities seeking to halt growth.

Another growth impact is the skyrocketing of rural land values. In-migration has caused traditionally low-cost rural land prices to experience one of the most rapid increases in recent memory. For example, the value of farm lands in the United States about tripled between 1960 and 1974, with over one-third of the increase coming between 1970 and 1973. Average values of farm real estate increased by 21 percent from November, 1973 to November, 1974.

While these increases in land values have brought a short-run bonanza to rural property holders, they are a serious burden to retaining many of the community's own young people. Local children who formerly could count on buying an acre or two for a few hundred dollars from a neighbor now find the same land priced in the ranges of $3,000 to $7,000 per site. In addition, there are the mounting development costs, including boundary surveys, soil tests, septic systems, and engineering reports or formal building plans.

Thus, local lower-income families are being replaced by outside upper-income groups.

Third, political. Many new in-migrants place a high value on the opportunity for participation in local community affairs. They are used to, and have expectations of, a variety of services from local government, including such items as health clinics, recreation programs, senior citizen housing, day-care centers and zoning restrictions. On the other hand, the need for such services is generally not perceived to exist by the native resident. Thus the local establishment blocks entry to newcomers who "don't understand the problem" and as a result, frustration sets in, and often a head-to-head struggle takes place.

Fourth, environmental. Another problem lies with the matter of vanishing environmental quality, or the deterioration of the countryscape. Rural America is a highly desirable habitat because of visual quality. That environment is now in severe jeopardy. The super highways, with their non-planned and inharmonious mixed use, are scaled to the needs of the automobile rather than either people or landscape.

Next is the shopping center, designed for profit maximization of large chain stores and franchises, without regard to local merchants, transportation patterns, or tax structures. Besides the economic disruption, the impact on environmental quality has, in many cases, been disastrous, with older, downtown cores left with empty stores, decaying buildings and eroded property values.

The third assault on the quality of the countryscape is ill-adapted residential forms, including A-frames, chalets, mobile homes and materials ill-fitted to either site or setting.

With all these problems of in-migration, Weeks lists four major promises which may go a long way toward solving them:

The new community vitality that can result from youth, new ideas, new skills, new values, and new capital.

The positive economic benefits of new jobs and more diversified employment opportunities.

The re-employment of natural resources, especially farm and forest resources for local consumption.

The emergence of new institutional structures and approaches to the solutions of old problems.

Perhaps we should think twice before putting a barrier across U.S. Highway 10!

Getting School Ready For Students No Easy Task for Custodians

By PEG OHLE

Old-fashioned spring and fall housecleanings are no longer a part of a good housekeeper's life, but there is one group of "housekeepers" who do a really thorough job of cleaning every summer.

They are the custodians and maintenance people who take care of the schools.

As soon as school is dismissed in June, they go to work with vacuum cleaners, soap, mops, paint brushes, screwdrivers, hammers, nails, waxers and dozens of other tools and supplies to rejuvenate the buildings for the coming school year

When Vince Olach, business manager for the Charlevoix schools, started rattling off the list of jobs the crew undertakes each summer, this reporter was happy she had a small one-floor house. It went something like tis:

"Kill the boilers. Drain, clean and check for repairs. This year they had to replace 12 fire tubes, acidize two boilers in the High School and re-brick the fire brick in both the Middle School and High School boilers.

"Pull all the furniture and start cleaning walls, floors, ceilings, light fixtures -- everything in the rooms.

"Strip, seal and wax all floors. Steam-clean the carpeting in the Elementary School.

"Scrub and clean all lockers.

"Screen all gyms, repaint lines on floor, reseal and rewax. One gym floor takes two weeks. This year the High School gym floor had to be resanded.

"De-fog all locker rooms.

"Clean and de-grease all cafeteria kitchens.

"Clean, paint, repair all windows, doors, roofs and other exterior parts.

"Keep up the lawns around all the buildings. Re-seed the football field and keep it watered and readied for fall sports.

"And as they go along, they repair everything that needs repairing -- locks, hooks, all those things. And replace parts like the cutters in pencil sharpeners."

If we had been able to talk with Doug Kuebler, superintendent of buildings and grounds, he probably could have added a lot more to the above list. However, he and his crews were very busy last week getting ready for school opening and he couldn't be found.

Space in three Charlevoix schools totals 145,378 square feet Largest is the Elementary School with 62,500 square feet, followed by the High School with 52,578 square feet and the Middle School with 30,300 square feet.

It cost $249,509 last fiscal year to maintain Charlevoix's schools. This included heating, equipment, supplies and salaries.

In addition to Kuelber, members of the custodial staff are George McKenzie at the High School, Jim Willis at the Middle School, and John Peterson at the Elementary School.

McKenzie's assistants are Don Potter, Mike Pearsall, and David Oshaben; Willis' assistants are Allen Dhaseleer, Jacquie Gurdon, Bernard Russell and James Woodward; Peterson's assistants are David Whitley, Henry Kulhawick, and Allen Bergmann.

Larry Lemerand works in all three schools, doing heavy, skilled work such as plumbing and boiler maintenance and repair.

During June and July four young people from the Federal Youth Corps also worked for the schools assisting regular employees doing maintenance and repair work.

NCMC to Offer New Business Course

North Central Michigan College and Lake Superior State College have jointly announced a program in business, that will allow students to complete a 3rd year at the community college. The so called 3+1 program will be offered in three fields of business, marketing management, and accounting specialist. For the most part, students will enroll in pre-planned NCMC classes the third year and then be able to complete a Bachelor's Degree in one additional year at the Sault Sainte Marie campus of Lake Superior State College.

At the same time as the above program was confirmed, it was also announced that Lake Superior State College would start offering upper division sources at North Central Michigan College. Courses from four colleges or universities will now be available at North Central Michigan College starting this fall.

Robert Vratanina, Dean of Instruction at NCMC, in making the announcement, stated that the implementation of the new program and the offering of upper level courses on campus will be of great benefit to persons seeking a BA degree. Students wanting more information may call Dean Robert Vratanina at NCMC.

Programs Expanded At Elementary, CHS

Each new school year brings some changes to the operation of the school district and the Charlevoix Public School District is no exception.

Some programs have been expanded, some new staff members have been added and some buildings have been switched around, James A. McKimmy, superintendent of schools, said.

An administrative assistant has been hired under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) to help coordinate the volunteer tutor program at the elementary school.

Charles Wright will be in charge of the volunteer program. He will develop learning objectives and activities for each student and he will try to bring together the best combination of parent tutor and student to work on the activities.

"Last year we had 52 parent volunteers who worked more than two hours per week at the elementary school with students that needed extra attention," McKimmy said. "They were a group of very effective, highly motivated volunteers and we hope to expand this program for the benefit of our students."

At the high school, the special education program has been expanded to accommodate the growth in enrollment in the program, McKimmy said. A part time teacher has been added to help with the expanded learning center program.

Another portable classroom has also been added to the row of portables at the high school, the superintendent said. The portable classroom was moved to the high school from the middle school to provide additional space for the increased number of students that will be attending the school this fall.

Three high school classes will also be held in the basement of the public library this year to accommodate the increased enrollment, he said.

McKimmy and Max Novak, board of education president, will also be busy outside the school district serving on special state board of education committees.

McKimmy will serve on the Blue Ribbon Task Force studying the role, relationship and funding of the intermediate school district.

Novak is serving on the state board of education Retirement Committee.

Hulls, Neffs Win Garden Club Award

Awards for Bicentennial garden plantings were made recently by the Charlevoix Garden Club to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hull, 801 Grant Street, and Mr and Mrs. Gordon Neff, 217 West Hurlbut Street.

Both gardens featured red, white and blue motifs to commemorate the Bicentennial. In making the announcement, the Garden Club noted that both winners had worked very hard to achieve the prize-winning effects.

The Garden Club also expressed appreciation to the downtown stores which have "spruced up" their fronts with flowers this summer.

As its own contribution to keeping Charlevoix beautiful, the Garden Club has been caring for the flower gardens at the Michigan Avenue triangle, the Mercer Boulevard plot, and at the post office.

St. Mary's Opens

St Mary's school, with an anticipated enrollment of approximately 100 students in the first through the sixth grade, will open for the 1976-77 school year at 9:00 a.m. Wednesday.

Students riding buses will board them at their usual stations.

Classes will begin at 9:00 a.m. and continue until 3:30 p.m.

Sister Josine Schafer, school principal, said the teaching staff will be the same as last year.

Mrs. Jeanne Dubey will teach the first and second grades; Sister Helen Jude, the third grade; John Gagnon, fourth grade; Sister Josine, fifth grade and Miss Kathy Ballew, sixth grade.

Students at St. Mary's school carry their lunch. They do not go to the high school, as reported earlier.

Health Dept. to Begin Nutrition Class

District Health Department No. 3 has been awarded a grant under the Women's, Infant's and Children's Supplemental Nutrition Program (WIC) to provide nutritional education and, through a coupon system, to provide foods for pregnant and nursing women, infants and children up to age five.

The grant will amount to approximately $100,000 annually and will serve 500 families. The Health Department will work with the Department of Social Services and other social service agencies to identify persons qualified for the program, which is based on financial need.

Charlevoix County and the surrounding area was designated a recipient of the funds because of statistics on births and pregnancies, including low birth weights and high fetal death rates.

Similar programs in other parts of the United States, and in Canada, have brought about drastic improvements in the health of babies and children, Gerald R. Chase, Health Department administrator, reports.

Susan Haertter, Bruce Meggison Wed

CHARLEVOIX–The deck at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy R. Haertter overlooking Little Traverse Bay formed the setting for the wedding of their daughter, Susan Ann, and Bruce William Meggison Saturday afternoon.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald B Meggison.

The Rev. Austin Regier of the United Methodist Church officiated at the double ring service in the presence of their immediate families.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length gown of ivory cotton fashioned with a V-neckline and long sleeves trimmed with crocheted lace for her wedding. Her Colonial bouquet was of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath and she wore a circlet of the same flowers in her hair.

LuAnn Wolschleger as her maid of honor wore a floor length gown of floral print on an ivory background. Her Colonial bouquet was also of white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath as was the circlet she wore in her hair.

Robert Holtzman assisted the bridegroom as best man.

Mrs. Haertter selected a floor length green floral print jersey gown and matching jacket for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Meggison, mother of the bridegroom, wore a floor length gown styled with an ivory blouse and multi-colored plaid skirt.

After a wedding trip through the Upper Peninsula, the couple will return to live at 1006 Bridge-st.

Both are graduates of Charlevoix High School. (Photography by Don Smith).

Five Charlevoix Youth Attend State 4-H Horse Meet

Five Charlevoix County Horse riders went head to head with the finest horsemen in the state recently and proved that they too are to be counted among the best. With only five horses out of 468, the Charlevoix County 4-Hers fought off stiff competition, large crowds, and sweltering August heat at the 4-H State Horse Show held on the campus of Michigan State University.

Award winners were: Cindy Crozier, Boyne City - Riding in Registered Quarterhorse 12 - 14 yrs. gold medal - Bicentennial costume class, 4th place - fitting and showmanship, 4th place - western pleasure; Jacalyn "Sassy" Alspaugh, Charlevoix--Riding in grade horses 15 - 18 yrs. silver medal - English equitation, 4th place - fitting and showmanship, 4th place - western pleasure; and Tim Clute, Boyne City - riding in grade horses 12 - 14 yrs. silver medal - reining, Bronze medal - sportsmanship award.

Also competing were Karen and Sarah McFall. They also turned in fine performances, but faced much stronger competition in their respective classes; Registered horses with western equipment, and English saddle seat.

The day was very exciting, Albert Grueling. The horsemen were up around 5:30 a.m., washing and grooming their horses. The show started at 8 and ran until 5 p.m. Most contestants arrived home around 11 p.m. These five people certainly deserve recognition and support by everyone for their accomplishments.

Mich. Discriminated Against In Disbursement of Funds

Figures bear out what local units of government and area residents have long suspected–Michigan and, in fact, all the Great Lakes states–is being discriminated against by the Federal government in the amount of tax money being returned to the state.

A survey by the National Journal shows that the Great Lakes states have a negative balance of payments to Washington of $18.6 billion–$62.2 billion paid in Federal taxes in 1975, with only $43.6 billion returned in total Federal outlays.

In contrast, the Southern states received back $11.5 billion more from Washington than they paid in taxes. California and other Pacific states emerged with a net favorable balance of $7 billion, and the Mountain States are $3.6 ahead.

On a "dollar returned for dollar paid" basis, this means that for each $1 residents and businesses of the five Great Lakes states pay in Federal taxes, they receive back only 70 cents in Federal outlays. The figure for the State of Michigan alone is smaller, only 65 cents.

For the Mid-Atlantic states the return is 83 cents, for New England 96 cents, for the Great Plains states 94 cents, for the Southern states $1.14, for the Pacific states $1.17, and for the Mountain States $1.30, or twice as much as far the State of Michigan.

This all means that the Federal government is underscoring and furthering the increasingly rapid movement of wealth in the nation–a shift benefitting most states with booming economies, but threatening to undermine the economic base of the country's older, industrialized Northeast quadrant.

"When the Northeast dominated the national economy, it made much sense in national party terms to pump Federal tax dollars into the South and West–to alleviate rural poverty, to build highways, across wide open spaces, to construct dams, to build military and space facilities where there's plenteous land and a favorable climate," the report states.

The question now is whether the spending flow ought to be reversed, or at least equalized, because so many Northeast quadrant states are on the economic ropes, hard put to finance essential local government services.

But will the older, industrialized states undertake concerted, unified action to stem the balance of payments deficit that is sapping their strength?

So far, only New England, through a strong congressional caucus and research office, has begun to press for new energy policies and Federal grant formula revisions that benefit the region. In the Mid-Atlantic region, Governor Huge Carey of New York is sparking an effort to form a coalition of governors to exert influence on Congress.

But the Great Lakes region, hardest hit by the imbalance of payments, seems not to recognize the problem at all, the report says.

FAITH LAYS THE FOUNDATION FOR GOOD CITIZENSHIP

The citizens of any free society may be native born or naturalized, but in either case good citizenship means obedience to the laws of the land, an interest in government at all levels which includes a willingness to participate in the election process, a generous community spirit, an active concern for the welfare of others and above all, a dedication to the never-ending task of maintaining the freedom with which we are blessed. Faith imparts the elements necessary to develop this kind of character, and the rules of conduct set forth in the Bible are the very requisites for good citizenship in any land. Keep these principles in practice by your regular attendance at the Church of your choice on the Sabbath.

"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God."

THE TOTAL STATE BUDGET DOLLAR - WHERE IT GOES:

All Other Programs	18c

HOW IS THE TAX MONEY you are sending to Lansing being spent? In order to illustrate graphically where the money goes, State Representative Ralph Ostling has "cut a pie" indicating the total amount allocated to each major state department and then breaks it down into parts of a dollar. He also shows the percentage which each tax source contributes to the state budget and breaks that down into parts of a dollar.

Area Opinions on Property Tax Sent to Lansing for Study

Testimony presented by Charlevoix County residents at the recent hearing on the Governor's Advisory Task Force on Property Tax Revision report has been incorporated into a statement of opinion being sent to Lansing by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

The statement discussed four major points in the report and makes two specific comments on recommendations contained in the report as follows:

"First, the residents of Charlevoix County ask that you limit state involvement in the property tax system. Let the local assessors and boards of review do their jobs, as these are the persons who can perform services at the level closest to the people paying taxes. We realize the state is needed as a balancing arm, but leaving as many services as possible in the hands of the local personnel is a must.

"Secondly, we support the use of more than just the sales approach in assessing property. There must exist some means of balancing sales with income potential and cost-less-depreciation methods. This, we feel, will ultimately yield a more equitable assessing process, and prevent the inflation of values common in a speculative land market such as Charlevoix County.

"Our third point involves the improvement of the state's role in the property tax system. If the state is to have a place in the process, either through a tribunal, a commission or some other format, the timing of appeals, the review methodology, the study techniques, and the criteria used must be clarified and made more consistent.

"The fourth major concern is with school funding. After much debate, we are of the opinion that not only should there be equalization of property values, but equalization of school aid as well. This can best be realized through a system of direct state aid, derived from sales, excise, income, and other taxes, based on a formula which includes average income levels, as well as relative SEV. Use of such a formula would recognize the inflated values being placed upon our land in the supply and demand marketplace, while most of the area's residents live on a low or middle income. This change would be most equitable and fair.

Our two specific comments relate to Recommendations No. 1 (simplification of tax laws and forms) and No. 2 (reducing property tax credits to $500 per household.) We wholeheartedly agree with the first recommendation, and hope your efforts lead to less confusion in utilizing this relief program.

"Equally as vigorously, we would suggest that Recommendation No. 2 is a step backward. Many persons residing in our county are long-time property owners with fixed or low incomes who need the higher exemption in order to retain their land. Loss of this would create a distinct hardship to these persons."

People Complain About Taxes, But Few Appeal

While most people complain about property taxes, very few go to the trouble of appealing them through State channels.

A recent survey by the County Equalization Department reveals that the evaluation on only 22 parcels of land in Charlevoix County was appealed to the State Tax Commission in 1973.

This was out of 17,771 parcels evaluated that year, or .12 percent of the total.

The State Tax Commission changed 11 of the evaluations and left 10 unchanged. The final figure on one appeal is not available.

There were 14 appeals on 1974 evaluations out of 18,695 parcels, or .07 percent.

Of these appeals, five resulted in lower evaluations, one remained the same, one withdrew the appeal, and seven have not yet been settled. However, three petitioners in the unsettled group did not show up for hearings and the appeals will probably be dismissed.

The County is aware of only 11 appeals for 1975. Two of them have been withdrawn, two were dismissed (one because the petitioner did not appear before the local Board of Review), and there is no report as yet from the state on the remaining seven.

Merely $25 Can Make You A World Traveler

By KEN WINTER

You don't need a million dollars to become a world traveler. Believe it or not, you can begin on $25.

For $25, you can ride a Canadian National train from Sarnia, Canada (across the Blue Water Bridge from Port Huron) to Toronto and then back to Windsor. For another $14, you can pick up a side trip to Niagara Falls.

And it can all be done in a weekend.

By leaving Charlevoix Friday night, you can drive to either Port Huron or Sarnia that night and be ready for one of several morning trains from Sarnia to Toronto. Round trip fare is $25.

In only a few hours you can be in Toronto in time for lunch and an afternoon of shopping.

If you're going before September 6, you can pick up the Canadian National Exhibition, which has everything from fair exhibits to grandstand shows starring everyone from Bob Hope to Lawrence Welk to Chicago and Bachman-Turner Overdrive.

Or, if you're a rail buff and want to ride a few more miles, you can get off at Toronto's Union Station and take a train to Niagara Falls for a late lunch and visit of the falls. A round trip ticket only costs $14 for adults and $7 for children.

If you decide to stay in Toronto, there are hundreds of stores and sightseeing musts.

One of the most popular and newest attractions is the CN Tower that opened this spring. At 1,815 feet; it's the tallest freestanding structure in the world. You can take an elevator to the revolving restaurant and outdoor observation decks, where they say you can see Buffalo.

Toronto's Dominion Centre is one of the best, with underground shopping concourses, restaurants, lounges and theatres.

Another popular spot is Ontario Place which boasts the world's largest movie screen plus a children's playground, a marian, name live entertainment in an outdoor amphitheatre and restaurants. Also permanently moored near the east island is the H.M.C.S. Haida, a Canadian destroyer which saw action in both World War Two and the Korean War.

Or you can hop aboard a ferry to the green side of the bay and explore the Toronto Islands, where you can hike or bike, rent a boat or canoe or walk along the beaches.

If you're interested in old architecture, you may even want to visit the old city hall, built in 1899, or one of Canada's finest 19th century buildings–St. Lawrence Hall.

Just about anything you might want to see in Toronto can be reached by either a local electric trolley or subway.

It takes a little getting used to, but you can walk Toronto's streets anytime of the day or night without fear of crime.

At night, one of the best spots to hit is Yonge Street–Toronto's downtown night spot–where there are blocks upon blocks of nightclubs, stores and restaurants.

And when you're done for the evening you can wander back to your hotel for a good night's rest or stay up even later and catch a popular movie on closed circuit television in your room.

A unique place to go, especially if you have kids, is The Old Spaghetti Factory, which is only a few blocks from the Union Station. From $2.25 to $4.25, you just about name any Italian dinner you can think of and end up with a four-course meal. Located in what resembles an old factory, the restaurant is filled with artifacts, junque and pieces of antiquity collected from Canada and parts of Europe.

Probably one of the best and most conveient places to stay is the Royal York Hotel that is only across the street or through a walkway tunnel from the train station. Two adults and two children can stay for $35 a night during the tourist season and for less during off seasons.

Not only is the Royal York one of Toronto's finest, it is also centrally located and makes everything in the downtown area within walking distance.

On Sunday afternoon, you can board the train back to Sarnia and be back to Charlevoix late Sunday night.

Or as an alternative trip, its possible to take a another train Sunday morning from Toronto and head for Detroit to catch a Tiger Baseball game. After the game, you only have to go a few blocks to catch an Amtrack and end up in Lansing, or later that night, in Port Huron. A ticket from Detroit to Lansing costs $10.75.

STARTING FROM THIS TRAIN station you can become a world traveler for $25.

For the privacy seeker. This three bedroom one and a half bath home offers all the advantages of one of Charlevoix's most unique areas. Close to Lake Michigan (2 blocks) and close to the city. Maximum privacy on this heavily wooded lot with it's own stream. This attractive package priced at $31,500.
